Local finalist for campaign finance job

Current director also from Newton

NEWTON - A Newton woman in the running for the directorship of the state Office of Campaign and Political Finance vows to take an aggressive "activist" approach if she is chosen above six other finalists.

Florence R. Rubin of Centre Street, a member of the national board of the League of Women Voters, said the person who is chosen as director "has to be forceful in carrying out responsibility."

"If the office is responsible for making information available to the public you certainly want to have the assurance that the (political candidates' campaign finance) records are as complete and accurate as possible," Rubin said Monday.

The current director of the Mass. Office of Campaign and Political Finance is Charles J. Doherty, also a Newton resident.

Doherty's term expires the end of February and he is not seeking reappointment.

All candidates for state office are required to file lists of campaign contributions and expenditures with Doherty's office, which is supposed to investigate their completeness and accuracy.

But since Doherty took office in 1976 he has forwarded few, if any, matters to the attorney general's office for prosecution.

Although Florence Rubin would not comment directly on Doherty's performance in office, she said if chosen for the post she would take an aggressive approach to educating political candidates about exactly what campaign expenditures must be reported and when such reports are due.

> 'I think this (state) office should be working vigorously to enforce the law and develop procedures that will help provide better information to the public in this important area.'
> Finalist Florence Rubin

"I think this office should be working vigorously to enforce the law and develop procedures that will help provide better information to the public in this important area," she told The Graphic on Monday.

Board stumbles on assessments left unguarded

NEWTON — A shocked and dismayed group of aldermen stumbled upon the long-awaited, new property assessments for city real estate Monday night on the floor in a City Hall committee room.

Aldermen found the values while exiting from the aldermanic chamber through the adjoining room after a meeting of the full board.

As aldermen swept through stacks of assessors' maps, Chief Assessor Harold Brady was alerted that the real estate values were left in an unlocked committee room.

Brady was in turn telephoned by Paul Coletti, the Revaluation Committee Chairman. Brady reportedly told Coletti: "Make sure those (the values) don't disappear; then we wouldn't be able to run the program."

Brady later returned a call to the committee room to inform aldermen that Assessor Robert Palmer would arrive at City Hall "to secure the assessment lists."

Several aldermen charged that the assessments being left out on the floor in the public room was incompetent and unprofessional.

St. Jean's may receive a boost

NEWTON — The Nonantum Children's Christmas Party Association has offered to donate $6,000 to St. Jean's school in hopes of saving the financially troubled parochial school from closing next year.

> Parents 'could have done more' with more time but association's offer could help Nonantum school open in the fall.

Pellegrini is the well-known head of the association which for 82 years has given a Christmas party, parade and toys to area children (this year nearly 2000 children).

But, members of the Parish Council, who voted 17-1 in November to recommend closing the school have not accepted the offer which brightened many parents' hopes for saving the school. The offer was also not listed in a report on the possible closing of the school as required by the archdiocese.

Although the report was due Monday, the pastor of the church, Fr. Francis Lebrund, said he had not turned it in yet or made a recommendation as head of the parish.

According to Diane Donnellan, a member of the Ad Hoc Committee formed by the Parish Council to compile the report, the committee was split 6-6 in favor of closing the school and keeping it open another year to give parents a chance to prove they can boost enrollment despite higher tuitions.

Donnellan, chairperson of St. Jean's School Board and a member of the Parish Council, said she feels the money was offered by the Nonantum organization in "good faith" and that she would vote to accept it.

"I'd say fine. I'd accept it in a minute," she said. "I feel that he (Pellegrini) came forward with that money in good faith."

Following a registration week held recently at the school, Donnellan said parents "could have done a lot more" if they had more time, but still got 67 people, including new parents, to put down a $150 deposit for next year per child.

This year the school has 133 students enrolled and many parents believe they can boost the figure to 200 if they are given more time.

"What I've been saying to parents and what I really feel is that I would like to see them give the parents at least a chance to show them what they can do,"

'Unique' energy loans offered now

NEWTON Newton residents now have the unique opportunity to make home energy improvements with loans at a reduced interest rate as the result of a landmark cooperative effort by a city volunteer advisory board, public and private agencies and local banks.

The $250,000 Newton Housewarming Energy Savers Loan Program – what is hoped to serve as an example of how communities can utilize private business resources to help alleviate federal cutbacks – began Tuesday with the presentation of the first loan check to the Derry family of Newton which they will use to have insulation and storm windows installed in a large, old Victorian home.

The loan program was developed by volunteers serving on the Newton Citizens Commission on Energy with the support of BayBank Middlesex, Home Town Bank and Guaranty-First Trust Com-

Board rejects legal fees

Ossinger's bid nixed

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city will not pay a $50,000 legal bill for Mayor Theodore Mann's former secretary if aldermen have their way.

The Board of Aldermen Monday night rejected Diana Ossinger's request for city payment of her legal fees resulting from her trial on charges of stealing approximately $24,000 from the mayor. The vote was 17 to 5.

Ossinger, Mann's secretary for eight years, was fired in March 1980 after a police investigation and acquitted later that year of cashing 44 of Mann's paychecks at the City Hall Treasurer's office.

NEWTON — An angry and bitter Diana Ossinger Monday stood outside the office where she was once a secretary for Mayor Theodore Mann and vowed to fight "as long as it takes" to get her $50,000 in legal bills and other damages paid by the city.

Responding to a vote by aldermen denying to pay her legal bills, the West Newton woman acquitted of stealing $24,000 from Mann said: "He (Mann) talks about being a rape victim. I was just raped by the Board of Aldermen - an irresponsible board."

Several times, Mann has stressed that he never accused Ossinger of stealing the cash and compared his plight to that of a rape victim.

'Rail fans' are on the main track

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON HIGHLANDS— David Derow remembers when he was a little boy, the old Boston and Albany railroad, passing through the Highlands, rattled his house as it approached.

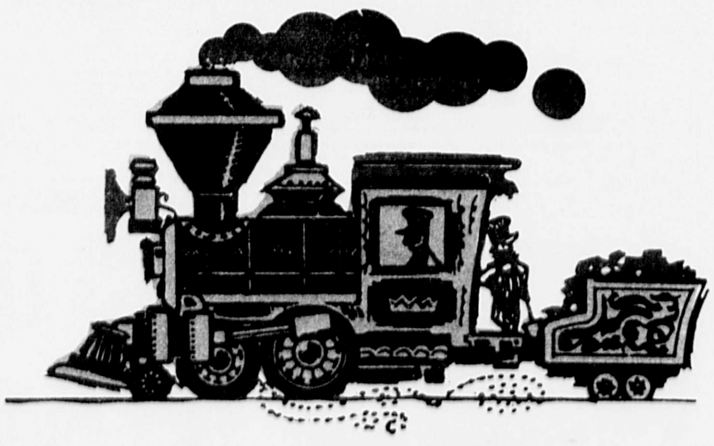
"I grew up with the Boston and Albany. My earliest memories are of dashing to close the windows as the train was coming because we were right on the track," says Derow, who enthusiastically dubs himself a "rail fan."

> 'All of a sudden I just woke up one day when I was a little kid and I just loved trains.'

Derow, now a grown man with a successful engineering career, still has a childlike facination with roaring locomotives. He's not the only one. Twice a month, several hundred railroad fans flock to the Newton Highlands Congregational Church, to discuss their favorite subject- trains.

"One of our primary interests is to promote railway travel," says Derow, vice-president of Massachusetts Bay Railroad Enthusiasts, a diversified group of 450 members."We also want to increase public awareness of the rail system."

In addition to the groups bimonthly meetings in the Highlands, members take railroad excursions, via the Boston and Maine or Amtrack, throughout New England, where they hope to see the railroad industry grow.



"We're very interested in the Boston and Maine, and recreating the New England railway system," Derow points out. "Most of the members feel there is a future for the industry here."

School board seeking legal opinion

'Chilling effect' is feared

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The School Committee has asked for an opinion from the city's legal department on releasing names of applicants for the Newton North High principalship, while committee members and other residents pondered their own stands on the issue.

The move for a legal opinion followed Superintendent Aaron Fink's refusal to release the names of any of the 96 applicants for the position which currently pays over $41,000 a year to Principal Richard Mechem, who will retire at the end of the school year.

Fink said last week he would release the names of the estimated six finalists but reneged when told The Newton Graphic planned to publish profiles of those finalists.

Several School Committee members questioned about Fink's withholding of the names backed the superintendent.

"I don't believe the School Committee wants to disobey the law," Chairman Nancy Mann said. "But, I think that there are at least some members of the School Committee who would prefer not to release the names (for the principalship) so as not to inhibit people from applying.

Mann said she is "worried" that disclosure would create "a chilling effect" on people applying for positions because of fear that current positions might be jeopardized.

School Committeeman Robert Ricles agreed and said, "As far as I know, the Privacy Act is every bit as strong as the Freedom of Information Act."

"I'm not going to disobey the law," Committeewoman Ann Berwick said. "As best as I can tell, the legality of that position (releasing names) is unclear. If the law is unclear, I will do what is best from a policy standpoint– which is to protect the confidentiality of those applicants."

Committee member Katherine Jones said, "I have very strong feelings that the privacy of the individual has to be protected at all costs and I'm speaking not only as a School Committee person, but also as a

Astronaut in school: 'Excellent'

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — When Franklin Chang went back to school Monday morning, everything he did was rated "Excellent!" by a group of awestruck elementary students as he explained his job to them.

But, that is because Chang is what many kids dream of being – an astronaut.

Although Chang tried to give simple explanations of the space shuttle training program to questions from the young audience at Franklin Elementary, there was no breaking down his mystique as he was introduced wearing his blue flight suit.

Chang, who has a daughter in the school, came all the way from Houston, Texas, where he is in NASA's training program, to talk about space travel and the rigorous training program he and 78 other astronauts are undergoing as part of future plans for NASA's space shuttle.

"We are right now in the middle of testing the space shuttle and we expect to have flights very often," Chang told the students. "The idea is that someday very near in the future, people like you can...think of going to work in space."

A graduate of MIT in mechanical engineering and plasma physics, Chang said his training program involves "a lot of flying" on T38's with practice in simulated emergency situations as well as rapid landings and takeoffs.

In explaining the T38 planes which he flies with another pilot, Chang put on his parachute gear and showed the children all of its safety devices, including a life preserver which inflates instantly and an oxygen supply tank which is sometimes needed "when you fly real high up."

The planes he flies have two cockpits and both pilots are strapped into ejection seats which sort of take the worry out of emergency situations, according to the easy-going scientist.

"It's very nice because you don't really have to worry very much about trying to get out in case of an emergency," Chang said of the ejection device.

The students oohed and aahed as Chang went through the pockets of his flame-resistant flight suit, pulling out some gadgets which may seem ordinary anywhere else. A small flashlight which can be used as a signaling device delighted the youngsters, but so did Chang's gloves, "books" of airports' landing facilities, checklists, and maps.

When asked why he became an astronaut, Chang said, "Well, I wanted to do this for a long time, ever since I was a little kid. So, I worked for that and finally got there."

Astronaut Franklin Chang

"It's a great job. I love it!" he told the students.

Chang said his flying sessions usually last two hours. Most of the time the astronauts practice formations and aerobatics. Rapid runway approaches from 25,000 feet to 40 feet, then hovering above the runway and quickly taking off again are also part of his routine.

The training also means being in good physical shape and Chang said he does a lot of running. A "strict" yearly physical exam is required of the astronauts in the program who are mostly in their 30's.

"The oldest is about 55," he said, "and I am one of the younger ones."

According to Chang, there are really two kinds of astronauts: pilots from the military and scientists. "I think the scientists really have more fun," he said.

'No promises' on next year's school budget

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The School Committee is making no promises that the school's bottom line budget for next year will reflect the city's request for a 4.5 percent cut by all departments.

"We have not given the superintendent a bottom line figure," newly-elected Chairperson Nancy Mann told members of the Aldermanic Human Services Committee in a meeting at City Hall Wednesday night.

"We have just asked him to bring in the tightest educationally defensible budget," she said.

As the new Chairman of Human Services, Rodney Barker, a former Hyde School PTA President, set up the meeting with the School Committee to start budget discussions off on a tone of cooperation between the two bodies.

Under Proposition 2 ½ the School Committee lost fiscal autonomy to the Board of Alderman. Barker and other members of Human Services want the school officials to know they are "advocates" for education.

"It seems to me," Barker said, "that it is going to be very important – as a committee that will hopefully come out of this as advocates of schools – that we're well informed."

According to Mann, one reason why the school budget may come in actually higher than last year's $37.8 million is that, unlike municipal department budgets, the School Department is planning to include collective bargaining in its salary figure.

"The School Committee has voted in executive session to play a certain amount of money in our budget for collective bargaining and I don't want to go into that at this point," Mann said. "We think it will work better."

Ald. Lisle Baker said he felt such a school budget leaves the Board of Alderman with a political hot potato of then deciding how to balance all department budgets. Baker said that if other departments present budgets with a 4.5 percent cut and the schools come in higher, alderman would be in the difficult position of deciding who should absorb the difference.

Superintendent Aaron Fink is expected to present an overview of the budget on Feb. 11 at a 7:45 p.m. meeting at Bigelow Jr. High.

The final vote is expected March 22 following a March 15 public hearing.

Smoke detectors mandatory

NEWTON— Fire inspectors have begun checking homes and buildings for approved smoke detectors, according to Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly.

In accordance with a new state law, installation of smokes detectors is now required prior to the sale or transfer of ownership of all homes and buildings in the city.

As of Jan. 1, 1982, Massachusetts State Law, Chapter 148, stating that one and two family homes must install a smoke detector on the ceiling of each all level, became effective. The law also states that in buildings with three or more units, a smoke detector should be installed in all common areas, including stairwells and corridors, as well as within each individual unit.

"Early detection is much more important that early response," said the chief, who stressed that there has never been a fire fatality in a Newton home when a smoke detector was present.

According to Reilly, 11 pieces of property have been inspected by fire officials since Jan. 1 and 15 more inspections are scheduled. "We anticipate 1500 real estate sales and transfers," said Reilly.

There is a $10 fee for the inspection, which should be arranged 48 hours in advance with inspectors in the fire prevention bureau. For further information, call the bureau at 552-7275.

Board rejects request

The West Newton woman claims she was illegally fired and has filed a $1.1 million lawsuit against the city to regain her former position or a sizable financial settlement.

Ossinger made the request for city payment of legal bills after aldermen voted to pick up a $10,000 legal tab for Mann's defense in the $1.1 million lawsuit. The $10,000 payment to Mann's Boston attorney, Edward Barshak, has been halted by a restraining order. A court hearing is scheduled later this week on the $10,000 bill.

A proposed resolution requesting Mann initiate the $50,000 appropriation for Ossinger's legal bills was denied by a 16 to 6 vote. The 24-member legislative body does not have the authority to initiate funding requests under the city charter.

A stern faced Ossinger watched with a group of friends as aldermen debated the request. At one point, a remark by one aldermen prompted Ossinger to yell from a spectator bench in the City Hall chamber: "Read the (law) suit."

Several aldermen speculated that an appropriation request would only be ignored by Mann and was unrealistic. Others argued that the board did not have the power to fund the request and should follow the advice of city attorneys.

"Do you expect the mayor to comply with this resolution?" asked Alderman Robert Tennant. "I don't think there is a lawyer in the world that would have him comply with this."

Several aldermen maintained it was discriminatory and unfair to pay for Mann's legal bills and ignore the Ossinger request.

"Just because one is a mayor and the other is a clerk we should not draw a line," asserted Alderman Richard McGrath. "We should decide this on its merits."

Alderman Richard Bullwinkle called for the mayor to forge a compromise in the legal battle and "put this behind us (aldermen) and the city."

Aldermen voted the $10,000 for Mann's private attorney last December under an ordinance that insures city officials for up to $1 million in civil rights suits.

Finalist for state office vows aggressive stand

"I hope that the commission (which chooses Doherty's replacement) selects a director who is an activist by nature and training, a good administrator, someone who knows how state government works and is committed to public service," she said in her application for the job.

The job currently pays Doherty just under $25,000 per year. The commission to name Doherty's replacement, which includes Secretary of State Michael Connolly; state GOP Chairman Rep. Andrew Natsios; state Democratic Chairman Chester Atkins; and Boston College School of Law Dean Richard Huber, planned to meet today (Wednesday, Feb. 3) to study the qualifications of the seven finalists, with interviews planned for later in the week, a spokesman for Connolly's office said Friday.

A number of state officials, including Secretary of State Connolly, have questioned Doherty's accomplishments during the six years which he has held the job.

Doherty has reportedly maintained that the director's responsibilities involve education, rather than enforcement of existing campaign finance laws.

In 1981 Ottoway News Service reported Doherty never investigated when a 24-year-old Holyoke senatorial candidate claimed over $21,000 of his campaign kitty came from personal funds. And the director never checked up on former Sen. James Kelly (D-Oxford), who repeatedly filed reports listing annual contributions totalling $25 or $50.

Rules governing the director's position also mandate the person holding the job promulgate rules and regulations, audit candidates' financial reports and investigate questionable campaign finance practices.

In her written statement included in her job application Rubin said, "The promulgation of rules is essential to clarify the language of the statute and to provide guidance for candidates in how to comply with the law."

"The rules should set out a formal procedure for issuing and assembling interpretative statements and advisory opinions," she wrote.

Rubin said that although the office does not have power to impose sanctions on political candidates, "The director's authority to initiate investigations, backed up by subpoena power and the authority to present evidence of alleged violations to the attorney general, represents considerable enforcement strength that the office could and should be using."

Noting that "most candidates are honest and want to do the right thing, Rubin said the state office needs "a strong public information program to educate both candidates and the general public about the commonwealth's campaign finance laws and the functions of the office."

She said in her statement she felt "a vigorous office of Campaign and Political Finance that did its job well would help restore public trust in elected officials and in our political system. Such an office would be good for most candidates as well as for the public."

Florence Rubin was one of 12 Newton residents who applied for the job of director of Campaign and Political Finance with a total of 160 applications received in all. Eighteen women applied for the position but Rubin is the only woman among the seven finalists.

Victim in intensive care

Man booked after alleged hit and run

NEWTON— A Newton man was charged with drunk driving and leaving the scene of an accident in connection with an alleged hit and run accident which left a Brookline man hospitalized Wednesday night.

Jonathan Earthrowl, 24, formerly of Newton and now a resident of West Roxbury, was arrested by police officers in Newton at 7:14 p.m. and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and leaving the scene of an accident after personal injury.

Arnold Paris, 62, of 100 Columbia St., Brookline, was listed in "stable condition" in Newton-Wellesley Hospital's Intensive Care Unit last week.

He was admitted after being treated in the emergency unit for a fractured skull and head lacerations.

According to police, a witness standing in front of the Newton Centre Cinema said she saw a red Ford Maverick, traveling east on Beacon Street, strike Paris, who fell to the ground.

The witness told police that the driver stopped his car, looked at Paris and then left the scene. The witness took the registration number and police later went to Earthrowl's home, where police reported the car was parked in front of the home.

Police said that the suspect was glassy-eyed and an odor of alcohol was on his breath. Earthrowl was placed under arrest by Officer Frank Gorgone. Police officers later administered an intoxilizer test to Earthrowl, which measured .18, according to police. In Massachusetts a reading of .10 is legally considered intoxicated.

Drunk driving arrest

According to police, Officer David Devaney was routinely checking the area around 91 Washington St., Newton Corner at 11 p.m. when a brown, 1974 Cadillac struck him. Devaney escaped serious injury by jumping onto the hood of his cruiser. He was treated at Newton-Wellesley Hospital for minor bruises and abrasions he received when he rolled off the hood and later released.

According to police, the operator of the car was driving recklessly. Chief of Police William Quinn said the driver was probably a drunk driver.

Devaney told fellow police officers that the first letter of the license plate is F. Police officers in surrounding cities and towns were told to be on the lookout for the driver as several Newton police officers searched the area for the suspect.

Police are searching for two suspects following an armned robbery Thursday at a Newton Centre clothing store.

According to police, a black man and black woman entered Our Wish, 80 Langley St, about 10 a.m. and browsed through the store for approximately 15 minutes. The man then pointed a long barrel handgun at the cashier and took a small amount of cash and $100 worth of clothing.

The suspects were described as a black male, 30-years-old, thin build, short hair and wearing a long, black coat, and a black female, in her 20's, 5'4" tall, 130 lbs., wearing a long, black coat and black boots.

A juvenile was arrested Thursday afternoon and charged with breaking and entering in the daytime in connection with a housebreak on Stanely Road, Upper Falls.

According to police, two occupants returned home at 3:20 p.m. and saw a boy leaving the house. Police said the paned glass of a rear door was broken.

Police officers Richard Toli, Richard Murphy, George Stolpinski and LT. James Cox searched the area and found the suspect.

Five business offices inside a Washington Street office building were reported broken into Thursday morning, according to police.

The breaks allegedly occurred sometime during the previous night when intruders jimmied the doors of the three businesses and opened windows of two offices, according to police. Petty cash was taken from two of the offices.

Aldermen approve funding to study Hyde School options

NEWTON — Monies for an architectural feasibility study on the future reuse options of the damaged section of the Hyde Elementary School in Newton Highlands were approved by aldermen Monday night.

The Wellesley architectural firm of Kubitz and Pepi will receive from the city $10,000 to recommend one of five alternatives for the Lincoln Street school.

On April 25, 1981, a fire destroyed the third floor of the older building causing $845,000 worth of damage. The city has been paid about $630,000 from the insurers (after the $100,000 deductible).

According to the School Committee, the school needs to locate 5,000 square feet of additional space to provide for the educational needs of the Hyde School children. About 12,000 square feet were destroyed in the spring fire.

The study of options will consider whether to renovate the fire-damaged building for use in whole or in part as a school; build an addition to one of the two other buildings; or rehabilitate the other buildings to accommodate the needed space.

Building Commissioner Alan Fraser claims that the additonal space can be found within the existing Hyde School structure.

Highlands Council to eye Hyde options

HIGHLANDS — The Newton Highlands Neighborhood Area Council will hold a public meeting to discuss the design and use options for the Hyde School on Tuesday, Feb. 9 at 8 p.m. in the Parish Hall, Newton Highlands Congregational Church, 58 Lincoln St.

The council's meeting is one part of an ongoing effort to ensure broad citizen participation in the decisions about the various use alternatives for the school and their impact on the Highlands community.

St. Jean's receives offer of support

Donnellan stressed. "You can't do it in a month. You've got to have more time."

"The time frame was terrible anyway," she said, "especially asking parents to come up with $150 (for a registration downpayment) for next year at this time of the year with Christmas and other bills."

"I think that says a lot for the faith they have in the school," Donnellan said.

She said she knows of many people who have called her since parents launched a publicity drive this month. However, she said parents want a guarantee that the pre-kindergarten-through-8th-grade school will stay open before enrolling their children.

"There has got to be at least 30-40 people who will register their kids if the school stays open," she said.

But, Donnellan said emphatically, "We don't want an extension!"

"We either want a guarantee it will stay open or tell us its going to close. We have to know one way or the other, but don't keep us going like this because it is terrible.

Despite the 55-year-old school's current anticipated deficit of $56,000 by the end of this school year, Donnellan believes the school will survive its current crisis and remain open.

"My gut feeling is that we're all going to be there in the fall," she said confidently. "It's a very special place. It's a special school."

"I expected they (aldermen) would take this action," she said. "They don't have the guts to act on this."

Ossinger said that aldermen's rejection of her request is an indication that the city refuses to settle the $1.1 million lawsuit she has brought against Mann.

"I think I made it clear the other night if they settled I would drop the suit," she told reporters referring to a Finance Committee meeting last week. "I made the effort to go forward and settle. It is their (aldermen's) responsibility now."

Ossinger charged that most aldermen passed the request off as a "joke."

Public should ask for at least a peek

Several members of the Newton School Committee interviewed this week agreed with Superintendent Aaron Fink's decision to withhold the names of finalists for the Newton North High principal's job pending an opinion from the city legal department.

Last week Fink initially agreed to release the names of six or so finalists to the press but when told The Graphic planned to publish profiles of the six, Fink reneged, preferring to seek legal counsel before going further.

Several interesting revelations have come from this standoff between Superintendent Fink and current state laws which favor release of names of candidates for government jobs.

For one it seems many School Committee members have little knowledge of public records laws in Massachusetts. To their credit, a number of them did say they were concerned that public disclosure of finalists' names would have a "chilling effect", possibly discouraging qualified candidates from applying for fear they might draw criticism from current employers.

Another revelation appears to be considerable trust by School Committee members in a selection process which is completely controlled by the superintendent and, except for 23 ad hoc committee members, completely shuts out the press and public from the process.

It is equally surprising that the simple suggestion about written profiles of finalists - their philosophies of education, reasons for wanting to come to the Newton schools and a listing of their essential credentials - draws such reservations from the committee.

Citing a spokesman for the Mass. Association of School Committees, the neighboring weekly Wellesley Townsman last week said that, unlike Newton, most school boards conduct public interviews of candidates for top positions.

The public should ask for at least a peek at the process. It is not only a right, by law. It is also proper.

A time for decision

Newton South High School's Enrichment Program has sponsored a wide range of speakers this year who addressed topics as far-reaching as cults, the Mideast and the Moral Majority.

Now, in a program initiated by students concerned about the growing potential of nuclear confrontation, South is hosting a week of education on the nuclear arms race.

Starting Feb. 8 with a presentation by Dr. Helen Caldicott of Newton, the students of South and the community can address this global concern.

The escalation of the arms race is an issue from which no one can escape. You may be for it, from the position of building a strong defense for America and the free world. Or you may be against it, taking the view that continued escalation virtually guarantees eventual use of the weapons stockpiles.

Nuclear education week at Newton South may just be the time for open discussion, education about the complexities of this issue and maybe, a time for decisions for those who attend.

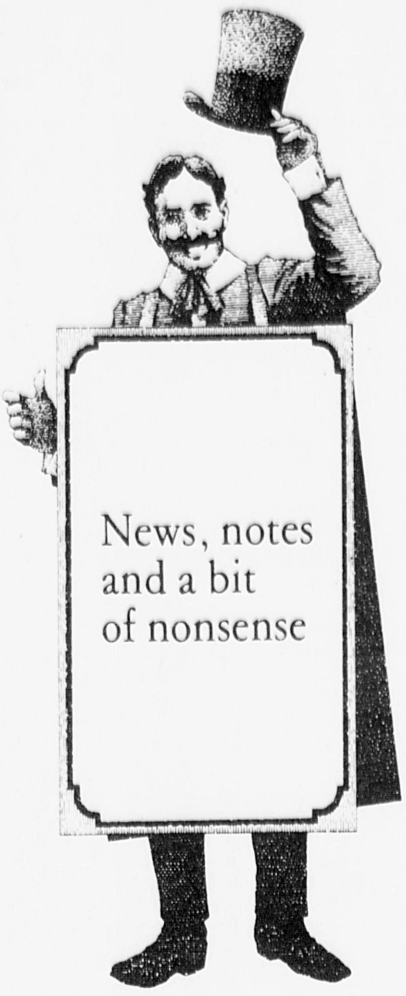
Graphically speaking

It's a bird, it's a plane, it's...



Up in the sky

We can't exactly say Governor Ed King dropped into Newton last week. Maybe he dropped out?

The governor was in the city for a private appearance early Thursday morning. After that date he drove to the Ward School playground where the State Police helicopter was waiting for him.

As one advance man on the scene noted, the chopper transfer of the chief exec wasn't exactly "an announced media event" but word had leaked out at the school and a couple dozen kids were waiting on the front steps to watch the governor fly away.

By the time Gov. King arrived the kids had gotten cold and gone inside but King waved jovially, shook a few hands and hopped into the chopper for a trip to Worcester.

After all the heat Gov. King got following a Boston Herald American article scrutinizing his private use of the state chopper, one has to ask whether or not the stop in Newton was along the campaign trail.

The only evidence, perhaps, lies in the two "Make it in Massachusetts" pens proferred by the advance man to a reporter.

Stand in the corner

A resident at the same meeting gave the entire Finance Committee a verbal licking for their "rude" behavior, noting the many conversations going on while people were speaking and the "attitude" of many aldermen.

Finance Committee Chairman Edward Richmond responded: "How do you think I feel I'm the chairman."

Maybe Richmond should discipline those who misbehave by making them stand in a corner like all bad school boys in disgrace. That just may get some "graphic" results.

A southern exposure

State Rep. Susan Schur, bronzed from a well-deserved two-week holiday in the West Indies, came back to Newton recently looking about three shades darker than the natives she represents.

Against a backdrop of pale, white faces, Alderman Richard McGrath had no problem pulling his former board collegue from the crowd attending last Wednesday night's Public Facilities Committee meeting.

Quipped McGrath: "How does a legislator who spends all her time on Beacon Hill have such a tan this time of year?"

Schur could only respond to McGrath's outspoken envy by informing her former Ward 5 constituients that her body had just been exposed to a change in temperature of more than 110 degrees.

Not surprisingly, none of the more than 35 people at the meeting lent Schur a shoulder.

With proper credentials

Maudyea M. Campbell of Newton, a GOP state committeewoman from the Newton-Brookline senatorial district, has been named by State Committee Chairman Rep. Andrew Natsios to serve on the Registration and Arrangements Committee for the Republican Pre-primary Convention. She was also named to the Credentials Committee for the convention, which is slated for March 6 at the Sheraton Boston Hotel.

Ms. Campbell is going to be busier than ever since she as chairman of the Newton Cultural Affairs Commission, she's is currently working to update the Guide to Newton Resources.

In that capacity she is asking any organization wishing to be included to send its name, address, phone number, name of contact person and a brief statement of purpose to the Commission, City Hall, 1000 Commonwealth Ave., Newton Centre, 02159.

Marking time

Once upon a time, not long ago...

By Mark White

Once upon a time there was a kingdom. Lots of people lived in the kingdom and most of the people owned homes.

There were big homes and little homes, new homes and old homes.

But there was trouble in the kingdom because everybody didn't pay the same taxes. Those with big homes paid less than some of those with small homes and those with new homes paid a lot more than those with old homes.

Some people got angry and complained to the throne. But the King ignored them. Then the people complained to the Tribunal and the Tribunal told the King that the people were right and that everyone should be taxed fairly.

So the King called in King Cole-Layer of Trumble to make sure that everyone was taxed fairly. But Old King Cole fouled up the job and when the people saw his report they rioted.

They took over the castle and became an angry mob. In order to placate the people the King said he would have it done again.

But nothing happened. The King waited and waited and waited and the people were still taxed unfairly.

Then the High Priest Council passed an order that said the King had to tax all the people fairly within one year.

But the King was worried. He knew he had to tax the people fairly, but if somebody did the same job as Old King Cole, the people might revolt and force him off the throne.

So he summoned his Royal Assessors and told them to prepare to tax the people fairly. But some of the assessors abdicated their position and some were even executed! And so the people were still taxed unfairly.

When the year was up, the King returned to the High Priest Council and asked for another six months and he returned every six months for another extension. And the people continued to be taxed unfairly.

Finally, the High Priest Council told the King they would not tolerate any further delay, ordered the King to revalue within a year and told him no more extensions would be granted.

The King summoned his advisors. He knew he had to reform the tax assessments but he was still worried that the people might riot. Furthermore, he had no assessors. Each assessor had left and the position became so dangerous that the King couldn't find anybody to assume this frightful task.

Finally, he found one who would take the position, Sir Hank of Brady.

Sir Hank began to comply with the order but the job was coming too slow. There were too many houses to value and the Knights of the Board of Aldermen were unhappy with the whole situation.

> The King knew he had to reform the tax assessments but he was still worried the people might riot.

So Sir Hank went to the King and told the King that he and his nobles couldn't comply with the order and that he needed help.

The King told Sir Hank to search the Kingdom and find somebody to do the job. But Sir Hank couldn't find anyone. All the famous people in the Kingdom told him the job couldn't be done but Sir Hank kept looking.

Finally Sir Hank found Sir Finnegan, the White Knight – the only one who would take the job. Sir Finnegan had very little experience. However, he had new, modern machines which would help him do the job. But Sir Finnegan wanted a lot of money.

Some of the knights of the Board, particularly Sir McGrath of the fiefdom of Auburndale and his colleagues Sir Dominic the wise old wizard and Sir DePasquale, the usually "silent knight" warned that the Kingdom shouldn't hire Sir Finnegan but the King persuaded the other knights that if they didn't hire Sir Finnegan, disaster would surely strike the Kingdom.

So the Kingdom did hire Sir Finnegan. The revaluation was completed. And everybody lived happily ever after...or did they?

(Don't forget to read the next chapter when Sir Finnegan tells the poeple of the Kingdom the amount of their assessments and the people revolt. Sounds a bit like the first chapter. Doesn't it?)

'Enjoy' it urged

By Bernice Bennett

My old standing love affair has ended. We came to a parting of the ways. Our last evening was spent listening to gypsy music in soft candlelight. Together, we had charged our way up and down the New England coast and through Canada, too.

Brandishing It before the faces of proprietors only too willing to aid and abet those wonderful escapades of ours, went my "Key to the Kingdom of Heaven" and I. But...It became too demanding and always pressing for his evergrowing reward. It hung on for dear life – would not reason. I tried to beg off - - It retaliated!

"Enjoy! Enjoy!" It shrilled.

"But, please, some restraint," I pleaded.

"Shut up and listen! Live it up, for tomorrow you may die; you only go this way once."

The attraction was wearing thin with this deceitful plastic friend of mine.

"Remember:" It said, "you owe me! The fan belt that snowy evening, the operation for Henri at Poodles Paradise, the shoe that broke – you couldn't walk, the umbrella you bought on that stormy day. So...BUY – BUY – MORE AND BETTER!"

"No, no, please," I feebly asked.

Again, together, we set out for new conquests! Was there any shopping mall we didn't visit?

However, It was never there when I needed him. Every month, "Doomsday" came and went without help from It.

I'm over It now...It can't reach me anymore. The thrill of It's touch has slowly ebbed out of my pores and a new love has taken It's place; one I had rejected many cards ago. He is pertinent; he is prudent; he is continent. His name is George. He does not ask for or want compensation. Yes, he leaves me, but he always finds his way back...to comfort me and to infuse new strength and love into my being.

Blind allegiance? 'Say it isn't so'

To the editor:

In a recent letter to the editor, Aida Press, recording secretary of the Newton Democratic City Committee, in consternation at the current 4th Congressional redistricting plan, brands it as a cynical disregard for the best interests of the people and a callous injustice to Congressman Barney Frank.

This may or may not be true.

But in expanding on this "injustice" the writer presses the point with the following incredible remark: "At a time when the fortunes of the Democratic Party are at a low ebb, every vote against the programs of President Reagan is needed in Congress."

Alas, for the countless millions of loyal, dedicated American citizens who have been instilled from childhood with the "naive" belief that elected representatives of either party are expected to vote on the issues and not for or against a bill through blind allegiance to a particular party.

The end justifies the means - gospel by Aida?

Please, Aida, at least for the good citizens of Newton, young and old, say it isn't so!

News analysis

A parking garage in every village?

By Bruce Abele

In the near future the Newton Building Commissioner will be making what will prove to be one of the most important decisions in the city's history - whether or not to issue a permit for the building of Ronald Druker's multistoried parking garage in a Business A zoned portion of Newton Corner.

Look what is happening to Newton Corner: Druker proposed a massive housing, office, parking and retail complex that when carefully examined exceeded several zoning guidelines. The proposal required aldermanic approval, received strong opposition from the residential and business neighborhood, and after considerable debate was denied.

> Contesting a 'pro-garage' decision requires considerable time and effort. It is unlikely in our other village, garage situations people will be found who can and will give that amount of time to the problem.

On the west block the new proposal drops the housing but keeps the same amount of office and retail space. The parking garage is slightly smaller and is now proposed for the southern and eastern perimeters of the municipal parking lot instead of actually being on the lot itself. On the east block the housing has been replaced with about 60,000 sq. ft. of office space, retail space is reduced to about a quarter of the original plan, and the parking has been increased about 25 percent. By making these changes the project is said to no longer require aldermanic approval. I disagree.

Any of several straightforward interpretations of the zoning ordinances clearly indicate that no type of large parking garage can be built in a Business A zone. These interpretations are consistent with zoning goals, for Business A is the zone that generally abuts residential districts, and large parking garages more than anything else allow big steps in increased density and intensity of use.

Unfortunately, even though the contention of illegality may be correct, it is quite plausible the Druker garage will end up being built. The process goes like this:

The building cmmissioner has been notified of the contention of illegality. However, past practice (which has not been contested or appealed) and his inclination (as of last summer) tend to indicate he will issue the permit.

The matter can then be appealed to the Zoning Board of Appeals.

However, to override a decision of the commissioner requires a vote of four of the five members of the board which may be difficult. Although this board appears committed otherwise, there has been some criticism of past boards for not strictly following legal guidelines.

If the necessary votes don't come from the ZBA, the matter can be appealed to the Superior Court. However, delays, possible requirements for an injunction and more complex procedures make this step of the appeal process difficult.

In general it appears the appeal process is cumbersome, has a pro-garage bias, and could be very expensive. It can't be relied on for protection.

A few words on the structure of Newton zoning are necessary to understand the legal intricacies of the situation.

Newton is divided into 12 districts. They vary in density from the lowest density Single Residence A to the very intensively used Manufacturing district. The districts are divided into four groups: Single Residence, Residence, Business, and Manufacturing.

For each district the ordinance lists a number of uses referred to "as-a-right" which can be entered into without aldermanic approval. In Business A, for example, office, bank, barbershop, theater and bakery activities can be carried out without permission of the board. In addition there are listed a set of uses which may be entered into only with approval from the Board of Aldermen called Special Permit uses. There are several ways of labeling Druker's multistoried garage and each requires a slightly different interpretation of the new ordinance. However, they all lead to similar conclusions: Namely that parking garages in Business A are either not allowed or with certain literal interpretations allowed only under special permit. The ordinance defines parking facility, parking lot, public garage and private garage and any one could be appropriate for this situation.

By carefully reading the ordinance, in particular definitions and then applying the appropriate labels, the ordinance can be applied consistently and objectively. Specifically: If one treats the building as a parking facility then it is clearly not allowed. The words parking facility never appear in any of the use regulations.

If treated as a public garage (not possible if free parking is allowed) then it is not allowed. It would,however, be allowed in Business B. The most appropriate label is private garage for it is "part of a building where motor vehicles are kept" for the "business use" of the "tenants of the premises". If so, paragraph (a) 10) allows "any uses and accessory purposes permitted in Residence D except.."which in Accessory Uses for Residence D allows "a private garage with provision for not more than three automobiles." Unfortunately Druker plans 434 for the west side garage and 182 for the eastern one.

Although a very literal interpretation and a considerable stretch of the imagination is required the garage could be treated as a type of parking lot, for a parking lot is defined as "a parking facility where off-street parking of vehicles is permitted for other than accessory use" (parking facility is defined as "A building, structure..."). This still doesn't permit uncontrolled development, for parking lots are only allowed under special permit.

There is another approach which doesn't require a strict classification of the garage. Allowed under special permit are accessory uses which are "not injurious to the neighborhood as a Business A district". With the literal interpretation of parking lot it could be argued that a "Business A neighborhood" includes garages. However, the laws still say a special permit is required.

The arguments being used to justify the "as a right" construction of parking garages are the following:

The ordinance, according to proponents of the project, gives one the right to build office and retail space in a Business A zone, but also requires (in this case) considerable off-street parking. In order to provide that amount of parking it is necessary to build a multistoried garage. Therefore, it is argued, one has the implied right to do so as a matter of right without saying that if a developer designs to the maximum of most of the limits in the code, say to the 40 ft. height and 15 ft. rear setback limits, and by doing so makes it impossible to meet the remaining limits, then he has an implied exemption from those final limits, in this case from a maximum three-car garage. The problem is that these limits are land use controls, not rights available in total, regardless of the size of the lot.

The second argument is that in practice at least, there has always been the right without special permit, to park cars on one's land to meet accessory parking requirements. It is argued that the literal definition of (the principal use) parking lot carries over to accessory parking lots and therefore allows large parking gar ages to be built without special permit to meet accessory parking requirements.

Because of the necessity for background information, problems with the second argument are somewhat more difficult to explain. It is important, however, to note that the argument depends on the acceptance of the unorthodox literal definition of parking lot, treating a garage as a type of parking lot. In addition, it requires accepting the fact that the board intended by broadening the definition to create in an indirect, surreptitious and roundabout manner a significant relaxation of zoning ordinances.

Background information: The definition of parking lot used to be "An area where off-street parking of vehicles is permitted other than as an accessory use." And in 1977 it was changed to the broader, "A parking facility where off-street parking is permitted other than as accessory use."

The change of definition was buried with other legislation, the purpose of which was to establish off-street parking requirements for various forms of land usage. The sponsor of that legislation has provided a written statement that reads in part "Any definitional changes made at that time (1977) were intended to be merely technical, necessary for the consistency and understanding of the legislation. There was not any intent to relax the zoning of ordinances in either accessory or primary use situations by making definitional changes that would allow parking garages or structures in places where in the past only parking lots were permitted.

If the board intended to allow public and large private garages in Business A zones, then it is likely it would have made the other changes necessary to remove ambiguity. Specifically it would have removed the definition of public garage, removed public garage from Business B use regulations and added a paragraph that specifically increased the limit for private garages to more than three. Members of the 1977 Land Use Committee were recently contacted, and it is important to note that none remember anv such intent.

The original draft for that detailed 10 page legislation was written by the Planning Department. It then passed to the generally overworked Land Use Committee for review where it is likely the change, buried in a number of other definition changes, was just plain overlooked. Whether the Planning Department's intent in adding this change was to handle problems that existed in an earlier version or to effect what may turn out to be one of the more significant zoning relaxations in Newton history is anybody's guess.

Once one gets a better picture of the overall situation it is easy to understand why this decision is critical to the proliferation of large parking garages in other villages.

The semantic and background information necessary to refute the "as a right" argument is both hard to obtain and/or tricky to grasp. Those using those arguments haven't been getting much rebuttal.

A pro-garage decision can, and probably will be appealed, but for reasons expressed above the odds are pro-garage.

Contesting this decision requires considerable time and effort. It is unlikely that in our other village/garage situations people will be found who can and will give that amount of time to the problems.

Losing (or winning) at the ZBA sets legal precedent and would make it easier (or harder) for other "as a right" accessory garages to be built.

We have an excellent mayor, a building commissioner who is both open and honest, and capable and experienced members on the ZBA. However, in a situation as important and complex as this one they need citizen and aldermanic input to assure that their understanding of the situation is complete.

South plans week

NEWTON CENTRE — The Enrichment Program at Newton South High School has scheduled a week-long program on Nuclear Education. In accordance with its stated policy, the Enrichment Program continues to provide a forum for the many views espoused by various organizaitons in Newton and in the broader community.

Nuclear Education Week is designed to offer factual information, to educate the school population about ways to prevent nuclear war, to point out the possible consequences, to clarify the issues involved and to encourage students and faculty to act on these concerns.

The need for this program was initiated by Enrichment Program students concerned with the world in which they are to function.

These concerns, students said, must be brought to the attention of all students, as well. The devastating effects of nuclear fallout, the question of citizen survival, the after effects of nuclear war and the purpose of stockpiling nuclear weapons will be explored.

Representatives of many nuclear disarmament groups and proponents of the need of nuclear weapons as deterrents and safeguards will participate in this week-long program. The entire Newton South High School Community is as usual, invited to attend the sessions and to join in the dialogue. Question and answer periods will be featured in all events. The program will culminate in Student-Faculty Teach-Ins. The schedule follows for times, dates and locations.

Monday, Feb. 8

The first event scheduled for Nuclear Education Week by the Enrichment Program at Newton South High School is to be a presentation by Dr. Helen Caldicott, president of Physicians for Social Responsibility.

Staff member of Harvard Medical School and the Children's Hospital, Dr. Caldicott has taken leaves of absence to devote her time and energies to educating the public to the devastating consequences of a nuclear confrontation. Her talk, "The Bomb: Can We Survive It?" will be in the Auditorium, Newton South High School, at 10:05 a.m. Community invited at no charge.

Tuesday, Feb. 9

William Durch, research fellow, Center for Sciences and Internatinal Affairs, Kennedy School of Government, will speak on "Nuclear Weapons: Deterrents and Strategic Safeguards" from 11 to 11:50 a.m. in Room 7106, Newton South High School. This is the second event in the Nuclear Education Week arranged by the Enrichment Program. Community invited at no charge.

"The Nuclear Freeze" will be described by Caroline Graboys, citizen activist, Brookline resident, member of the Clamshell Alliance, organizer of citizen groups, such as "Citizens against Nuclear War in Newton and Brookline" and the "Nuclear-Freeze Group". Graboys, an art restorer at the Isabelle Steward Gardner Museum, successfully defended the position on a nuclear freeze for both the United States and Russia at a recent Brookline Town meeting. She was instrumental in getting the Town of Brookline to endorse the work of the Nuclear Freeze Group. This is to take place from 11:55 to 12:45 p.m. in Room 7106. The Enrichment Program extends an invitation to the community to attend at no charge.

Wednesday, Feb. 10

Professor Toda Toshi Akiba, Mathematics Department, Tufts University, and president, Foundation for internatinal Understanding will speak about "Japan - The Atom Bomb and Survivors". After a showing of a Japanese film about the views of Japanese people regarding nuclear warfare, Dr. Akiba will be joined by Mr. Earl Kim of the Musicians Against Nuclear Armament (MANA) for a discussion and question and answer period. Mr. Kim is the composer of the tone poem to be performed at the Feb. 21 Benefit for MANA. This enrichment program event is to take place between 10:05 and 11:55 a.m., the location in Newton South High School to be announced. For information please call the Enrichment Office, 552-7520. The public is cordially invited to attend at no charge.

Thursday, Feb. 11

"Nuclear Weapons: Is There a Place to Hide?" will be discussed by Mr. David Wylie of the Cambridge City Council, City of Cambridge. This is the title of a booklet published by the Cambridge City Council after considering the chances of survival from a nuclear war and how to protect Cambridge citizens. The Enrichment Program has scheduled this for Room 4206, Newton South High School from 8:55 to 9:45 a.m. The community is invited at no charge.

Friday, Feb. 12

"Beyond Salt II: Arms Control in the Reagan Years". This will be explained by Dr. W. Scott Thompson, a Pentagon aide in the Ford Administration, now at Tufts University's Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy and the Georgetown University Center for Strategic and International Studies. Dr. Thompson is a recognized authority in his field and has had extensive Government experience. The community is invited to attend this event which is scheduled for 8:55 to 9:45 a.m. in the Auditorium, Newton South High School.

Student-Faculty-Community Teach-In! An opportunity for exchange of views, ideas, concerns and for debate. Three sessions: 10:05 to 10:55 a.m., 11 to 11:55 a.m. and 11:55 to 12:45 p.m. in the Auditorium.

'Rail fans' keep up their interest

Like Derow, whose interest in trains began with his enthusiasm for the now defunct Boston and Albany, many of RRE's members became rail fans when they were children.

"All of a sudden, I just woke up one day when I was a little kid and I just loved trains," says John Erlich, a Cambridge advertising manager. "I've ridden every track of Amtrack that there is. I've been all over the country."

Derow, Erlich and their fellow train worshipers display their enthusiasm for railroads in a variety of ways: collecting model trains, reading trade magazines and books and gathering other railroad paraphernalia. But more than anything else, members love riding in trains. One man, who, ironically, is associated with aeronautics industry, prefers railways over airplanes. "Planes are fine, but I don't like traveling in them," said the man, who prefered not give his name because he is associated with the airlines.

Many RRE members are business professionals in technical fields, such as engineering, computer sciences and physics. These enthusiasts carry with them their professional expertise on the technical operations of a locomotive.

Others joining the group are involved in medical professions, business and government. A former air force pilot, William Schermerhorn, who is now a RRE director, says he'll take train rides over air travel any day.

"My wife and I take train trips across the country four or five times a year. We really prefer train travel," says Schermerhorn.

A computer analysist from Boston remembers that his interest in trains began with the streetcars he loved to ride as a child in Pittsburgh. As a student at Boston University, Thomas Engle took a fancy to electric cars, and his enthusiasm for trains eventually developed from there.

"Actually, one of the things I like to do the most is just sit and watch a train pass by," says Engle.

"Most our members are not employees of the railway system," noted Derow. "We prefer to view it somewhat removed. It can be a dangerous and difficult job," Derow continued, adding that he still believes that train travel is still safer than any other mode of transportation.

While the New England rail industry isn't exactly booming, one rail fan is undaunted: 'It has its place. The future looks good.'

Several members, though, infatuated with life on the railroads, usually attend the meetings donned in train a conductor's outfit. But most never have worked for a railroad.

One RRE member did, however, get caught up in his dream of an adventurous life on the railroad. A former pharmacist from Brookline, quit his job to become a breakman for the Green Mountains System, according to Derow, who noted that the man's wife also gave up her tenured teachering position for her husband's dream. "That's dedication."

While the railroad industry in New England doesn't seem to be booming, with the Boston and Maine in bankruptcy for the last 15 years, and the region lacking an extensive system, the rail fans still feel the future is promising.

"It has its place. The future looks good," said an optimistic fan.

Legal opinion sought on release of names professional in education who has served on numerous such committees."

Jones said the public and student members of the screening committees in Newton met "some very basic needs" for community involvement.

"I very strongly support community participation and it was another push that had to be made, but I think that kind of process is working and I would really hate to see another kind of public pressure," she stressed.

Basic profiles of finalists by the press would, Jones said, "in effect set up another interview committee" and would "invite some opportunity for input and pressure on the people who are supposedly responsible for this."

"It (basic profiles) undermines the role of the screening committee and the superintendent. Plus, I still think people don't need to be subject to all that publicity," she said.

However, some School Committee members feel the public's right to know overrides the privacy of candidates at the later stages of the screening committee process.

"I personally don't see the harm in revealing the names of the semi-finalists whether that number be three, four, five or six people," Leonard Gentile said.

"But, I don't think it was the intent of the law to force people to give every single name that originally applied because it may create an uncomfortable situation at their present job," he stressed.

"My priority is to make sure that we obey the law," he said of the request before the city solicitor.

"I'm pretty much in agreement with the superintendent," Marcia Mitchell said. "I do feel that the public has a right to access of the names of semi-finalists."

Mitchell stressed that semi-finalists' names should only be released when they have been notified that their names are going to be made public. "And then, if you wish to do a profile or brief biography at that point, that seems reasonable to me," she said.

James Mnookin said he was concerned that if confidentiality is broken, "people might not apply and, in the long run, Newton would be hurt."

"I guess I agree with the initial agreement between The Graphic and Mr. Fink that he would release the names," Mnookin said.

Joseph Alexander, president of the Newton Taxpayers' Association said that "up to this time we have not questionned the law, but there has been discussion among us as to whether the present withholding of names was in compliance with the law."

"At least tentatively, we doubt that it is in compliance with the law," he said.

Janet Goldrick, president of the Newton Teachers Association, said she has not heard negative or positive comments from other NTA members on the issue of releasing names.

"I guess I'm neutral," Goldrick said, "except in the fact that if that (disclosure of names) is going to be done, candidates should know about it."

"The way I see it is that I think the names should be out before the final meeting on Feb. 9 because if it gets out before then, there is time for public reaction. That's my biggest concern," said Conor Plunkett, former editor of the Newtonite, North High's student newspaper which has also requested the names of final candidates.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor

HOW TO SELECT A CHIROPRACTOR

It is important to carefully choose a doctor. After all, you are going to delegate a lot of responsibility for your physical and mental well being to the person chosen to treat you for various bodily complaints. A chiropractor should be checked in the same way as your physician. Has he received the proper chiropractic education and is he licensed] Is the chiroprator well equipped and well-versed in the newest chiropratic developments] The rest of the criteria depends on your idea of a good health professional.

As a simple courtesy we have some tips for your improved health and well being. Good posture and postural habits can help you maintain your health. Don't lift with your back. Use leg muscles for lifting. Don't overdo physically and don't try to lift the weight of two men. Don't stretch or reach or lift beyond normal limits. Don't slouch. You will feel better when you follow these tips and watch this column for others. DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington Street, Roslindale, 323-5022. Hours by appointment and three evenings a week.

CHIRO TIP:

Unfortunately, many young children lose their lives or are injured, in automobile accidents because they are held rather than strapped in. Use a seatbelt or carseat for small children.

THE WORLD of Travel

by Hank Fleming

"IT'S A SMALL WORLD AFTER ALL"

There is nothing new about the fascination of travel. A Greek named Herodotus knew its excitement as long as 2300 years ago and wrote down the story of his wanderings for you to read. However, it has only been since World War II that the great sights of our globe have become available to such a large number of people. What brought travel within reach of the workday world? For one thing, the two wars acquainted a vast number of Americans with Europe, Asia, the Pacific and other far away places. For another, flying has accustomed us to a contempt for distance. Important as well was the development of tourist class for ship travel, the inauguration of the short cruises and air tour packages beginning in the 1950's.

Whatever your travel needs are for business or pleasure, FLEMING WORLD TRAVEL & TOURS, 15 Crescent St., Waltham, has the most up to date information. The wise traveler depends on us to give them the most for their travel dollar. We offer the lowest airfares, cruise fares and vacation packages available. So, why pay more if you don't have to. There is no charge to you for our services. Open: Mon.-Sat. 9-5:30, Fri. til 8. Call us today at 899-5658.

THIS WEEK'S SPECIAL

FREEPORT (BAHAMAS) From $199 - 3, 4 and 7 night packages. Includes air fare, hotel and much more.

School hosted opening to show renovations

BROOKLINE — Area preschool directors and teachers visited Maimonides School in Brookline last week to become aquainted with the preprimary and primary grade program at the school. The visit included a tour of the recently renovated kindergarten annex and a sampling of the Maimonides hot lunch program.

Recruitment chairman, Dr. Alan Rockoff of Newton, had invited the educators to the school to introduce them to the program and facility so that they could supply first-hand information to parents of their nursery school students.

Rabbi David Shapiro, Maimonides' principal, and Dr. Kalman Stein, director of general studies, described the goals and program of the school. Mary Mindess of Leslie College is the early childhood consultant at the school. The early grades as well as the entire student body are serviced by special needs consultants and a mental health consultant.

Dr. Rockoff invites interested parenats to phone the school for further information. Transportation is now provided from the South Shore, from Newton-Needham and is anticipated from the North Shore area as well.

Gov. Lois Pines and William Marcus of Chestnut Hill.

'Super Sunday' was a great success for CJP

NEWTON — Despite a high temperature in Boston on Jan. 10 of 19 degrees, more than 1,200 people of all ages turned out for "Super Sunday," the giant, day-long phone-a-thon, which launched the 1982 appeal of the Combined Jewish Phalanthropies of Greater Boston.

"Super Sunday" chairman, Roger E. Gordon of Brookline announced that cose to 40,000 phone calls were made from the Grand Ballroom of the Boston Park Plaza Hotel and volunteers raised some $1.2million for CJP's newtork of 75 local and overseas human care agencies. "We were impressed with the turnout and with the spirit which filled the hotel between 10 a.m. and 10 p.m. when the last calls were made," said William R. Sapers of Chestnut Hill, CJP's 1982 general campaign chairmaner.

Sapers noted that CJP hopes to raise significantly more this year than the 1981 total of $15 million. The total for "Super Sunday" '82 is about $222,000 more than last year. Among the celebreties joining in the day-long festivities . were Gov. Edward J. King,, Lt. Gov. Tom O'Neill, Harry Ellis Dickson, Kitty Dukakis and former Gvernor Michael Dukakis.

CJP, the oldest federation of its kind in the country, is the central planning, budgeting and fundraising arm of the Boston Jewish community. Agencies of CJP provide a broad spectrum of humanitarian services both in the Greater Boston community and in Israel.

They provide child care and educational opportunities, service the elderly with physical, legal, social and housing needs, and aid troubled families, new Soviet immigrants, and a number of health institutions.

Melvin Ross is Canal Founders' chair

NEWTON — The reappointment of Melvin A. Ross of Newton as 1982 Chairman of the Canal Founders of the Mediterranean-to-Dead Sea Canal hydroelectric project in Israel has been announced by Robert Boyer, general chairman of the Greater Boston Israel Bond Organization. Ross was selected last year to serve as the first Chairman of the Israel Bond Canal Founders honor society in the Hub. He is a member of the National Campaign Cabinet of Israel Bonds, member of the local Executive Committee and past General Chairman of the Boston campaign.

The Mediterranean-to-Dead Sea Canal, when completed, will supply up to 15 percent of Israel's total energy needs. The Bond Organization has assumed responsibility for providing seed money for the first phase of this vital project. This initial capital is over and above the proceeds which the organization mobilizes each year for all phases of Israel's economic development. The Bond program has channeled over $5.5 billion into Israel's industrial and agricultural growth over the past 30 years.

An intensive campaign to enroll Founders of the Canal was launched last year throughout the United States, Canada and other parts of the free world. The Greater Boston membership drive in 1981 generated the support of ten individuals whose top-level Israel Bond purchases represented a substantial increase over their previous year's investment.

"Israel Bonds," Ross said, "played a major role in the 50's in building the National Water Carrier; in the 60's in building the port of Ashdod and the oil pipeline to Haifa; and in the 70's in helping to build the coal-powered electric plant in Hadera. Now, in the 80's, we have undertaken to raise $100 million in seed money for the canal which will alleviate some of Israel's energy needs in the 90's.

The 67-mile canal - part tunnel, part canal, part pipeline - is to be built along the southern route from Tel Qatif on the southern Mediterranean coast at the lower end of the Gaza Strip to the Masada area on the Dead Sea. "By exploiting the difference between the levels of the two seas to produce hydroelectric power," Ross declared, "Israel will reduce its total dependence on imported oil."

Ross has been an outstanding leader in the Israel Bond campaign for many years. In addition to heading the local campaign as General Chairman in 1979 and 1980, he has served as deputy chairman, Country Clubs chairman, Corporate Divison chairman and has been a member of the organization's Prime Minister's Club since the establishment of the honor society in 1974. In recent years, he has been a Golden Trustee, member ofthe Century Club and Founder of the Canal. He has been a delegate to the Prime Minister's Conference in Israel numerous times, leading the Boston contingent in 1979 and 1980 and the local delegation to the first Century Club mission in 1981 which launched the Canal Founders program.

He has also been active with the Jewish Theological Seminary of America for many years, serving as New England Campaign Chairman since 1978 and as Chairman of the 1979 and 1980 Awards Dinner in Boston. A Patron of JTS and donor of the Melvin and Eleanor Ross Scholarship Fund at the Seminary, he was honored in 1978 as recipient of the Jewish Theological Seminary's Community Service Award.

Ross is a member of the Board of Directors of Mount Sinai Hospital, Weizmann Institute of Science, American Technion, Congregation Mishkan Tefila which he also serves as Vice-President, and Jewish National Fund which honored him as Man of the Year in 1979. In addition, he is a Trustee of Combined Jewish Philanthropies and past Chairman of the CJP Paper and Office Equipment team, past Vice-President and former Board member of the federation's Buisnessmen's Club.

He is a member of the President's Council of Brandeis University; Trustee of the Eunice Kennedy Shriver Center for Mental Retardation; Trustee of Amos Lodge; past commander of Garden City Lodge, A.F. & A.M.; past chancellor commander of the Knights of Pythias; and member of the Boston Chapter of American Friends of Boys Town Jerusalem. He served as president of Spring Valley Country Club in 1979 and 1970 and again in 1977.

The president of Harvard Folding Box Company, he is on the Board of Directors and former chairman of the National Association of Paperboard Packaging Council and is past president of the Council's New England Region.

Works of Barsha, Garrett shown at Arts Center

NEWTONVILLE — Starting Feb. 6 the Newton Arts Center will host a major exhibition of paintings by Carol Barsha and Cynthia Garrett.

The opening reception will be 4-7 on Saturday, Feb. 6. Gallery hours are Monday-Thursday 9-5 and Friday 9-8. On Sunday, Feb. 28, their will be a closing gallery talk at 1:30 and the gallery will be open till 4 that afternoon.

Both women are graduates of the Boston University M.F.A. program in painting and their talents were recently brought together in an invitational landscape show at Boston University.

Ms. Garrett's paintings combine the spontaneity of drawing and the abstract dimension of paint. From the small gouache, charcoal and watercolors to her large oil landscapes Garrett's technical skill and range of vision is evident. She is the cool observer giving the momentary passage of light on the hillside. The colors, rich and passionate, beckon into a magical woodland arousing a sense of the mystery in nature.

Barsha's involvement with realism delves into magical places as well as autobiographical subjects. Each art work is filled with a tranquility which can only be found in nature. Her use of dynamic composition and brilliant pastel colors transports the viewr to a place of peace and comfort.

"I want my paintings to reach to the spirit in subtle ways, much as music does, and I hope the images linger there with the viewer, and come and go as melodies".

Barsha has lectured and taught at many universities, museums and colleges and exhibited extensively in the Northeast. At present she is a resident of New York when she is an instructor at the Kayonah Gallery.

Garrett was a 1981 Artists Foundation Finalist, exhibiting at the Danforth Museum in Framingham. She has had two one woman shows in the past year and most recently is a recipient of an artist in residency position at Ossabaw Island, Georgia. She is a native of Boston currently working at the Bridge St. Studios in Watertown.

New program geared toward helping local adolescents

NEWTON — The Department of Social Services serving Newton, Needham, Wellesley and Weston announces a new program, OPTIONS, geared to keeping community adolescents close to home. The Department has announced that Newton resident Joan Kunitz, formerly Child Advocate Coordinator with the Office for Children, has been selected to coordinate the development of this new program.

As a state agency, the Department of Social Services offers services to children and their families. At times, a substitute home is needed for a child. OPTIONS will provide alternatives homes for young people while working toward reuniting the family. Adolescents in need of alternative housing have varying needs. Some need care because of family illness or emergency, others are experiencing difficult adjustments within their families.

The key to success of this program is the recruitment of community members who will share their homes with local children. Experience shows that children do better when attending their own schools have the support of familiar surroundings.

Schoolboy hockey roundup

Waltham rallies to tie North

Junior winger Paul Dowdy flipped in a rebound of a Glenn Vanderlinden slap shot with less than a minute left to boost the Waltham High hockey team to a 3-3 come-from-behind tie with rival Newton North Saturday night in a Suburban League matchup at the Watertown Arena.

Waltham trailed, 2-0, going into the third period. A pair of goals in the first three minutes of the final frame vaulted the Hawks back into the fray. The Tigers, who haven't lost in their last five games, managed to jam in a goal with seven minutes left to play.

Waltham didn't stop coming at Newton North and managed to get a faceoff in the Tiger zone with 54 seconds on the clock. The Hawks pulled goaltender Andy Power for the extra man and the strategy worked. Tom Pascal got the puck back to Vanderlinden at the point and the sophomore defenseman whistled a shot toward the net and Newton North goaltender Bob Incorvati made the stop. The alert Dowdy pounced on the rebound and drove the puck home for the game-knotting score.

"We called a timeout with a little over a minute left," said Waltham coach Peter Yetten. "We wanted to get a faceoff in their end and pull our goaltender. The players did a great job of executing and I was happy with this tie because of the way we cameback.

"From a team standpoint, the kids were elated," Yetten continued. "It's always an emotional game with Newton North and we really came out flying in the third period.

"We were down by two goals, but I told the kids not to give up," said Yetten. "The score could of easily been 2-2, but their goaltender made some great saves to keep us off the board. The key was to come out and score quickly in the third period."

Waltham's Dave Mason took care of that. Mason, who was forced to switch from his forward position to defenseman because of an injury to senior Mike Magee, beat a couple of North defenseman and scored just 1:16 into the final period.

The Hawks tied the contest just a minute later when Ed Finney scored. The Hawks were on fire at that point.

"We let them off the hook," said Newton North coach Don Crowley. "It was a game we had in our grasp. You've got to give Waltham credit. They fought back and earned the tie. We scored after they tied the game at two, but they didn't stop fighting back."

The Tigers scored on a semi-breakaway. John Butterworth slithered a pass to to David Buckley behind the Waltham defense. Buckley fired a shot that beat Power high.

Newton North grabbed the 2-0 lead with single scores in the first and second period. Tom Ryan beat Power with a dribbler just 22 seconds into the first period to give the Tigers the early advantage. In the second period, Ray Dunn poked the puck in after a scramble in front for Newton North.

Newton South held the early lead, but couldn't hold on to it in a 5-4 loss to Concord-Carlisle. The Lions jumped out to a 2-1 lead in the first period with goals from John Cohen and John Stephans.

Steve Mosca tallied in the third period to give the Lions a 3-2 advantage going into the middle period. Concord scored three times in the third period to capture the victory.

Todd Kinsman scored three goals for the Patriots, while Jack Gallagher talied twice. Ken Kohlberg scored in the third period for Newton South.

Lions explode, 88-71

Coach Joe Killilea had the perfect explanation for it. "Everything was clicking, everybody was hitting. We played as well as we can."

If you don't believe it, ask the Colonials of Acton-Boxboro. They came to the Newton South gym Tuesday night expecting a game similar to one played in the club's first meeting when the Colonials prevailed at the buzzer, 77-75. Instead, the surging Lions blew them into the winter cold with a roaring 88-71 victory which saw them score 71 points in the first three quarters alone.

The win was an important one. It placed Newton South into second place of the Dual County League with a 7-2 record (10-2 overall). Acton is now 6-2 and 9-4 overall.

There were no individual heros for Newton South in this one. As Killilea noted, everybody was hitting. Dave Hill was the leading scorer with 20 points, but also in double figures were Mike Antonellis (17), Steve Anglin (13) and Meatchie Russell (13).

Antonellis, though, was a particular key. The big center didn't play in the first encounter with Acton. "He made the difference this time," said Killilea. "We had about 15 offensive rebounds and I'd say 'Ant' (a nickname) had three or four for baskets."

Russell, the slick sophomore guard, got the Lions off and running in the first quarter with 10 points as they took a 24-15 lead. They were running the break like the vintage Celtics and Acton must have had the feeling that it couldn't continue.

But it did. The Lions scored 23 more points in the second quarter to take a 47-29 cushion into the locker room. "Meatchie had it going for us. We were really running the break beautifully," said Killilea.

Scott Anglin had seven points and Antonellis and Hill six each in the second period.

Hill then went to work in the third stanza, scoring 10 points, to power the Lions to a 71-48 advantage. The fourth quarter was just one long garbage time as Killilea mercifully cleared his bench.

In addition to his 13 points, Russell also contributed eight assists and four rebounds from the guard position in an outstanding performance.

As a team, the Lions were 36 of 61 from the field (59 percent) and 16 of 23 from the line.

Nets notch first victory

It didn't come easily, but the Net's finally won its first game of the season in the Newton Men's Volleyball League Monday with a hard-fought 2-0 triumph over Capello at the Hawthorn Gym.

The Net's took the first game, 19-17, and then won the second without as much a struggle, 15-5.

Nick Valaes scored 11 points to pace the Short-Sets to a 2-0 whitewashing of the Tigers.

The Short-Sets took the two games by 15-9 and 15-0 scores.

After three tough games, the Brews Brothers edged the Spikers, 2-1.

Steve McNeice and Bill Fitzpatrick had nine and eight points, respectively, as the Brews rallied from losing the first game (11-15) for two straight wins (15-6 and 16-14).

Rich Kates had 13 points in a losing effort.

Liz Natale cops first in NE mile

Newton's Elizabeth Natale turned in a sparkling time of 4:52.8 Sunday to capture the mile in the New England Athletic Congress Indoor Track Championships at Boston University.

Natale's clocking was one of the fastest in the country this year. It bested her own personal best of 5:01.7 by nearly nine full seconds.

Kelly Malder of Dorchester was second in 4:55 with Nancy Guiluado of Rutgers University finishing third in 4:58. Julie LeClair of the Waltham Track Club took fourth.

Other area finishers were Dot Faulstich, also of the WTC, who took fifth.

Quinn deflates Waltham, 80-34

Senior forward Debbie Quinn scored 25 of her game-high 28 points in the first half to power Newton North to a convincing 80-34 victory over Newton North Tuesday night in a Suburban League contest at the Dr. Cohn Gym.

This type of victory might be the tonic the struggling Tigers need to get back to their winning ways. Newton North had lost a two games in a row and were being ripped apart by injuries. Everything came together for them against Waltham.

Quinn was the main cog in the scoring machine with her usual repertoire of driving layups and turnaround baseline jumpers. Jenna Lammers, the steady forward, contributed to the Newton North attack with 16 points.

Beth Kelley scored nine points and helped Quinn handle the rebounding chores. Kathy Maguire also scored nine points for the Tigers.

Dawn Crane led the way for Waltham with an eight-point effort. The win lifted the Tigers to a 6-5 record on the season.

Waltham was second in the downhill with 316.5, while Newton North finished third with 313 points. Henry Schneweind tied for first with Milton's Dan Egan for the second week in a row. The duo had an identical time of 16.4. Phil Small also cracked the top 10 for the first place Lions with a seventh place finish in 17.1.

Waltham had three racers place in the top 11. Dan Regan led the way for the Hawks with an eighth place finish, while teammate Dave Salvathe placed 10th and Bill Fennelly was 11th. Larry Abend was 12th for the Tigers.

Joe Tuckerman was the lone Tiger to finish in the top 10 with a fifth.

The Lions had three girls in the top 10. Robyn Kurhan was second for the Lions and Wendy Pringle finished third for South. Cheryl Gryzel finished eighth for the Lions.

Waltham's Cheryl Zerega placed first in 17.1, while teammate Robin St. Germaine was seventh. Newton North's Megan Guiney placed fifth for the while, Carolyn Corbato was ninth. The summary:

Newton PeeWees cop 3

The most recent triumph was an impressive 5-0 shutout of Belmont Tuesday night at the Fessendan Rink as goalie Neil Ronchinsky posted his third whitewashing of the season.

Keying Newton's win was the second line of Mann, Tom DeMeo and John Capello, whose forechecking disrupted Belmont's offense.

On Monday Newton edged Waltham, 5-4, and on Sunday they defeated Malden, 4-1.

Now 14-12-3 and 6-2-1 in its last nine games.

Waltham returns to form, rips Tigers, 70-62

By Steve Tiberi
Sports Correspondent

The Waltham High basketball team was not itself for almost a game and a half, but the Hawks returned to form with about five minutes to play in the second quarter of Tuesday night's game against rival Newton North.

Waltham had lost to Weymouth North on last Friday night and they were on the wrong end of a 30-24 score with three minutes left in the second quarter against Newton North. The explosion occurred at that time and when the smoke cleared Waltham had captured a 70-62 victory over the Tigers in a Suburban League contest at the Reggie Smith Gym.

The score doesn't reflect Waltham's true dominance from the three minute mark of the second period to the end of the third quarter. The Hawks ran off 31 points to just 11 for the Tigers in that span and Waltham had a 68-43 lead with six minutes left in the final period, before the benches were cleared.

Waltham got out of their semi-mini slump by doing the things that has made them an 8-2 team with a shot at the tournament. They pressed, they confused and they harrassed the Newton North offense from one end of the basketball court to the other.

The Tigers couldn't take a step without a Waltham player in their way. It seemed the Hawks had 10 men on the court, but it was just the five-man starting rotation of Dave and Darren Marcou, Scott and Steve LaForest and center Dave Kaufman.

The Waltham press starts with the Marcou brothers at guards. These two will not allow the ball past center court and each had several key steals in the third period as Waltham took a 31-30 lead at halftime and turned it into a 51-34 lead with a 1:47 left in the third period.

"They are amazing athletes," said Waltham coach Len Sorin. "They just make things happen. David is tough player to play against. He never gives his opponent a chance. He is just a great competitor."

David was the leader for Waltham tonight. He stole the ball, played solid defense and had his jumper working to the tune of a game-high 17 points. Darren dropped in seven points and also had three steals in the third quarter spree for the Hawks.

The LaForest brothers, Scott and Steve, take the man who has to throw the pass in and make life difficult for him. They were responsible for a pair of steals each in the Waltham run and turned those into easy layups. Steve scored 11 of his 15 points in the second half and Scott tossed in all nine of his points in the second half.

"The LaForest are intelligent players," said Sorin. "They rarely make a mistake on the court and they take advantage of the mental errors made by other players."

Kaufman was Waltham's offensive leader in the first half scoring seven of his 11 points and playing strong underneath. He is also an intense player on the press and made a couple of swipes in the first half.

"We have to play with a lot of intensity," said Sorin. "Weymouth North was ready for us last Friday night, but we weren't ready for them and it cost us. This was a big game for us tonight because we have to win six of our last eight to make the tournament.

"This team deserves to make the tourney," Sorin continued. "They've worked hard all season and are a great group of players."

This game didn't belong to Waltham right from the start. The Tigers seemed to have solved the problems posed by the Waltham press in the first 15 minutes of basketball. They were under control and made the right pass.

The Tigers leader during this time was junior guard John Humphrey, who pumped in nine first half points and dealt out four assists. Humphrey kept Newton on top by consitently hitting a 25-foot jumper from the corner. Humphrey also dumped the ball inside Scott Olsson, who had eight first quarter points and finished with 12.

"John has improved a great deal this season," said Newton North coach Jerry Phillips, who saw his team drop to a 1-12 mark. "He made good plays in the early going and Scott (Olsson) also played well.

"We just had trouble with them in the third quarter," said Phillips. "It's always a big rivalry when Newton and Waltham meet and our team came out and proved it could play with Waltham. We just made to many key mistakes at the start of the second half."

Humphrey was the top scorer for the Tigers with 15 points, while guard Paul Vacarro dumped in 11 points. Waltham will play at Quincy on Friday night and Newton North will meet North Quincy. The summary:

The victory upped Newton North's record to 6-0 on the year. Bishop grabbed first place in the 200 freestyle and the 500 freestyle and was also a member of the first-place 200 freestyle relay team.

Phil Richmond was first in the 100 butterfly for the Tigers, while senior Tom Chin finished first in the 100 freestyle and second in the 50 freestyle. Sam Heespelink took first place honors in the 100 backstroke for the Tigers.

Arrows squeeze past Noble, 33-31

The St. Sebastian's basketball team collected its 12th consecutive victory of the season by squeezing past Nobles and Greenough, 33-31, Wednesday in an Independent School League clash at Newton.

The Arrows trailed for three quarters, but they took control early in the fourth quarter. St. Sebastian's clinched the victory when Dan Gilbert hit a free throw to extend the lead to three with seconds remaining.

Nobles came out hot and captured a 18-9 lead after the first quarter. The Nobles shooters cooled off a bit in the next two periods and scored a total of six points. The Arrow defense led by the shot-blocking skill of Bob Bean clamped down on the Nobles and shut things down.

The Arrows, meanwhile, used a patient offense to break down the nine point lead and slowly assume the upper hand in the game. Gilbert was factor with 11 points and forward Bob Peretti did his share by tossing in 12 points.

The win gave St. Sebastian's 5-0 record in the ISL for a first place berth. The Arrows will put their perfect record on the line Saturday against Belmont Hill.

Rivers traveled to Concord, New Hampshire only to lose a 10-point halftime lead enroute to a 80-77 loss to St. Paul's. The Redmen got out of the gate quickly in this one scoring 46 points in the first half, but they cooled off in the third quarter.

St. Paul's took advantage of the Rivers' cold shooting touch and closed to within a point by the end of the third frame. St. Paul's then broke away from the Redmen in the fourth quarter and opened up a 10-point lead.

The Redmen didn't quit and they fought back to close to three points. It was too late for the Redmen, however, and they ran out of time. John Sims led all scorers for Rivers with a 34-point effort. Sims was effective in the first half scoring 19 points.

Guard Jeff Wynne sparked the Rivers offense by netting 20 points. Wynne also did a good job of running the offense and getting the ball to the right players. Kevin Sims, who was in foul trouble for most of the second half, managed to score 12 points.

Hawks stage comeback to nip South wrestlers

The Waltham High wrestling team was trailing Newton South by a 22-0 score after the first four matches, but Hawk coach John Passarini wasn't a worried man.

Passarini is aware, as are most followers of this season's edition of the Hawk wrestling squad, that Waltham has a habit of finishing strong. Waltham won the last eight matches to capture a 42-22 victory over the Lions to remain unbeaten on the season.

"I couldn't be happier with the performance of our wrestlers," said Passarini. "Every one of them has worked hard and our record reflects that. They had experience in the lower weights, but we got some key performances to win. This is the strongest Newton South team I've seen."

Newton South had control of the early weight classes, but coach Charlie Hurwitz still didn't feel comfortable with that 22-0 lead.

"I knew what was coming," said Hurwitz, whose team dropped to 6-2 on the season. "We knew Waltham was tough in the middle weights and that we'd have to wrestle well to win. As it turned out they simply did what they had to do."

The turning point of the match was Waltham's first victory at 128. Waltham Sophomore Brian Schoener pinned Rob White, who was wrestling with a sore elbow. Schoener was trailing, 2-0, in the first round, but he reversed White and used an aggressive half-nelson to gain the first-round pin and start Waltham on the road back.

At 140, Waltham's Paul Anastas and Mike Duffy locked up in a tough match that was 3-2 with less than a minute to go in the third period. A takedown by either wrestler would mean a victory and a South victory would halt the Hawks momentum.

Anastas came through and used a double-leg takedown in the final 20 seconds to insure the 5-2 victory. Newton South capt. Dave MacDonald had the task of trying to stop the Waltham onslaught at 147, but Waltham senior tri-capt. Bob Locke was a formidable opponent.

MacDonald came in to the match with an 11-0 record and Locke was 10-1. Locke managed to gain an early ankle take down and grab a 2-0 lead. The two traded escapes in the second and third round. The score was 3-1 in favor of Locke in the third period. Once again a MacDonald takedown would tie the match and possibly stall the Waltham comeback.

Locke executed a fine ankle takedown to pick up two points and almost pinned MacDonald off that hold. He picked up five big points on the maneuver and handed MacDonaldan 8-1 defeat.

"It was a class match," said Passarini. "Both wrestlers were in control of themselves and they were aware of what they had to do. Bob got the big takedown when he had to do and thats why I think he deserved to win. Both Bob and Paul got the takedown when they needed to."

Ciro Zottola iced the match for Waltham with a pin at 187 over Neil Jonhson in the first round. Waltham won the heavyweight match by forfeit.

Waltham will get right back into on Saturday night when they host tough Brockton, 6:30 p.m. Waltham is unbeaten in the Suburban League with a 6-0 record and are ranked number four in Division One North.

Newton South will face Concord-Carlisle on Saturday in a Dual County League encounter. The summary:

Community schools plan wide range of programs

NEWTON CENTRE — Sessions on the hows and whys of personal computers...instruction on how to make deep-dish pizza...workshops on home repair and journal writing. These programs represent only a few of the hundreds of activities sponsored this spring by Newton Community Schools. The complete listing of all programs is available in the Community Schools Catalogue, which will be mailed on Feb. 3 to all Newton households. Registration for all programs will take place throughout the City from Feb. 8-24, and activities will begin the week of March 1.

Joseph Baron, Newton Community Schools' Exectutive Director, noted that "every one of the 700 programs that we will offer this spring has been planned by Newton Community Schools volunteers. Because of the commitment and quality of expertise among the Community School Committees, we have been continually able to offer affordable, accessible programs for residents of all ages, interests and backgrounds."

Approximately 300 different activities will be offered for children throughout the city. Pre-schoolers will have the opportunity to join playgroups across the city while their mothers meet one another and socialize. On Saturday mornings youngsters ages 3-6 may gain an understanding of different cultures by signing up for 'Cantonese Pre-School.' Led by a native from the People's Republic of China, the hour will include Cantonese storytelling, singing and games.

Older children throughout Newton will enjoy a wide range of activities, including drama, dance, music, arts and crafts, science, cooking, sports and languages. In addition to these traditionally popular programs, young students will be able to choose their favorite activities from an exciting variety of special events.

Through the Angier Community School, children in grades K-6 will create two murals near Angier's front entrance. Led by professional wall painter, Jessica Davis, the four-session activity will stress creativity and teamwork.

Children of all ages are invited to sign up for field trips ranging from a tour of Logan Airport to a visit to Harvard University's Peabody Museum.

Teenagers are eligible to sign up for many of Newton Community Schools' adult programs. In addition, many Community School Committees have designed activities specifically for young adults. For fans of rock music, the Angier and Franklin Community Schools will co-sponsor a tour of songwriter Dawna Graham's recording studio. Pam Stewart from the Department of Human Services will lead two discussion and support groups, which will concentrate on issues of concern to high school students.

Interested in learning sculpture? On developing color slides and prints? Or taking a walking tour through Nonantum? Newton Community Schools' adult classes take in as wide a range of intersts as there are program leaders in Newton.

For men and women with vocational interests, the Mason-Rice and Bowen Community Schools will offer a four-session course entitled "Basic Home Repair." Plumbing, electrical and woodworking problems will be discussed, and participants will learn how to save money and gain satisfaction by making repairs themselves.

For those with literary interests, the Bowen Community School will present a course in short stories. Conducted by Gil Mason, the 8 sessions will discuss works of Chekhov, Hemingway, Cheever, Welty and Updike.

In response to growing interest in U.S. foreign policy, the Cabot Community School will continue its popular 'Sunday Evening Series' and will focus on foreign policy this term. Limited to an enrollment of 50, the series will feature presentations and discussions with experts from all over the world as well as those from local colleges and universities.

In addition to regular adult programs, seniors are invited to participate in senior activity groups at Oak Hill Park, Thompsonville and Newton Upper Falls. At Temple Bethel-Atareth, Newton's Kosher lunch site, two new programs in needlework and exercise will be offered. Varied activities – including discussion groups, exercise, health clinics and crafts – will take place at the Nonantum Multi-Service Center and drop-in centers at Newton Corner, Newtonville, Zervas (Beethoven) and Lower Falls.

Seniors will also enjoy participating in an exciting theatre series co-sponsored by Newton Community Schools and the Newton Arts Center.

Energy program teams city, banks

pany. Other organizations cooperating in the program include Mass. SAVE (the state's utility audit service), the Newton Housing Rehabilitation Fund Office, and the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce.

According to members of the Energy Commission staff, the program may be in the only one in the nation where banks have offered a sizable interest reduction for energy conservation loans without requiring a compensating subsidy.

The "housewarming loan" is available to qualified Newton homeowners at a fixed annual percentage rate that is five percentage points below the FHA Title I Home Improvement Rate. The loans are repayable in up to five years. Each applicant's rate will be tied to the FHA rate on the day he or she applies for the loan with one of the participating banks.

Currently, the Housewarming Energy Savers Loan rate is 14 percent.

The Energy Savers" Loan is an outgrowth of the Newton Energy Commission's Housewarming Program, which last season sponsored some 100 in-home energy education "parties."

A survey taken after that program revealed that the 1220 participating households will save $2.7 million in fuel costs over the next five years through energy saving improvements they implemented as the direct result of attending a "Housewarming Party," according to Barbara S. Kopans, vice-chairman of its Housewarming programs.

"Our survey also indicated that homeowners would do even more if a reduced rate loan were available for energy improvements," Kopans said. "This information gave us the impetus to develop the loan program."

Energy Savers" Loans will range from $1,000 to $2,000, allowing up to 250 homeowners to share the opportunity of making substantial energy improvements.

Loans in this range, when invested in improvements recommended by an energy audit, can reduce heating requirements of the average Massachusetts house by as much as 25 to 40 percent or more, according to the Massachusetts Office of Energy Resources.

Newton Mayor Theodore D. Mann said, "We are certain that this cooperative venture by local government and private business in an effort to encourage energy conservation, will serve as a model for other communities. With cutbacks in federal funds for energy conservation, increased cooperation between municipalities and private institutions is a necessity."

Theodore L. Scafidi, city treasurer and honorary chairman of the Housewarming Loan Program, noted that, "Communities and banks need each other for their mutual well-being."

He said he hoped participation by the three local banks will spur interest from other banking institutions.

Acting as a spoksman for the three participating banks, Giles E. Mosher, Jr, chairman of the board and president of BayBank Middlesex, commented on the banks' involvement. "We appreciate the opportunity afforded by the Newton Citizens Commission on Energy to be participating lenders in Newton's home energy improvement plan. The convenient terms and attractive rates – well below those generally available in the marketplace – offer an incentive to put into effect energy-saving measures.

The Housewarming Loan Program is limited to those Newton homeowners whose gross family income from all sources is no more that $30,000, plus $5,000 for each dependent.

Applicants are required to have an energy audit of their home.

Preliminary applications to the program must be made to Newton Housewarming and will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis.

For more details, Newton residents can call the Housewarming Office at Newton City Hall, 552-7057.

In a telephone interview from Bedford, Brady said the values were left out by employees for a Boston consultant (R.M. Bradley) doing a review of revaluation figures.

"They should not have been there," admitted Brady. "They should have been cleaned up...I guess who ever was working there didn't clean up."

"I'm distressed to see something like this on the floor in the Finance room," said Coletti. "It's upsetting. It's very upsetting."

"These values are supposed to be classified information until the values are released," said Alderman Richard McGrath. "It's unprofessional."

"This is ridiculous and stupid," added McGrath.

Many aldermen quickly reviewed the values to find their own property on the maps and compared assessments of property throughout the city.

Palmer, who heads the revaluation, said the new values should be released sometime early this week. Palmer had originally predicted that the new values would be released Jan. 28.

The values can not be mailed until the state Department of Revenue has approved the residential revaluation. Palmer said Monday he was going to call the state agency Tuesday to set a date for final review by the agency. The project is more than a month behind the city submitted schedule to the state.

Magni wins union election

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON— Acting Police Union President Robert Magni, last week defeated a former president in a bid for the new union presidency.

Magni, who last April was voted president of the 190-member union after Allan Ciccone resigned from the post, received 75 percent of the votes. A 13-year veteran of the police force, Magni took 130 votes to Ciccone's 31 votes.

A total of 166 union members cast ballots.

George Stolpinski, unopposed in his bid for the collective bargaining post, received 63 votes. Charles McLean and John Claflin took 89 and 70 votes respectively, for the board of director positions. Linda Glenn, Bobert Fitzpatrick and Richard Monforte were elected to the grievance committee. James Dangelo is the new grievance committee specialist. Thomas Frost was elected union secretary and John Cox received 128 votes in his unopposed bid for the treasures post.

Last year 100,000 babies were born mentally retarded.

50,000 didn't have to be.

PUBLIC MEETING FOR WELLESLEY
EXTENSION
METROPOLITAN
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS

The MDC is currently conducting a planning project for the purpose of upgrading its sewage collection facilities for parts of Brookline, Dedham, Hyde Park, Needham, Newton, Wellesley and West Roxbury. The project, known as the Wellesley Extension Sewer Facilities Plan, was begun in August, 1981 and will be completed in June, 1982. Investigations to date have revealed that there is insufficient capacity in the existing sewers to carry wastewater flows to the Nut Island treatment facility. This results in sewer backups and overflow of sewage to the Charles River and its tributaries. Furthermore, the present conditions are expected to worsen in time.

The second Public Meeting on this project is scheduled for 8:00 P.M. on March 3, 1982 at the Needham Public Library, 1139 Highland Avenue, Needham. The purpose of this meeting is to present final projections for population and wastewater flows through 2020; specific areas where problems exist; and possible solutions to those problems. The discussion will be centered on alternative solutions such as relief sewers; pumping stations; flow equalization basins; water conservation programs; infiltration/inflow reduction; and replacement of existing sewers with larger sewers. Preliminary costs and locations of facilities will be presented for comment at this meeting.

Any questions or concerns may be addressed prior to the Public Meeting by contacting either Jack Hamm at the MDC (727-5259) or Dave Goodemote at S E A Consultants, Inc. (742-1133). Office of Project Planning and Management, Sewerage Division, Metropolitan District Commission, Jean M. Haggerty, Director.

These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

Flu watchers optimistic

ATLANTA (UPI) — Flu watchers at the national Centers for Disease Control are cautiously optimistic that the upcoming influenza season will be a mild one.

Where the unpredictable flu virus is concerned, however, they are hedging their bets.

Dr. Alan Kendall, a virologist specializing in influenza research at the CDC, said in an interview that there were virtually no reports of flu activity in the United States this past summer and no buildup of cases during the past few months.

"If that's any indication, then maybe we will have a quiet winter," he said. But, he added, "Of course, you never know with influenza."

Although influenza experts at the CDC don't know for certain how severe or widespread this type of respiratory illness will be in any given fall and winter, they do know what type of flu virus strains will be circulating. That knowledge is based primarily on what happened during the Southern Hemisphere's winter, which occurs during our summer.

Kendall said two subtypes of the influenza-A virus, plus the B-Singapore virus, caused illness in South American countries during their winter. For this reason, and others, a vaccine containing protective antigens against the A-Bangkok, A-Brazil and B-Singapore flu varieties is now available in the United States.

"It's the best barometer we've got," said Kendall, "but of course it is not a reliable indicator of what might happen (in this country)." Nothing has happened in the Southern Hemisphere, Kendall said, "that would lead us to believe something unusual may occur."

It takes two weeks for the body to build up protection against flu viruses following vaccination. Persons for whom flu shots are recommended should get their immunizations as quickly as possible, Kendall said.

Symptoms of influenza include abrupt onset of fever, chills, headache, muscle pains and sometimes prostration. Nasal congestion and sore throat are common in the later stages of the disease and a cough is almost universal, often severe and protracted.

It is considered a dangerous disease because of the rapidity with which epidemics strike, the height of the attack rates and the seriousness of complications.

Tips on home fire safety

PUEBLO, Colo. (UPI) — A $1.50 government booklet could be the most important "insurance premium" of your life.

"Home Fire Safety" tells how to prevent a type of disaster that generally happens when everyone is asleep. Many home fire deaths are caused, not by the blaze itself, but by smoke and gas.

More than 6,000 deaths and nearly 30,000 injuries result each year from home fires. The ignition sources include gasoline, flammable fabrics in clothing, cigarettes and space heaters.

Among the preventive measures listed in the booklet are:

—Store gasoline outside the house and well away from ignition sources.

—Store gas only in containers designed specifically for that purpose.

—Never use gas to clean clothes, machine parts or anything else.

—Light outdoor grills with charcoal starter and never throw starter fluid or any other flammable liquid on smoldering or burning fires.

—Follow manufacturers' instructions for flame-resistant clothing to preserve their protective quality.

—Teach everyone in your household to "drop and roll" on the floor or ground if their clothing should catch fire.

—Don't wear loose clothing when you're cooking.

—Keep upholstered furniture and furnishings away from heat sources.

—If you smoke, don't put your ashtray on the arm of upholstered furniture.

—Don't smoke when you are drowsy, drinking alcohol or taking medication.

—Outfit your home with at least one smoke detector close to where you sleep, and test it once a month to be sure it's working.

"Home Fire Safety" may be ordered from the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 201K, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

New car bumpers are holding up

Since 1979 automakers have been required to equip cars with bumpers that will allow the vehicle to get through a 5-mph accident undamaged. But the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration proposes to eliminate all crash standards for rear bumpers and either eliminate the front-bumper standard or reduce it from 5 mph to 2.5 mph.

In testing cars, Consumer Reports has rammed bumpers with a "bumper basher" — a heavy steel battering ram that crashes into the bumper at 5 mph. Before 1979, it was not unusual to have to replace the bumper following this test and make other repairs on what was often extensive damage. But on many new cars, CR auto-test engineers have found no visible damage after an encounter with the basher.

The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety got similar results in crash tests conducted last year. Out of 12 1980 cars that were crashed into a barrier at 5 mph, not one car sustained damage. Ten years ago in the same test on 1972 models, the damage averaged $200 per car. That would be more than $400 per car at today's repair prices.

The new bumpers resulting from the 5-mph standard also pose smaller hazards to pedestrians, since they have a greater capacity to absorb the force of impact in an accident.

Under the law, NHTSA can roll back the bumper standard if it can show that the cost of the standard outweighs its benefits.

NHTSA recently did a new cost-benefit analysis that the agency claims shows the 5-mph bumper standard isn't worth it.

In assessing the cost of the regulation, one of the factors figured in by NHTSA was the cost of the time it would take a consumer to negotiate repairs, deliver a car for repairs, arrange for other transportation while repairs were made and get reimbursed by the insurance company.

Rep. Cohen earns a commendation

NEWTON — Representative David B. Cohen (D-Newton) has received the commendation of the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) for supporting the successful efforts on behalf of local government during the 1981 legislative session.

Noting that the 1981 session required a "series of very difficult decisions" on the part of legislators, the commendation from the statewide municipal organization described the representative as displaying "sensitivity to the problems of local government and awareness of the need for state action of behalf of municipalities."

"This was a year in which the cities and towns of the commonwealth could not have survived without the willingness of the legislature to cushion the impact of Proposition 2½ by providing increased local aid and greater local flexibility," said MMA Executive Director James Segel in thanking the representative.

"The Association," added Segel, "extends its thanks for efforts on the floor, for votes on the issues, and for work in committee which supported and promoted legislation necessary for local government."

Among the actions taken by the legislature in its 1981 session were appropriation of $265 milion in new local aid, adoption of new laws that place control of county budgets in the hands of cities and towns (which pay county costs), enactment of new parking fine legislation that will allow communities to keep all proceeds from fines, and passage of civil service reform. "We owe our warmest thanks to the legislature as a whole, and to this legislator for dedicated and effective effort," Segel concluded.

Nursing Home Advocates sponsor workshop series

NEWTON — The public is invited to learn how to put their concern for nursing and rest home residents to work in February and March.

West Suburban Nursing Home Advocates will sponsor two series of training workshops, both free and open to the public. The first will take place over five evenings from late February to early March; the second during five days in late March. Exact schedules and locations, as well as transportation information, will be available in mid-February.

The curriculum focuses on information for "ombudsperson" volunteers, but all interested persons are encouraged to attend. Information about the nursing home ombudson program, aging issues, services for and rights of nursing home residents, and other aspects of long-term care will be presented. Those who complete all five sessions will receive a special state certificate.

Preregistration is required. Please call 244-7157.

Credit for college or university field placement can often be arranged. The advocacy program is funded by West Suburban Elder Services, Inc., and is a part of Metropolitan Ministries, Inc. The program is in its fourth year and has received a certificate of "recognition of high standards" from the Voluntary Action Center.

See 'Ollie' if you want something done

NEWTON— A recently retire traffic supervisor, laid-up as the result of a "football injury" got a pleasant surprise recently from some of the schoolchildren she supervised in Newtonville.

To show their appreciation to Olympia Pasquarosa, who retired recently after 24 years of service, a group of children surprised Pasquarosa at her Newtonville home with a cake, hellium balloons and gifts they offered to the native Newtonite. It was their way of saying "thanks" to "Ollie."

"I was shocked when those children came to the door. It really broke me up. I really love those kids," said Pasquarosa, who has seven children of her own.

Pasquarosa said the most impressive period of her 24 years as a traffic supervisor was the 19 years she spent at Park and Tremont Streets, Newton Corner. "Those kids told me I was the only one who talked to them. They really became a part of me." Pasquarosa was more than a crossing guard to those children, who saw her as a substitute mother to share their secrets and problems. "They were very attached to me," she now says.

Pasquarosa has been an active volunteer in numerous organizations throughout the city. Though she's now retired from her police department job, Pasquarosa doesn't intend to stop her volunteer work.

"I could never stay home," says Pasquarosa, who is thinking about working at the Little Peoples School for special children in West Newton. "I'm a product of the Depression. It's helped me become a service orientated person. In a way, it's made me a better person."

But first, Pasquaros is waiting for her "football injury" to heal. "I was watching my sons play football at the Albemarle Playground and was accidentally knocked over. So I'm laid-up for a while."

"Ollie is living proof of the adage 'If you want something done, give it to a busy person,'' said Lt. Charles Feeley, of police community services and longtime friend of Pasquarosa.

Pasquarosa has been a member of the Underwood School P.T.A., The American Legion Women's Auxiliary, Rebecca Pomeroy House Nursery School P.T.A., Ladies of the Newton Athletic Association, Newton Citizens for Education, Our Lady's parish Christian family movement, Wards 7 and 2 Democratic Committee, a former chairlady for 10 years with the March of Dimes, and an appointed member of the Massachusetts State Narcotics Committee.

In 1970 she was named one of the ten outstanding community leaders in the Northeast by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Holiday trash pickup overtime appropriated

NEWTON — A Department of Public Works request for $93,000 to continue holiday trash collection was approved by aldermen Monday night by a 20 to 1 vote.

The Mann administration had originally planned to curtail the holiday collection at a savings of $90,000 to taxpayers, but the service was reinstated after union opposition last June.

Mayor Theodore Mann and administration officials, however, never told aldermen of the decision to reimplement holiday collection. As a result, the collection, eliminated by the board in budget hearings, has continued without funding until now.

Alderman Rodney Barker, who "chartered" (halted debate on) the request at the 24 member legislative body's last meeting, was the sole opponent to the overtime request.

Barker, who has repeatedly protested overtime appropriations, said he is "frustrated" with the "draining" of city funds by overtime.

Aldermen also unanimously approved $35,000 to the Department of Public Works for snow and ice removal.

In other action, aldermen

•established a sub-committee to develop a formal request for proposals for selecting an independent auditor to review city accounts.

•approved $23,000 for workmen's compensation for five municipal employees including $14,000 for one.

• aproved $325 for in-state travel expenses for the city clerk's office.

• approved a delayed request for approximately $3,000 in funds for Water and Sewer Department bills during 1980.

• approved $2,500 to cover the cost of pre-employment physical examinations for municipal employees.

•approved a $130 transfer for a health department CPR course.

•appointed Cynthia Black to Cultural Affairs Commission.

•reappointed John Tedeschi to the Youth Commission.

•appointed Jane Pitt to the Recreation Commission.

• appointed Alexander Frisch to the Beautification Commission.

'Excessive force' case now goes to DA

WALTHAM — Conflicting reports from police officers have sent an alleged "excessive force" arrest case at Lanai Island Restaurant Jan. 16. to the district attorney for action.

The Middlesex County District Attorney's office is also investigating an alleged death threat against one of the defendants who is filing a cross-complaint against police for assault and battery.

Waltham Police Internal Affairs Officer Capt. John A. Benson said the district attorney has the power to grant immunity and order lie detector tests.

When asked, Capt. Benson indicated there were conflicting reports from police officers on the scene the night of the arrest and the D.A.'s power to grant immunity and order lie detector tests might resolve the situation.

Capt. Benson called the news media in at 2 p.m. Friday, but there was a delay of about three quarters of an hour while Capt. Benson interviewed one of the women who claim to be witnesses to police using excessive force during the arrest of four Newton young men. Four civilian witnesses have come forward.

Arrested were David Rines of 36 Orchard Ave., William Connell of 367 Albemarle Rd., James Martin Jr, of 11 Rossmere St. and James Kivlehan of 58 Warwick Rd., all of Newton.

Rines and Connell face charges of assault and a battery on a police officer and disturbing the peace. Martin and Kivlehan are charged with disturbing the peace with Martin facing an additional charge of possession of marijuana.

Rines has asked for a cross-complaint of assault and battery against arresting officer Leonard Cincotta. The latter was on paid detail at the restaurant when it is alleged the youths started throwing bread, would not stop and finally resisted arrest in the case of Rines and Connell.

Through his attorney William Matthews of Newton, Rines has alleged he received a phone threat last Wednesday in which the caller allegedly said, "If you don't drop the charges against the police, you're (expletive deleted) dead."

Matthews denied a published report that his client will allege the assault and battery took place inside the restaurant rather than outside. "My client will tell his story and point the finger," said Matthews.

Rines says a bone under his eye was broken and Connell was treated at Waltham Hospital for a broken nose.

First Asst. Dist. Atty. Howard Whitehead said the request from the Waltham police had been received and the report of the alleged death threat. He said both are under investigation and a decision on whether to enter the case could be made today or tomorrow.

Capt. Benson said "because of the complexity of the case" Chief Edward J. Sicotte has assigned Deputy Chief John F. Rooney and Det. Capt. John R. McDonald to join the investigation. Capt. Benson's formal statement said in part:

"As a result of interviews of most officers concerned and all civilian witnesses that have elected to come forward, Chief Edward J. Sicotte through the office of the city solicitor has requested District Attorney John Droney to enter the case and participate in the criminal investigation to the extent he deems advisable and to use investigative procedures available to the district attorney, e.g., the possible granting of immunity and/or use of the polygraph (lie detector)."

Dr. Eugenia Marcus and friend

A very special (furry) patient

By Eileen Fitzgerald

LOWER FALLS — Newton-Wellesley Hospital pediatrician Eugenia Marcus, of Newton has been treating a very special patient.

At first glance, dressed in green corduroys and a red T-shirt, he looks like other six-month old patients.

But when he turns his head, there is no mistaking his identity. His wide, flaring nostrils and long, black fur are a dead give-away.

Why is a pediatrician providing health care for a gorilla? This particular gorilla happens to be the first one born in New England and many feel he deserves special treatment.

Actually, it makes sense that a pediatrician provide care for a baby gorilla since its anatomy and health care needs are similar to those of a human child. In fact, gorillas are susceptible to many human diseases and must be immunized against illnesses such as polio, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough.

So far Dr. Marcus has given this baby gorilla his shots and has been playing an active role in his health care since his birth last June.

Dr. Marcus became involved with the gorilla's care when the veterinarian of the Stone Zoo, in Stoneham asked her to serve as a consultant. Dr. Marcus says she first treated the baby 72 hours after he was born. "He was rejected by his mother at birth and would have died had he not received prompt medical attention," she says, since rejection is a common phenomenon among female gorillas born in captivity. "Not having been raised with other females, they simply don't know how to nurture their young."

To ensure his safety and survival, the baby was given to his present human caretaker (who maintains anonymity to discourage curiosity-seekers) shortly after his birth. Dr. Marcus said gorillas need a proper diet, medical care, a warm envirorlment and social interaction (with other gorillas or humans) to develop fully.

Public safety consolidation?

Fire chief against merger

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Citing the heavy radio traffic over the city's Fire Department communications network, Chief Edward Reilly Monday came out against a proposed merger of the Newton Fire and Police Departments.

The proposal is aimed at improving management practices and reducing overtime costs in the two departments. Alderman Edward Richmond, who asked aldermen to look into the possible merger recommended hiring of a management consultant firm to study the two departments with a view to increase efficiency.

Public Safety Chairman Joseph DePasquale has appointed a subcommittee, headed by Alderman Richard Bulwinkle, to look into the item.

Both Fire Union Chief Robert Rallo and Police Union Chief Robert Magni thought that a merger of the two public safety departments or a joint communications network involving the Police and Fire Departments could not operate successfully in a city of Newton's size.

Police Chief William Quinn, who was in favor of a consolidation of the communication networks four years ago would not comment on the proposal Monday.

Richmond, who noted the successful merger in North Adams (a city

Cerebral palsy clients

Workshop feels the budget axe

By Richard Lodge
Graphic Editor

NEWTON CORNER - Lee Miller says the cerebral palsy workshop on Centre Street is in "really bad shape.

"It's going from day-to-day."

The workshop based in the former Methodist Church serves about 30 multiple handicapped adults in-house and over 500 through community programs but, like other social service agencies, its funding appears headed toward rock bottom, staffers say.

Officially called Massachusetts Cerebral Palsy of Greater Boston, the workshop deals with a unique clientele, according to Lynch.

"We're talking about the 20% (of the multiple handicapped) that gets left out," he said last week. "A lot of them have been institutionalized but then they're mainstreamed into the community."

> 'How many cake sales or Las Vegas nights can you have to pay for everything..'

The funding problems for the workshop, which teaches printing, woodworking and office skills, comes as much from cutbacks in allocation of state funding as from an increasingly tight pocketbook in private sector donations.

Cerebral palsy usually stems from problem births when an infant does not receive sufficient oxygen, Lynch said. The 500-plus clients of the local workshop suffer not only from disabilities limiting their mobility and dexterity but most also have combined problems with learning or speech disabilities or emotional problems.

Many clients who work in the basement of the old church were once institutionalized or worked in community-based workshops which generally required some type of daily production quota.

Stricter liquor regulations urged

NEWTON — In an effort to clamp down on liquor establishments for alcohol violations, the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee has recommended the Police Department and the Newton Board of License Commissioners formulate guidelines to investigate complaints.

Following voicing of numerous complaints from Nonantum residents, the committee voted unanimously to have the parties involved "hash out" a pair of guidelines presented to aldermen Monday night. The action is the result of a docket item filed by Alderman Bruce Carmichael.

There are 103 liquor serving establishments in the city and nine fall within a mile radius in Nonantum.

Carmichael, the ward alderman, said he is particularly disturbed with the number of alcohol-related fights in the city and the accessibility that minors have to alcohol.

"The fact that minors are being served should come as no surprise to anyone," said Carmichael. "These guidelines should serve as a stern warning to any liquor establishment in the city."

Police Chief William Quinn and Carleton Merrill of the Licensing Board both said there is a "very good relationship" between the commission and the department.

"I don't know of a single police report we have not looked into," said Merrill. "At the present time the Police Department and the Licencing Commission are doing a very credible job."

Merrill, who said that there has previously "been nothing in writing" on the relationship between the commission and the department, noted the Licencing Board "could live with either" set of guidelines.

Police Detective William Whalen, who has been appointed by Quinn as the Liquor Licensing Officer, said his office is in the process of setting up seminars for bartenders in the city that will inform them of "their responsibilities in regard to serving people in their establishments."

Whalen, as the Liquor Licensing Officer, shall investigate complaints of alcohol violations relative to licenced establishments in the city, youth drinking violations and alcohol related violence. These finished reports will then be turned over to the Liquor Licensing Commission.

The guidelines submitted by Carmichael are more specific than those now enforced by the Police Department and would require Whalen to submit to the Licensing Commissioin a weekly report regarding any disturbances in restaurants with an alcoholic licence; complaints issued by residents; and violations. -Jonathan Greenspan

State looks at refusal on release of names

NEWTON - The state supervisor of public records will review the refusal last week of the school superintendent to release names of applicants for the Newton North High principal's job.

On Thursday, following advice from the city solicitor's office, Superintendent Aaron Fink responded to a freedom of information request from The Newton Graphic, restating his refusal to release names of the 96 applicants for the job held by North Principal Richard Mecham.

Mecham has announced that he will retire at the end of this school year.

On Friday attorney Marianne O'Brien of Secretary of State Michael Connolly's office said that in line with previous public records rulings - including one in early January - Supervisor of Public Records James Igoe's "position is that everything is public in such a case."

Two weeks ago Fink refused to reveal names of the expected half

Putting 'pizazz' in school lunch

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Putting "pizazz" back into school lunches was unanimously approved by the School Committee Monday night as the best strategy for reducing the lunch program's $160,000 deficit.

Although a third price hike at the secondary level was recommended recently by Support Services Director, Roy Cornelius, the committee voted to hold current lunch prices and suspend self-imposed restrictions on serving hot dogs, potato chips, submarine sandwiches and other "popular" items.

A hiring freeze was also approved for staff with the secondary lunch program and Chairperson Nancy Mann said negotiations will begin immediately to try to reduce labor costs for next year.

The committee voted to begin efforts to hire a consultant who would analyse the lunch program and make recommendations for next year.

In a study of options for the lunch program, committee members Susan Silbey and Leonard Gentile along with Cornelius found that a price hike would "automatically reduce" the number of students buying

Report strange calls to police

NEWTON — Newton Police Chief William F. Quinn said this week several Newton women have been receiving questionable telephone calls from a man representing himself as a doctor from the Newton Health Department. The man has been asking them personal questions regarding pap smears and other highly private matters, Chief Quinn said.

The Newton Health Department does not have such a doctor nor would it conduct surveys of this type by telephone. The chief suggests anyone receiving such a call should hang up immediately and report the call to the Newton Police.

North settlement may cut city debt

NEWTON — The $1.4 million settlement resulting from inadequate design of the heating and ventilating system at Newton North High School may be used to reduce the city's bond debt.

The Aldermanic Finance Committee Monday night gave initial approval to Mayor Theodore Mann's request that the settlement be used to retire bond notes for asbestos removal and the heating and ventilating work at the high school.

City Treasurer Theodore Scafidi and City Comptroller Lawrence Marino also recommended that the money be used to reduce the debt. City officials said the move will secure the city's AAA credit rating — the highest in the state.

"It shows our financial stability and strength," said Scafidi. "These are things that will give more credence and strength to our Triple A credit rating."

The settlement in the case came last November after a seven year legal battle over design flaws at the high school. A city claim for approximately $200,000 against two subcontractors and an $11,000 suit brought by a New Hampshire construction company against the city have not yet been settled.

In related action, the committee approved $15,000 for the Boston law firm of Hill and Barlow. The law firm represented the city in the settlement case and the outstanding claims involving alleged deficiencies in the pool and roof.

In other action, the committee gave initial approval to:

•approximately $3,000 for the city's share of the MBTA Advisory Board budget.

•approximately $11,000 for police injuries.

•$900 to settle a claim of an area resident whose car was struck by a city vehicle that allegedly ran a red light.

Right place, at right time

Two Newton men helped in White Mountain rescue

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON— Newton residents Geoffrey May and David Boudreau, who two weeks ago helped rescue two hikers trapped in the snow of New Hampshire's White Mountains, are quite modest about the vital role they played in the rescue efforts.

"The way I see it, we were at the right place at the right time," says May, a 24-year-old from Newton Corner.

Boudreau and May, who for several days had been vacationing in the mountains, spent more than hour hiking through the snow in pursuit of the two young climbers, who had been missing for three days. The pair did not know that one man with a rescue team already died in an attempt to find the missing boys.

"It's one of those experiences that we'll never forget," said Boudreau, 23, a marketing administrator at Honeywell's Information System in Waltham.

The secret ingredient for the safe rescue: Keep 'a cool head through it all.'

After a long hike with 80-pound packs on their backs, the pair finally found the two seriously frostbitten teenage boys in the deep snow of the mountain's summit. Boudreau and May immediately administered emergency first aid and spent another hour awaiting help from a helicopter rescue crew. Eventually, a paramedic arrived and with his help, Boudreau and May carried the boys to the helicopter and safety.

"It did give me a good feeling," said Boudreau, who spent the better part of Monday and Tuesday answering questions from curious friends and coworkers.

Close friends since their cub scout days and throughout their high school years at St. Sebastian's in Newton, both Boudreau and May are experienced hikers with several years experience. May, a graduate student in geology at Idaho State University, has hiked through British Columbia and throughout the United States.

"The experience reenforced my feelings that you should know the area you're hiking through," said Boudreau, who stressed that the two lost climbers weren't familiar with the area or equiped to hike under the weather conditions.

Two days before their rescue effort, a girl came by their camp and said two climbers were missing. On Tuesday, the same girl returned, announcing that she located the two boys, who were trapped by the snow and huddled under a boulder.

"I got out a map and made sure we knew exactly where we were going," said May. "We made sure that we didn't go too fast either, so we wouldn't jeopardize ourselves. We didn't want to be tired and out of breath when we got there. We wanted to be useful."

No one else had arrived when they finally got to the boys, said May. "One of the guys was in pretty good shape. He could talk to us. The other guy was in bad condition, almost delerious. He could only mumble," said May, who added that the boys clothes were frozen to his body.

"We took off his frozen clothes and put on him our wool shirts and down parkers," said May, who was trained in advanced first aid by the American Red Cross and mountain rescue through his university studies.

Comforting the two boys, who now are still being treated at a Lawrence hospital, May said, "We told them everything would be OK. They were really glad we were there."

The second boy, who appeared to be less serious condition, was wrapped in a down parker and put inside a sleeping bag. "We gave him some water because he was very dehydrated," said May. However the boy was so frostbitten that he had to squeeze the water bottle with both hands.

"It was the first time I'd ever put a bandage on someone," said May. "But I remembered what the procedure was in that kind of a situation."

"I had no formal training, just reading on hypothermia and mountain rescue," said Boudreau. "I did keep a cool head through it all, and a lot of things came back to me," added Boudreau. "I can't think of anything I'd do differently."

May's emergency flairs alerted a helicopter, which air-dropped a paramedic one hour later. Another hour later, they carried the boys to a site several yards away, were a helicopter lifted them to safety. Even after their 3 1/2-hour effort, Boudreau and May still had another two-hour hike back from the mountain summitt. "I was pretty tired. I took alot out of me," said May.

According to Boudreau, the teenagers made an unwise decision by climbing up to the mountain's summit in sub-degree weather and snow that was shoulder-deep. "Experience has taught me not to take those kinds of risks," stressed Boudreau.

Still, both feel they would be able to do it again. "We helped at the end of a four-day effort. We made a contribution to the effort."

Temple plans Purim events

NEWTON — Celebrate Purim, as Temple Emanuel PTA holds its annual Purim Carnival on Sunday, March 7 from 1 to 3 p.m. The sponsors promise double the fun this year, with two carnivals, one to be held in the Benjamin Vestry for children seven years of age and younger, and another to be held in the Community Hall for children eight and older.

An afternoon of activity has been planned for children of all ages (and this includes adults) with over 30 game booths being run under the direction of the parents and children. In addition to the traditional crowning of Queen Esther and hanging of Haman booths, there will be face painting, sponge throws, silly photos, bowling, flower making, electronic games, and more, at reasonable of prices for an afternoon of fun.

The clients on Centre Street, Lynch said, are in the 20% with multiple handicaps which often means they cannot stand up under the pressure of quotas or daily concentrated social interaction.

These clients, Lynch said, can learn to do constructive chores but only in the heavily-supervised and low-pressure atmosphere of a place like the workshop. And that is where the problem lies.

"There is actually no funding that is set aside for this type of client," he said last week. "There are services available but there's no money available."

The workshop, in Newton since 1947, was once affiliated with the United Cerebral Palsy organization but Lynch said several years ago, "We felt we could probably raise funds better on our own."

Money from the Massachusetts Rehabilitation Commission and private groups helped carry the local workshop but now, Lynch said, MassRehab has taken a closer look at its limited funding and decided the Newton workshop may be closed out of the picture.

Since many of the local clients may never advance beyond the skills they learn in the church basement Lynch said MassRehab decided for the same money it could help train many more less handicapped individuals.

"They know our problems here," he said. "And they're sympathetic. But they have a choice of what they are able to do for a certain price."

Referring to the severity of handicaps of some of his clients Lynch said, "When you are talking a physical and a mental disability, this is where you run into your problem. They may reach a certain point where they can't be rehabilitated any longer."

With MassRehab funding cut back in line with social service funding cutbacks nationwide Lynch said the Mass. Cerebral Palsy workshop turned to community fund-raising, such as Las Vegas nights and even a house raffle coming up on the South Shore.

"But how many cake sales or Las Vegas nights can you have to pay for everything?" he asked.

Another source of funding, Chapter 766 aid for special education, is shrinking for the local workshop since many communities have opted for placing less handicapped students in workshops closer to home.

Without increased funding from state and private sources, Lynch said, most of the clients could end up in nursing homes or institutions "and they'd be receiving no services at all."

In the Newton workshop, Lynch said, "They are happy and they are proud that they're contributing something."

TEAMWORK - Working together to get the job done is stressed at the Cerebral Palsy workshop in Newton Corner, as demonstrated by (from foreground) Louie, Albert, Walter and Jimmy.

Dukakis sweeps voting in caucuses

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Former Governor Michael Dukakis handily swept seven of eight wards in the Democratic caucuses held here Saturday.

Dukakis captured 46 of the 50 total delegates elected from the city with Governor Edward J. King grabbing three delegates in State Rep. A. Joseph DeNucci's (D-Newton-Waltham) ward 3, according to a count from the Dukakis camp. A tie between a Dukakis delegate and a King delegate was unresolved in ward 3.

Supporters for Lt. Governor Thomas P. O'Neill 3rd were shut out here, but battled hard for a slate in ward 4. The 16 alternate delegates are also committed to the Dukakis camp, according to several counts.

Dukakis captured 67 percent of the more than 3,000 delegates elected statewide Saturday, according to Dukakis estimates. King followed with 22 percent, O'Neill with 5 percent.

Although the convention is not legally binding, convention rules require a candidate to get at least 15 percent of the convention vote in order to win a spot on the September primary ballot.

"We set to organizing very early and worked hard on it for three months," said Dukakis Newton campaign coordinator Tony Croce. "We just had the numbers."

"It is a perfect example of organization," said City Democratic Committee Chairman Thomas Concannon. "It was clearly a statewide sweep."

The big battle was in ward 3 at the Davis School where DeNucci loyalists turned out to oppose the Dukakis slate. More than 300 registered Democrats, the largest in any of the city caucuses, turned out to vote.

DeNucci complained that many Democrats were turned away. "I had more people there that weren't allowed to register," said the veteran state representative and King supporter. DeNucci said he was "aggravated and upset" by the turnaway of democrats.

"The most important thing is the September primary," said DeNucci, claiming that the King camp did not make a strong effort to win the caucuses.

"It was a strategic thing," he said. "They (King campaign officials) didn't really put any resources in it. Our ballgame is taking it to the people."

"The Dukakis people were very, very organized," admitted DeNucci. "It was a mission for them. It was a crusade."

Former Alderman Paul Burke (King delegate) and Board of Aldermen President Matthew Jefferson (Dukakis delegate) both captured 145 votes for the third delegate spot in ward 3.

Under party rules, a runoff should have been held between the two delegates. However, the ward 3 caucus was adjourned before the final tally.

Croce filed an objection with the Dukakis committee. DeNucci, however, said that he was not going to appeal. Democratic leaders did not know how the tie would be resolved.

"It may have to be decided by the state committee," speculated Croce.

"We don't know what is going to happen," said former Alderman William Carmen who helped organize the Dukakis slate in ward 3.

Carmen said that the delegate battle in ward 3 was perhaps the "toughest in the state."

"I don't think any ward in the state was as close as this," he said. "This was a cliffhanger. Three or four people could have swept it for either side."

Two King delegates topped the ballots in ward 3 where no more than six votes seperated the King and Dukakis delegates. In wards 1,2,5,6, and 8 the Dukakis slates faced little or token opposition.

In ward 4, an O'Neill slate, put together by Alderman Richard McGrath, was defeated by a 120 to 96 vote, according to an O'Neill count.

"I am sure that was the only ward in the area that he got that much support," noted McGrath, who also complained that Democrats were turned away because the doors were closed at the ward 4 caucus by 2:30 p.m.

Under party rules, each caucus must elect the same number of men and women. At least three men and three women were elected from each ward here.

The delegates elected (not including alternates) are:

with a population of 18,000 to 20,000) told the public safety committee Monday a consolidation was "worthy of our exploration and discussion."

Richmond said he had "not sounded out" Mayor Theodore Mann's office on the possibility of consolidation. He said, however, he "knew the administration was in favor of a merger of the communications network."

Reilly, who heads the 30-community mutual aid MetroFire system, said because of Metrofire, the city "probably has the busiest communications network in all of Massachusetts."

"It would destroy the professionalism of each department," said Reilly of a consolidation.

Quinn said he "had an open mind on anything that would increase the efficiency of the Police Department."

Quinn noted that the study five years ago indicated there would be a cost savings in the long-run and a central dispatch building for 911 emergency calls "would increase efficiency a great deal."

Magni noted "consolidation means to consume" and said the bottom line of the meeting was "money."

"I don't know if it can work. Right now I don't have any information," said Magni. "Right now I'm not in favor of it."

Frank Roverson of the Massachusetts Municipal Association, a company that provided North Adams with consultation during its consolidation, spoke briefly Monday and indicated that although the "notion of fire and police mergers is relatively new in Massachusetts, this is not so across the country."

The Fire Department has spent $100,000 more than originally budgeted for overtime putting the department's total at $294,000. Reilly has blamed the overtime on contract restrictions and is expected to come before the board to ask for at least $75,000 in additional funds.

Quinn has not requested additional overtime funds but has received aldermanic approval to transfer funds within the departmental budget for overtime.

Early music is offered

NEWTON CENTRE — Early music performance activities at Bowen Community School, 280 Cypress St., Newton Centre, will begin on March 4. Those interested in participating should register now. There will be classes both for instrumentalists and for singers.

For singers, the offering is a new adult madrigal group. For players of early instruments and some modern instruments (strings, flute, oboe, bassoon, guitar), the successful Renaissance music performing group will be offered again. Both classes will meet on Thursday evenings; for further information, please call 527-5788.

These early music courses are open to all adult residents of Newton; they can be found listed under "Bowen School" in the Newton Community Schools catalog, which is in the mail now. If you have not received a catalog by the middle of February, you may get one by calling the Community Schools office at 552-7117.

Health Department to celebrate Heart Month

WEST NEWTON — The Newton Health Department encourages residents to join its staff in celebrating February, National Heart Month, declared by the American Heart Association. This is a perfect time to take a look at what you can do for your heart.

Recent research reports show that certain physical conditions and living habits increase the risk of heart disease. Many of these habits constitute the American way of life. There is no guarantee that following these measures will prevent heart disease, but they may help.

You have probably all heard the following six ways to guard your heart — but they are worth repeating:

1. Have your blood pressure checked regularly. High blood pressure can lead to heart attack. Fortunately, though, with continued medical care, high blood pressure can be controlled.

2. Don't smoke cigarettes. Heart attack death rate is 50 to 200 percent higher for cigarette smokers. Yet the rate declines to almost that of a nonsmoker when you quit!

3. Eat foods low in cholesterol. Fish and poultry contian less cholesterol than red meats.

4. Maintain your proper weight. Eating a well balanced diet at regular times helps keep weight down. If you do want to loose weight, check with your physician and avoid fad diets.

5. Exercise regularly. Not only will this help keep your heart in shape, but it relaxes tension, keeps you away from the refrigerator and helps you look good!

6. Get regular check ups.

The Health Department can help you learn more about these six healthy heart tips. Call 552-7058 for information on weight reudction classes, evening health maintenance clinics, stop smoking programs and CPR training.

What's the point?

What is the point of a newspaper pursuing release of a list of applicants' names for the second most important school department job in the city of Newton?

Is it, as one letter to the editor claims this week, simply a grandstand play, pushing an issue just to make a point?

Or is it that a newspaper, as a representative of the public, simply doesn't like surprises? Is it that a newspaper, which is charged with covering the news and lives of taxpayers in this city doesn't like to sit outside a process and wait for one neatly-wrapped package to be left at the School Committee's door while all the other choices are sent back to the store without a word?

A move, through a request under the state's Freedom of Information Act, to gain release of the names of applicants for the Newton North High School principal's job brought a negative response from Superintendent Aaron Fink last week. Fink and City Solicitor Daniel Funk both deserve credit for treating this "grandstand" play with respect and seriousness, even though they came down on the other side of the issue.

Fink and the ad hoc committee have undoubtedly worked hard and with the best of intentions toward choosing a replacement for Principal Richard Mecham. But through it all what has the public learned of the process of choosing, the qualifications of the 96-odd applicants or the "draw" of Newton's school system reputation which induced so many applicants?

What has the public learned about the range of experience, diversity of educational philosophies or enthusiasm of any of the applicants? In a nutshell, nothing.

Superintendent Fink, to his credit, says he will discuss "exactly where we are" in the interview stage this week. Presumably one or more good candidates will come out of the series of interviews and the School Committee will give its stamp of approval.

Quite honestly, a request for intervention by the Secretary of State's office will probably bring a response too far down the road. But what exactly has the public learned of the process and people charged with choosing this new principal?

Only the public can look at the facts to answer that one.

Cutting kickbacks

Conscience doesn't figure much in settling up on taxes, either with your Uncle Samuel or the Commonwealth's collector. Everyone has a bit of larceny in his heart when it comes time to pay tribute in coin to the government, what with all those bureaucratic excesses and pork barreling as justification.

L. Joyce Hampers, the state's revenue chief, is giving short shrift to this kind of rationalization. She is taking aim on those who have been committing outright fraud.

Look at your state form and there it is on the first page in a paragraph labeled Notice–Underground Economy Income. Hampers' warning refers to familiar evasions, like side commissions, kickbacks and moonlighting jobs, but zeroes in on the criminal set as well. Thieves, gamblers and the proprietors or tradesmen who do cash skimming are targets.

Her intent is to strike fear of prosecution for perjury and fraud in as many trimmers as possible. We commend her for spelling it out so plainly. It might bring a lot more dollars into the till.

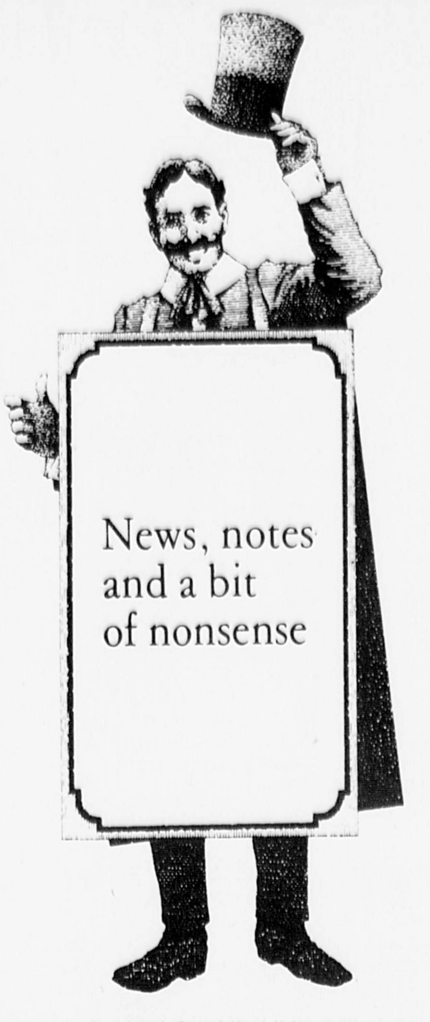
Graphically speaking

First, you bow to the East



News, notes and a bit of nonsense

Bow to the East

Those fellows in the Kiwanis Club of Newton may have slipped over the edge, if one can judge from a recent club newsletter.

The letter notes, that after opening of the weekly meeting, Jack Shaw did the prayer, prior to everyone chowing down and getting down to business.

Shaw, the letter reads, "gave a few brief passages from the Koran, bowed to the East and sat down."

Hmmmmmm.

'Only a secretary?'

Some secretaries, including Mayor Theodore Mann's former confidential secretary, Diana Ossinger, reprimanded Assistant City Solicitor Michael Pierce at a recent meeting.

Pierce was arguing that Ossinger was not a public official and therefore not entitled to $50,000 in legal fees under a city ordinance. Pierce said she was "only a secretary."

Ossinger snapped, "It's not a demeaning position!" Graphically speaking, those secretaries take a lot of heat.

Stand in the corner

A resident at the same meeting gave the entire Finance Committee a verbal licking for their "rude" behavior, noting the many conversations going on while people were speaking and the "attitude" of many aldermen.

Finance Committee Chairman Edward Richmond responded: "How do you think I feel I'm the chairman."

Maybe Richmond should discipline those who misbehave by making them stand in a corner like all bad school boys in disgrace. That just may get some "graphic" results.

Heart to heart

In the second edition of the City Hall employee newsletter there will be a special personal column for anonymous Valentine messages.

A notice sent to employees requests that the message be kept brief and that it be kept respectable for print. It could be the spiciest bit of news coming out of City Hall this year. Strange bedfellows.

No sharing of rooms

Alderman Richard McGrath, often a Mann critic, went on a trip to Chicago to review a waste to energy facility with Alderman Marcy Richmond, DPW Commissioner Charles Thomas and of course, his honor Mayor Theodore Mann.

The talk during the Public Facilities Committee meeting was how the two political stalwarts would get along on the trip. Said one aldermen: "How many return tickets are there?"

McGrath jested that he consented to go only if he shared a room with the mayor. Sounds like a SMASHING good time, Dick.

For Nancy's china set

Recently Congressman Barney Frank was one of about 500 people who attended a dinner-dance given by the "Azione Cattolica Italiano of Newton," a Catholic charitable organization.

After the dinner, held at Newton Catholic High School in Nonantum, a member sold raffle tickets, which listed several prizes, including an 18-piece Farberware set. The congressman purchased several tickets.

"Gee,I hope I win the Farberware set," said Frank to a group of people sitting around a table, "I'll take it to Washington. I hear Nancy Reagan needs it in the White House."

For those in love

And wouldn't you know, the U.S. Postal Service, those folks who speed your mail halfway around the world just to get it from the Highlands to Newton Corner (oh, we're going to get it for that one), have a new "Love" stamp issued just in time for the big day.

Don't worry, Postal Service, we still love you.

Happy Valentine's Day.

Marking time

Remember to bring popcorn

By Mark White

Some things in life are certain. The sun will rise in the morning. The sun will set at night. And the meetings of the Board of Aldermen provide the best entertainment in the city.

I still think the Board of Aldermen is the best legislative body in the state, but occassionally, not at its best.

Take the meeting of February 1, for all intents and purposes a simple meeting with a light docket.

The first item discussed was a request for $50,000 to pay the legal fees of Diana Ossinger.

From the opening bell it was clear that this item had a snowball's chance in hell of being approved but the debate, although relatively calm, provided some amusing moments.

Alderman Richard Bullwinkle began the festivities by analyzing the legal opinion of the City Solicitor, which I have done on many occasions. But in this instance Mr. Bullwinkle decided to take on the entire legal profession with such magnanimous quotes as "Lawyers are the hired gunslingers of society" and "some lawyers have done more to hurt society than any other profession".

Maybe, I'm reacting strongly because I happen to be an attorney, but I can't see why an intelligent elected official makes an inflammatory statement like that, especially to a board that has many lawyers as members.

Maybe he was trying to play to the five people in the audience or better yet make good copy.

Dick Bullwinkle has been around for too long and is too bright to make derogatory generalizations about a profession.

But, alas, politics is politics.

In the meantime, get this, Alderman Coletti and McGrath proposed a resolution requesting the Mayor to appropriate the money for Ms. Ossinger.

Obviously, a logical step! Wouldn't you appropriate money to pay for the attorney that's suing you? Believe it or not six aldermen voted for it! (DePasquale, Carmichael, Bullwinkle, McGrath, Malec, Coletti). This proposal would have seemed to be the highlight of the night but as a former alderman I know the board is capable of much better.

> 'Just imagine you could have picked up the paper the next morning and seen the headline: Surpise Mr. and Mrs. John Doe - Your house is now worth $120,000'

After a short debate about inserting a paragraph in a civil defense brochure about preparing for a nuclear war, the board adjourned.

But the best was yet to come.

Lying in the committee room was a set of street plans with numbers on them. These numbers turned out to be the new property valuations. So while 9 or 10 aldermen and spectators thumbed through them comments were heard like:

"These can't be the values", "These are ridiculous", "My God, He'll have a heart attack when he sees his value", "We're going to have a revolution", and "What idiot left these lying around".

It was a panic watching everyone search for their valuation and watching the reaction.

Just imagine you could have picked up the paper the next morning and seen the headline: "SURPRISE MR. AND MRS. JOHN DOE - YOUR HOUSE IS NOW WORTH $120,000".

The whole thing would have been comical except that we are talking about the most important issue of this year. And judging from the values I saw this revaluation is going to make the Cole-Layer-Trumble revaluation look like a picnic.

Finally, to end the evening, Alderman Paul Coletti, chairman of the Revaluation Committee, after discovering that his taxes are going up, calmly called Harold Brady, the chairman of the Board of Assessors, and suggested that these documents be locked up.

Thus, the curtain came down on another installment of "General Chaos".

So next time you're thinking of going to a movie visit City Hall instead. True, there's no popcorn but the price is right and the plots are almost believable.

You guest it

Just a '14 karat klutz' she was

By Bernice Bennett

The waitress handed me a bib and proceeded to tie it behind me with an apologetic smile. I glared back at her! How did she know, I wondered? That she was waiting on a "14 karat klutz," I mean!

It reminded me of that dreamy evening when the new man in my life and I sat quietly, sipping our cocktails and anticipating the much touted dish of the house. I stirred the ice in my drink nonchalantly while I stole a furtive glance at the mound of spaghetti that was just put before me and casual-like wrapped it between my fork and spoon — like so!

> 'For years I have watched with envy dinner companions who twirled their chopsticks around succulent morsels and very deftly applied same to the common denominator.'

As he spoke, I ate with the utmost in "savoir-faire!" My heart tripped and thumped — the music in the background seductively played a romantic ballad when suddenly, he stopped and his gaze fell — to the cleavage in my dress — no doubt — the rascal — I thought! I kept up my scintillating conversation when a sticky, uncomfortable sensation began to attack my midriff and my hand reached down to brush my dress. It came in contact with — of all things — a glob of that — which I had thought was securely attached to my eating utensils. I glanced down furtively and saw a few more "ESCAPEES" rapidly sliding down my legs like rosy railroad runners and stared with horror and fascination while they snaked their way down to my feet and finally, lay collapsed and limp on my toes!

My sick smile conveyed nonchalance, I hope, as I waved my hand at him, murmuring "There's many a slip — between cup and lip — you know!" and decided to giggle the whole thing out of sight!

Now here's something else to contemplate — for surely this must constitute a "fait accompli!"

CHOPSTICKS!

For years I have watched with envy dinner companions who twirled their chopsticks around succulent morsels and very deftly applied same to the common denominator. One in particular, an acquaintance with worldly charm and who had in her possession "Mother-of-Pearl" chopsticks from one of her travels. We dined together and with a fantastic grace, she exercised the darn things with no great effort at all!

That night I boned up on mastering the art and found it could be done in three steps: 1. Balance the first chopstick on the ball of the third finger. This chopstick should not move.

2. Grasp the second chopstick between the thumb, first and second fingers and,

3. Lastly, using the second chopstick to open and close, it should not be difficult to pick up a morsel of food.

"Forewarned is Forearmed" or "forefingered," however the situation may be! With that in mind, I sat across from a business colleague, a very polished gentleman, indeed! I planned on making a memorable impression with my newly discovered art.

"Dare I?" I dared!

I removed the plastic covering and withdrew the wooden chopsticks. Two small pieces of shrimp were my first choice and I breathed a sigh of relief as each entered my mouth! Pressing my luck, I repeated the maneuver! Everything went like clockwork and I began to preen inwardly!

Poof! Nothing to it! All it takes is a steady hand and...Oops! Oh my gosh! I don't believe I did that!

The man I had been so intent on creating a professional liaison with — balefully looked at me — as he picked two pieces of Szechuan Pepper from the corner of his eye a wiped lobster sauce from his cheek — all the while muttering something about that other old adage.

It went something like..."THE TRIED AND TRUE"

League says comply with law

To the editor:

Dear Nancy Mann:

It has come to our attention that the School Committee's Superintendent Selection Committee does not consider itself under the jurisdiction of the open meeting law. We disagree.

It is our understanding that any ad hoc or subcommittee of a governmental body is subject to the same responsibilities under this law as the parent body. The School Committee and its appointees, however temporary, cannot evade these responsibilities.

We realize it is difficult to comply particularly in the situation of screening candidates for city jobs. We agree that making public the names of all applicants does not serve the public interest. However, with foresight and an understanding of the laws regarding open meetings and public records, the privacy of the initial group of applicants can be maintained.

Both the public interest and the effective operation of the subcommittee would be enhanced by compliance with this law. The public needs to know about the methods of recruitment, the criteria used to judge candidates, division of responsibilities on the committee, its calendar, and the names and particulars of its most seriously considered candidates (semi-finalists and up).

We recommend that you consult with other communities which have successfully chosen new superintendents while observing the open meeting law and hope that you will instruct the Superintendent Selection Committee to hold open sessions as soon as possible, in order to validate any decisions which they may have already taken.

At Newton North 'enchanting event'

To the editor;

On Wednesday, Jan. 27 a truly most enchanting event took place at Newton North High School - a renaissance evening. It was a combined effort of the art, music and drama departments with a dinner catered by student food specialists. I expected to enjoy myself but was astonished by the talent, organization and team effort that must have gone into this beautiful Sound and Light Show, Plus.

Vocal and instrumental groups formed and reformed into different ensembles, wittily introduced. There were dancing, dramatics, fortunetelling and tableaux vivants representing the great artists of the period, all taking place against a background of continuous multi-screening of slides of Renaissance art and combining to provide an unusual, complex entertainment of great charm.

We are all well-served by a school system supporting music, art and drama departments capable of conceiving this civilized event and of developing the talent, enthusiasm and energy to stage it. Long may they continue to do so! This show is always a sell-out. I urge all who value art and its place in education to try to be lucky enough to be there next year.

To the editor:

On Saturday, Jan. 30, I had the pleasure of taking my six-year-old nephew to a performance given by the Boston College Theater Group at the Auburndale Library.

The library is a charming building. The librarians were gracious and the young performers, who contributed their time and energy without payment, were vibrant, colorful and professional. They quickly involved all the children and, indeed, the parents as well, in an hour of joy and sharing.

I would like to thank those performers publicly for their gift. As my nephew said, "That was the best thing that happened all week, Nina."

'Disagree strongly' with paper's position

To the editor:

I disagree strongly with your position on making public the names of the applicants for the Newton North High School principal's position. While you may be correct in saying there is a possibility of misinterpretation of state law, I think you are way off base in arguing that the public interest would be served by releasing the names of the applicants.

Newspapers throughout the country have, in recent years, been trying to make the recruitment process for important public positions more open and above board. This is laudatory when it is seriously done in the interests of (a) preventing some shady dealings and (b) enhancing the possibility of getting better people to apply and serve in critical governmental positions. But when newspapers take up the cause of openness with the obvious intent of generating headlines and harassing the sincere efforts of those doing the recruiting, then the public interest isn't being served at all.

From all appearances the Tribune and the Graphic have jumped on Mr. Fink not because they feel he isn't coming up with a lot of great candidates for the principalship and not because they think he is doing something unethical or corrupt, but simply because they want to have the absolute letter of the public records law carried out. Both papers apparently haven't asked the critical question of whether Mr. Fink's procedures will, in fact, lead to the hiring of the best principal available. That is the real issue to be discussed, not the very secondary and somewhat irrelevant issue of the public's "right to know." Yes, the public has a "right to know" all the important facts about all public decisions, but the public also has the right to expect its government officials to appoint the most qualified people to be found to important posts. If accomplishing the latter requires that some records not be made public right away, then the first right must be set aside temporarily. We should applaud Mr. Fink for the fine job he is doing rather than nitpicking his efforts.

John Stewart
Newton

(Editor's note: We have not questioned Aaron Fink's sincere effort to find the best candidate for the principal's job. The Mass. General Laws, it is presumed, are to be followed by everyone. To call the public's "right to know" secondary and irrelevant is, to say the least, dangerous).

Reader says we blew it

To the editor:

Last week The Graphic published an article entitled "A Parking Garage in Every Village?".

The important message in that painstakingly prepared document which I had submitted to The Graphic was that with a little background information anybody who studies the zoning ordinances can see that if the Building Commissioner issues a permit for the building of the Druker parking garage in Newton Corner that that action per se will almost certainly open the door to the illegal building of parking garages in many if not most of the villages in the city. Moreover, these garages can and will be built without aldermanic or citizen approval.

In what appears to have been a hurried attempt to convert what was admittedly a long and complex article to newspaper format, critical paragraphs were deleted, sentences were changed, and important modifiers were left out. The result was that my message was altered to what was essentially meaningless gibberish.

Paraphrased, the published message said: Some nut thinks Druker's garage is illegal and only God and a team of lawyers can figure out if he is right and how that illegality could or would have any effect outside of Newton Corner.

It seems to me that it is important that a city have a means by which citizens can express points of view on important issues. In addition it seems that when these views deal with complex subjects it is important that they be presented accurately and precisely. There are apparently practical problems in accomplishing that objective and it is worth noting that in this case The Graphic was a long way from meeting that challenge.

On cleaning up the act

To the editor:

Dear Mayor Mann:

While driving on Commonwealth Avenue today I could not help but notice - now that the snow has melted - that the center island has become a dump for rubbish! Bottles, cans and cartons were strewn haphazardly. What a sad sight, what a mess!

I sell real estate in Newton as well as selling the city that I too enjoy living in. Can you imagine the impression made upon those thinking of moving to Newton when they see trash on the streets?

I do have some constructive suggestions for those of us who live in Newton: 1. Take along a trash bag when you go out walking. The added exercise of picking up bottles, papers, etc. is good for us all.

2. Joggers who are so concerned about their own helath may be interested in doing the same as above to maintain a clean environment in the city they live in.

3. Abutters to open space once a week could step across the street and pick up the trash surrounding their property.

4. Scouts and/or students may wish to launch an awareness campaign.

In total, to maintain the quality of life within Newton, I feel each must assume some responsibility - not always passing the buck to government or the next fellow.

Open your eyes. Newton is called the Garden City. All must work to keep it that way.

Chiropractic for Health
by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor
CHIROPRACTIC RESEARCH
The chiropractic profession is continuously doing research into the causes and treatment of disease. During the past twenty years or so, chiropractic research has been done under the auspices of a variety of different centers of higher learning. This includes work through the International Chiropractors Association at the University of Colorado. It has also been practiced through the Foundation for Chiropractic Education and Research at Rensseleaer Polytechnical Institute and, in Switzerland, as part of the program of the Institute for the Study of the Mechanics, Statics and Dynamics of the Human Body for the European Chiropractic Union. This is but a small part of a very long list.
When you receive your first chiropractic spinal adjustment you are beginning a journey to a healthier life. Your chiropractor will seek to correct, through adjustments, any interference between the brain and the very cells of your body. In this way you can heal naturally, enjoy better health, have less illness and infirmities and increase your physical, social and mental well being. When your chiropractor eliminates vertebral subluxations he works to restore your health. Maintain it with regular chiropractic adjustments. Happy Valentine's Day! DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington Street, Roslindale, 323-5022. Hours by appointment.

dozen finalists for the job which currently pays over $40,000 to Mecham, saying he preferred to consult City Solicitor Daniel Funk on whether or not the names were open to public scrutiny.

The 24-member ad hoc principal search committee, which includes Superintendent Fink, was expected to meet last night (Tuesday, Feb. 9) to discuss previous candidate interviews.

On Friday Fink said, "After that (meeting) I will be glad to tell you exactly where we are" but would not say specifically how many names might be released or if any public interviews of candidates would take place.

Following Fink's refusal to open up the list of names The Graphic made a written request, under the state's Freedom of Information Act, citing previous rulings by the supervisor of public records that the names of all applicants for public positions were open to the public.

The request was for all names of applicants for the job. Fink, in turn, consulted City Solicitor Funk and made a written denial of the request.

In a telephone interview Thursday Fink referred to the request and his written response and noted, "I did not want to convey a 'I'm just going to stick to my guns attitude'."

Fink reiterated his original contention about releasing names saying, "I am concerned about the legitimate protection of privacy (of the applicants)."

He said after the ad hoc committee meets as a whole and reviews the applications again he would consider releasing some names.

"The only problem I might have is that I might have to contact some people and indicate what information I'm releasing," he said. "Somebody may say at that point 'I'm not going to jeopardize my job.' There are one or two people in that position."

Attorney O'Brien said she could not give a date when the supervisor of public records might review Fink's refusal but said that in early January, Igoe had issued an advisory determination to the secretary of state "saying the resumes of all applicants are public." That determination was made following a request for resumes of applicants for the directorship of the state Office of Campaign and Political Finance.

City Solicitor Funk, who advised Fink on The Graphic's request, said Friday he issued his opinion on the grounds that the written request was for the names of all 96 applicants.

Funk said, "I know the supervisor of public records has his own views" on what constitutes public records," adding, "I don't really agree with the position they seem to take."

In relation to rulings made by former Supervisor Frederick Gumbs, which supported complete access by the public to names of applicants for government jobs, Funk said, "It seems Gumbs went out of his way to disagree (with official assertions that certain records were private). We don't think his decisions are well reasoned."

Both the city solicitor and Fink have pointed to what has been called a "grey area" in guidelines for releasing information to the public in the case of applicants.

"Every time this thing (public records issue) comes up I try very much to really look at it and say what would a court do in this case," Funk said.

Contract for home, city alarms

Firm fails in try to reopen alarm bids

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — An attempt by a disgruntled vendor to reopen the bidding procedure on a police department home alarm monitoring system was ignored by the aldermanic Public Safety Committee Monday night.

Stanley Macht, president of the Waltham-based ND Security Company, claimed his firm was unable to bid because of reference guidelines set up by the city, a lack of specifity and general confusion with the bid specifications.

ND Security Company, which has operated the home alarm system in the city for 11 years, submitted a "protest" letter to the City Purchasing Agent instead of a bid. The system is operated out of the city police station at no cost to taxpayers.

Macht, who called the public bidding a "disgrace and farce" would not comment Monday on whether his company would pursue a course of legal action.

Despite the protest by Macht and a general agreement by aldermen that the bid specifications "should have been clearer," the committee felt that the company had time to clear up any misunderstandings. The vote was four to one for no action on the request.

Said Chairman Joseph DePasquale: "I have a feeling that a mistake was made but whether or not it's justification to rebid is questionable."

"ND did have the specs by January 6 (they were due Jan 20)," continued DePasquale. "The specifications were not so out of line to throw out the whole proposal."

Colonial Security Systems of Hudson, New Hampshire won the contract with a low bid of $28 per subscriber. The system, which now services 478 homes in Newton, costs subscribers $42 per year under ND Security. On Oct. 30, 1981, ND Security requested of the Chief of Police an $18 yearly increase to its subscribers.

According to City Purchasing Agent Blair Kanbar, five of the 26 firms that requested bid specifications complied by the deadline.

Macht, however, charged that three of the five bidders did not qualify because they could not provide the required four references from police departments currently using the alarm system Newton wants to install.

"It's not a question of time," said Macht afterwards. "I was written out of the proposal by the references. It was geared toward this one company."

Colonial Security Systems operates home alarm systems in 38 cities and towns in the New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut region. ND Security operates in Stoneham, Hopkinton and Newton.

Patrick Hamilton, vice-president of Colonial, said his company would not rebid if the bid was opened up again.

Police Chief William Quinn said an investigation into the track record of Colonial indicated that the home alarm system company was "a highly professional and competent" operation.

Quinn also said that "as far as he knew" the ND system now operating in Newton is "excellent." He added that he would have been "very happy" if ND was low bid.

The Police Department is currently in the final preparations with its architect for a rehabilitation of the antiquated operations center at Police Headquaters. Aldermen appropriated $300,000 from surplus monies for the new communications network.

Voting to reopen bidding procedures was Richard Bulwinkle.

Knowing all this, the caretaker, an employee of the Stone Zoo, has done everything to ensure that the baby is receiving the best of care. Not only does he have his own bedroom, complete with a crib and a dresser, but he also has the latest in toys. His favorite companion, to no one's surprise, is a stuffed gorilla.

So far, the caretaker says she has enjoyed caring for the baby, who has not yet been named by the zoo authorities. But she admits that providing 24-hour attention can be frustrating. "The gorilla must be raised in 70-degree temperatures for health reasons, so that means I'm housebound most of the time, except when my daughters offer to babysit."

Another inconvenience for the caretaker is that the baby is extremely active. "He is awake from 7 a.m. to midnight most of the time and only takes short naps. He also loves to swing from the furniture, jump on top of my dog, and, when he's bored, he enjoys harassing my cats."

The baby is also very possessive of his surrogate mother's time. If a stranger tries to compete for attention, the baby is quick to voice his anger, usually by baring his teeth.

But for the most past, the baby's adopted family says he is well-behaved and that caring for him is very much like caring for a human. The gorilla lunches on vegetables, monkey chow, and of course, bananas. He is bottlefed and wears disposable diapers.

There are similarities and striking differences betwen the development of a child and a gorilla, according to Dr. Marcus. "The gorilla's physical development was very human-like in the beginning. In fact he developed more quickly than a child would. At six months, he was able to sit up, stand and crawl, which most humans aren't able to do until they are about 8-to-10 months old."

In the meantime, zoo authorities are actively searching for a playmate for the baby, since peer contact is essential for his social development. So far the zoo hasn't had any luck in locating a friend since gorillas are rapidly becoming an endangered species, and zoos are reluctant to give up their babies.

Even if a friend is found, the long-range goal is to reunite the baby with his mother, Gigi, and father, Sam.

But this situation, too, presents some problems. Sam is not the best of husbands: He's been know to tease and even on occasion beat his wife. Gigi, having failed the first tests of motherhood, may continue to neglect her son.

However, despite his potential family conflicts, the baby has at least two people looking out for his welfare. His caretaker says she will pay him daily visits at the zoo, and Dr. Marcus says he will continue to see that he receives the best of medical care.

And that's as much as any baby gorilla could ask for.

YOUTH PROGRAM - Arthur Wallace, Matt Green and Joan Green talk with youths in the Alcohol Program in Newton recently.

Youth alcohol is addressed

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON— "I'm not an alcoholic. I have problems with drinking, but not to the extent that I'm an alcoholic," says an 18-year-old junior from Newton North High School.

The young woman who, along with other teens in a youth alcoholic program, did not give her name, was placed in the program because of drinking problem. Though she admits to drinking at least three 6-packs of beer everytime she drinks, she still doesn't think she is an alcoholic. The group counselors disagree.

"Their perception is twisted," says Joan Green, one of the founders of the Wallace/Green Youth Alcohol Program. "They say 'I drank three 6-packs, but I wasn't drunk,'' notes Green.

One of the main goals of the program, which was established by Green, Arthur Wallace, a teacher at North, and District Court Judge Monte Basbas, is to make teenagers realize that alcohol is a problem for them, since they often don't recognize it themselves.

"We are trying to open them up, so they see what alcohol has done to them. They don't see the connection," says Matt Green, also a teen counselor. Inside the spacious classroom, Green walked over to a blackboard and in large wrote, "DENIAL." Pointing to the word, Green said, "That's what it is."

Most of the teenagers in the group have appeared before Judge Basbas in Newton District, following their arrest for drunk driving and/or other criminal offences in which alcohol played a role. If sufficient facts are found against the young offenders, Basbas automatically sends them through the youth program, provided the offender is 14-20 years-old, a Newton resident, and has not yet graduated from high school.

"No ands, ifs or buts about it," says Basbas, who praises the program as an excellent teaching devise for young people.

"We have to mold and guide young minds. When their older, it's harder to change them," says Basbas. The program is more successful than other alcohol groups, says Basbas, because the teens are with other people their age, and consequently feel more at ease with their peers. In letters to Basbas, teens said that they benefited more from the youth program because in groups where older adults are present, teens are often pushed in the background.

However, the teens are still required to attend the Alcohol Safety Alternative Program (ASAP) while attending the youth program. In addition, the youth program requires that the teens also attend Alcoholics Anonymous.

Wallaces says that during the sessions, the teens usually talk openly about their drinking experiences. "They're pretty honest," says Wallace. Though the counselors stress, that like other problem drinkers, they don't often realize that their drinking has made their lives unmanageable.

During a group session last week, teens discussed their most recent drinking experience. The 18-year-old girl told the others that she recently had an experience where she was too drunk to drive, "But the guy I was with was worse, he was ready to pass out," so she drove the car while she was drunk.

The girl spoke openly, telling the others that she started drinking with her younger sister when she was 11-years-old and her sister was 9-years-old . She drank heavily for several years. The girl stopped drinking several years ago, but started heavily again last year. "I was going through a depression," said the girl, who left home at age 12. She recently returned and is being counseled for problems at home. She's also trying to cope with her drinking problem.

"I like the group. It helps me alot because it's small. I don't like to be with alot of kids. And Mrs. Green helps me alot with my problems at home."

For some of the teens, having alcoholic parents makes coping with alcohol themselves more difficult. A 15-year-old boy who was arrested with friends after they stole a car while the bunch were drunk, has alcoholic parents, according to Joan Green. Green stressed that it's a painful situation for the boy, but believes the group sessions are therapeutic for him.

Most of the teens follow through with their 4-sessions-per-week, one year program. The greatest motivation is the knowledge that they will be surrendered back to the court if they do not keep their commitment. If a teen has a poor attendence record in the program, goes to school drunk or "high," fights in school or damages school property, he or she must appear again before Basbas who automatically makes a finding of guilty, and the offender also loses his license for one year and pays a fine.

"I'd like to see the program expanded, so that 18-22 year-olds who have graduated high school can join the group. Let them pay the cost of the program," said Basbas.

Furhter evidence that the program is working came from a young man, who has completed the program but still attends and listens in on the sessions because he says he benefited so much while enrolled in the group.

"He comes back," offered Joan Green, "because there's no stigma attached."

Newton Free Library features W. Perry Barton's art exhibit

By Elinor Persky

NEWTON CORNER — W. Perry Barton's one-man show of black and white paintings, drawings and prints, "PEOPLE, PLACES, and THINGS," is featured in the Newton Free Library Gallery through Feb. 28.

Barton's solid realistic shapes and forms, as in "Ladies Lunch," and "Black and White Motel" demonstrate the pictorial possibilities in representative work. There is a monumental quiet quality about his work.

Barton, in works such as "Girl with Ice Cream" and "Boy in a Shirt," represents an isolated moment in an anonymous individual's life. Faceless people relax in chairs, recline in trucks, sit at tables and in cars.

There is a feeling of deja vu in Barton's anonymous still lifes and intimate spaces. He portrays the familiar; then again, because of the intentional lack of detail, the detached attitude, it is not.

The viewer, however, knows much more is going on than what is captured within the frame of the picture. There is action out there; both the individual portrayed and the viewer are the onlookers.

Currently Barton is the exhibitions coordinator for Boston University's Department of Special Collections. In 1974 he received his BFA degree in painting from Boston University School for the Arts.

Barton, who also designs sets for theatrical productions, has had several one-man shows and his work has been included in exhibits at MIT, Boston City Hall, Bromfield Gallery, the Danforth Museum and others. He was named a 1981 Artists Foundation Fellow.

Main Library hours are 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday; 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday; 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 1-4 p.m. Sunday. The Library will be closed Monday, Feb. 15. "PEOPLE, PLACES, AND THINGS" is an interesting exhibit.

Library has books on stress

NEWTON CORNER — The pressures of daily living have increased requests at the Newton Free Library for books on stress management, relaxation and tension control according to Catherine Garoian, the Newton Free Library's Supervisor of Circulation.

Some of the books about stress and stress reduction include "Corporate Stress" by Rosalind Forbes; "Stress and the American Woman" by Nora Kinzer; "You May Not Need A Psychiatrist," by Laurence Galton; "Stress Without Distress," by Hans Selye; "Stress," by Ogden Tanner, "Stress Disease, the Growing Plague," by Peter Blythe, "Stress for Success," by Donald A. RSVP, NCS offer education program

WEST NEWTON — For some, retirement means a slowing down, of daily activities. For other, it means greater opportunities to pursue hobbies, travel and spend time with family and friends.

For 60 Newton seniors, retirement means the chance to enroll in a series of academic study groups entitled Lifetime Learing. Classes will meet from 9:30 noon at the Community Serice Center in West Newton. Registration will take place at 10 a.m. on Feb. 23 at the same address.

Led by retired professors and academicians, Lifetime Learning courses involve aa wide range of subject material. Course offerings this spring will include "Understanding the Law" by Sawyer Bolan; "Reading Shakespeare" with Eugene Wadman and Jennie Mohr; "Comparative Regligions" by Lynda Blake; "Cities of the Ancient Near East" by Neil Richardson; "Great Decisions" with Clarence Lipman and a Poetry Workshop.

Joseph Baron, Newton Community Schools' executive director, notes "Lifetime Learning is an exciting outlet and intellectual challenge for Newton's seniors. Given the academic backgrounds and training of the Lifetime Learning faculty, participants can enjoy a first-hand instruction in current events, literature, history and the arts."

All Lifetime Learning classes will take palce at the Community Service Center (the old Davis School building), 492 Waltham St., West Newton. The cost for two classes will remain $7.50. For more information, please call Newton Community Schools at 552-7117 or R.S.V.P. at 969-5907.

For many visitors to Massachusetts, Old Sturbridge Village is a standard stop. However, for many of Greater Boston's residents, this pioneer village is a world yet to be explored.

With this in mind, the Countryside Community School will spoonsor a family trip to Sturbridge on May 16. Traveling by chartered coach, participants will leave Countryside School at 9:30 a.m., spend four hours learning about life in Colonial America, eat a picnic lunch, and return to Newton at 5 p.m.

The cost for adults is $7; for children 6-16 $3; and children under 6 are free. Children must be accompanied by an adult. For more information, please call 965-0457 or 552-7117.

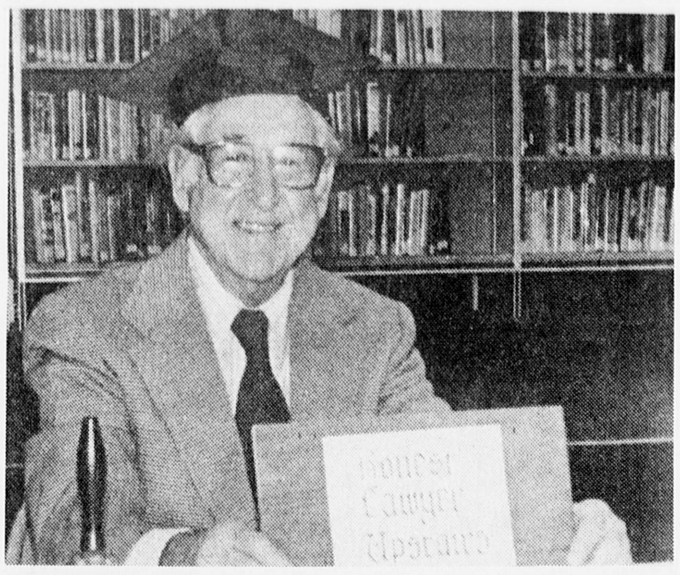
Interested in the works of Hemingway or Chekhov? How about taking the time to discuss present-day short story writers such as John Updike and John Cheever? For those who would like to explore the world of the short story, the Bowen Community School will offer just such a course. Led by Gil Mason, English scholar, social worker and Boston marathoner, the course will explore common elements of the short story from the folk tale to the New Yorker Magazine.

The eight-session course will meet on Thursdays from 7:30-9 p.m. at Brown Junior High, and will begin on March 4. The cost will be $14 plus the cost of a text.

For more information, please call 566-5215 or 522-7117.



AN HONEST MAN - Sawyer Bolan, Lifetime Learning's law instructor, received a plaque declaring "Honest Lawyer Upstairs" from some of the previous course participants. North's Ninth Grade Nights event scheduled for March 1

NEWTONVILLE — Continuing the successful Ninth Grade Nights begun a few years ago, Newton North High School has scheduled a similar evening for Monday, March 1, at 7:30 p.m. (snow date — March 2). The event is planned for parents, ninth grade students and the staff of the junior high schools which feed into Newton North High School.

Ninth Grade Nights will feature 18 different presentations, each given by the appropriate Newton North High School department and repeated three times. Questions from guests will be welcomed. Guided tours of the high school building will occur on the half hour. Programs will be available at the entrance on Elm Road, in addition to a packet being mailed to the homes of ninth graders attending Newton North High School next year.

This program is timed to help ninth graders, parents, and staff members who are in the process of choosing courses for next year. It will also ease the transition from a familiar junior high school to an unfamiliar high school.

Hyde students quiz the mayor for school paper

NEWTON — It may not have been "Meet the Press," but Mayor Theodore Mann faced more than a couple of sharp questions this week from two Hyde Elementary School students.

Daniel Mirski, 12, and Jake Carpenter,11, had an open press conference with Mann. With tape recorder in hand, the two sixth graders grilled Mann with question after question. The interview will be in a school newspaper project being put together by the two students.

"Welcome Mr. Mirski and Mr. Carpenter," Mann greeted the two boys.

The two students were especially concerned about Mann's plans for the future of the Hyde School on Lincoln Street gutted by fire last year.

"I'm glad you asked that," Mann said. "I never thought you would."

Mann told the students that an architectural feasibility study is being done on the school.

"But when will something be completed?" asked Carpenter.

"Conceivably, we could have the building replaced within the next year," said Mann. "It's conceivable, but I can't promise that."

Coalition fighting in Edison rate case

NEWTON — Rep. David B. Cohen (D-Newton) and Newton Mayor Theodore Mann last week announced that a coalition of 12 cities, towns and housing authorities, including Newton, has intervened in the pending Boston Edison rate increase case. The coalition is opposing the increase sought by Edison.

"We have joined forces to battle what we see as a common menace, the largest electric rate incrase ever filed before the Department of Public Utilities.", said Rep. Cohen in a prepared statement released to the press. "The members are striking in their difference, but identical in one overriding characteristic. They can no longer afford to pay for mismanagement, whether that arises from city hall politics or from Boston Edison's mistakes in business judgement."

Mayor Mann stated, "It is vital that cities and towns do everything in their power to weed out inefficiency and save money so that they may continue to provide important services and to reduce the property tax burden."

Rep. Cohen said the intervention includes attempts to "keep the financial burden of Pilgrim II off the backs of the consumer" as well as working for a reduction in rates charged to communities for street lighting.

"We hope to obtain a reduction in rates charged to municipalities for street lighting," Cohen said. "Currently, Edison's street lighting rates are much higher than those charged by other utilities. In addition to this, Edison discourages conservatijon by charging even higher rates for the use of more efficient lamps."

Newton firm's expansion may create 18 new jobs

WEST NEWTON — Massachusetts Industrial Finance Agency (MIFA) has approved a $1 million low interest, tax-exempt bond to help finance the move and expansion of Alumabilt, Inc., in West Newton. The company predicts that 18 new jobs will be created as a direct result of this project.

Alumabilt manufactures, assembles, and installs aluminum siding, windows, doors, and roofs. In order to meet its growing needs, the company is purchasing 2/3 acres of land with an existing 8,000 square foot manufacturing facility on Border Street, making extensive renovations, and constructing an 8,000 square foot second floor addition. Also included in the project is the purchase of new equipment.

"In communities like Newton, industrial revenue bonds are helping to stimulate economic activity and needed jobs," said Robert E. Patterson, executive director of MIFA. "In these recessionary times, spurring the growth of small, innovative and job producing companies such as Alumabilt and downtown revitaliation projects is essential for the state's prosperity."

At the February meeting of the MIFA board of directors a total of $20.4 million was approved for 22 growing firms. These companies will create 473 new jobs.

MIFA is an independent state agency designed to promote employment and economic growth in the Commonwealth through a variety of incentives, including industrial revenue bonds, pollution control bonds, loan guarantees, and downtown revitalization projects through the Commercial Area Revitalization District (CARD) program.

MCAP offers scholarships

CHESTNUT HILL — In an effort to further the goals of students in collegiate construction programs, the Massachusetts Construction Advancement Program (MCAP) is offering $10,000 in scholarship aid to sophomores and juniors enrolled in full time civil engineering, construction, or construction management programs. The scholarships can be used by students to help defray the tuition and/or living costs for the 1982-83 academic year.

Applications have been distributed to civil engineering departments of Massachusetts colleges and universities offering construction oriented degrees. Additional application forms are available from the MCAP Office, 220 Boylston St., Chestnut Hill, 02167. Completed applications must be returned to MCAP by April 1. Award recipients will be selected by representatives of the Associated General Contractors of Massachusetts and will be announced by the end of May.

Fifty students heading for professional construction careers have been awarded a total of $32,500 in scholarship grants since the scholarship program was initiated in 1977.

Quinn pleased with request response

WEST NEWTON — Chief William F. Quinn recently expressed his gratitude to all those citizens who responded to his request for Auxiliary Police Officers.

"We have received a great many applications from enthusiastic men and women who are anxious to help their community with crime prevention. However, there are still openings available and we encourage interested persons who haven't yet done so to apply," Chief Quinn said.

The Auxiliary Police are uniformed officers who patrol in marked, radio equipped cruisers. They are normally unarmed but are trained in firearms use and have been issued permits to carry. In case of emergency, these officers may be armed at the Discretion of the Chief of Police. "The main responsibility of the Auxiliary Police," explained Chief Quinn, "is to observe and report any situation that may necessitate a police response such as crimes, accidents or suspicious activities." They also assist in traffic control at parades, marathons and accident scenes. Members are trained in C.P.R. and basic first aid. Future plans include the implementation of an Auxiliary Police Motorcycle Unit.

The chief concluded by stating that crime prevention is everyone's business. "We hope that all our citizens will join us in our efforts to maintain Newton as a safe community in which to live and work."

Newton residents 19 years of age or over who would like to volunteer their services approximately two nights a month, may request an application in writing from: Chief William F. Quinn, P.O. Box P, West Newton, 02165. For further information, interested persons may call the Community Services Bureau of the Newton Police Department at 552-7252.

Local culture sharing is strong

AUBURNDALE — On a cold winter night in Auburndale, 40 Newton residents recently relaxed next to a fire, ate chicken soup and kugels and relived age-old Jewish stories and traditions.

The event? Jewish Culture Sharing, sponsored by the Auburndale Community School.

Through readings song, lecture, movies and discussion, participants received a first-hand knowledge of Jewish culture from a scholar, cantor, folklorist, chef, and European immigrants.

Ancient oral traditions were shared as were narratives of modern day Jews. Traditional Hewbrew music was changed and followed by modern poetry and folklore, and Jewish culinary specialties were enjoyed by Jews and non-Jews alike.

"Each of us as Americans...has a Jewish heritage", noted Jane Chiong, of the Auburndale Community School Committee.

As Chiong spoke, Lynn Davidman, a scholar frrom Brandeis, prepared for her talk on early Jewish history and current day practices. Davidman was followed by Joe Golner, a local cantor; Frances Shrand, actress/storyteller; David Maisel, folklorist/researcher ; Kay Baron, chef; and several individuals recently immigrated from Europe.

"I think it's all very interesting," commented Ruth Guzik, Culture Sharing participant and Auburndale resident. "It's a means of bringing people together - of understanding our roots and learning that basically we're all the same."

" All of us are brought up with a unique ethnic identity," added Chiong, who grew up in the Bronx and is now an Auburndale resident. Chiong, whose husband Winston Chiong is half-Chinese and half Filipino, spent two years as an exchange student in Helsinki and in Dublin. She is also codirector of the Cantonese School in Newton and is a member of the Multi-Ethnic Advisory Board for the Children's Museum.

She credits much of her interest in Boston's diverse ethnic resources to three years spent working for Action for Boston Community Development Program (ABCD), where she came into daily contact with Haitians, Puerto Ricans, Afro-Americans, Irish and Polish individuals.

"Right now it's easy to lose our own ethnic strength and identity," continued Chiong. "We need to take the opportunity to rechannel a blending of academic seminar and theatrical production. The whole idea of cultural sharing is to begin to know your culture as your own."

In the past two years, other NCS cultural events have included an African Cultural Sharing, an International Beer Tasting, an Auburndale Tea Party (focusing on Japanese tradition), a Cantonese banquet in Chinatown, and an Irish Culture Sharing.

All of these activities have been planned by local residents, are open to the public, and have brought together a number of artists, academicians, musicians, historians and residents who possess a special knowledge of an individual culture.

Ned Schofield, Auburndale resident and planner for the Irish Culture Sharing, explained: "Irish Culture Sharing was an opportunity to touch upon an essence...a reverence for literature, music and dance inherent in the Irish culture. There is no formal way culuture can ever be translated...this is one way it can be shared, and especially with children."

Gail Holm, Auburndale Community School coordinator, agrees. "I love it. In the near future, we hope to offer events like this one for children and really expose them to new ideas and different backgrounds."

Specifically, the Auburndale Community School will offer two cultural events for children this spring. On March 21, fifteen children in grades 1-6 will have the opportunity to attend "A Passover Celebration", and on March 6, twenty students may attend a "Celebration of Purim."

Cultural events for adults will continue to bring in a number of different resources. On Saturday, April 3, a Filippino culture sharing will be offered, and will involve art, music, dance and food of the Philippine Islands. Possible future events will include Gypsy traditions, Italian culture, Chinese heritage and a New England Clambake.

Newton residents are invited to attend these events and also to help in the planning. For more information, please contact Newton Community Schools at 552-7118.

Board hears talks on solid waste plans

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — State officials detailed advantages of two solid waste disposal plans for the city last week, touting the cost benefits of a contract with an Illinois company.

In a report to city officials, a consultant working for the state said that the "costs are lower in virtually all scenarios" for a disposal plan proposed by UOP Inc. organizing the Northeast Solid Waste Resource Recovery Council (NESWC).

In Waltham, Public Works Director Edward F. Delaney has also recommended that his city join the NESWC collective.

State consultants and officials have mainatined that the energy revenue sharing plan for the NESWC proposal could cost the city up to $14 less per ton in a "worst case scenario."

In response to the economic benefits offered by NESWC, a representative of Wheelbrator Frye Inc. of New Hampshire coordinating the 128 West Resource Recovery Council (WRRC) told aldermen that his company could negotiate the same economic plan.

The two companies are planning to construct plants to convert area trash into electrical power and have been fighting for a contract to dispose the 130 tons of trash produced daily in Newton.

Under the NESWC revenue sharing plan the city could be responsible for bonds and debt if the plant goes bankrupt. Under the WRRC plan, cities are not responsible for the debt if the company goes bankrupt.

John Kehoe, executive vice president of energy systems for Wheelbrator Frye Inc., told aldermen that his company can offer the same economic advantages of the NESWC plan if the city is willing to "absorb the risk" of debt.

WRRC also offers "more balanced provisions" in the contract regarding the burden of proof for unacceptable waste loads, he said.

"We didn't realize the concensus of towns to have the tipping fee lower and towns absorb the risk," Kehoe told aldermen. "We'd be delighted to do that."

Kehoe also complained that the figures used in the proposal comparisons is not completely accurate because of recent interest rate hikes.

WRRC has not signed a contract with any cities or towns for the waste to energy plant proposal. NESWC, however, has the commitments of 22 commmunites and needs only several more. The two companies are bidding for a $20 million contract over a 20 year period.

State officials and consultants have maintained that signing with NESWC is more certain and stable than the WRRC project. The proposed NESWC facility would be contructed in Andover. The proposed WRRC would be constructed in Planville.

Youth faces charge

NEWTONVILLE — A 15-year-old Newton youth was arrested last week on charges of using a motor vehicle without authority.

The suspect attracted the attention of Sergeant Robert Greeley and officer James Kiley when they saw him driving in the wrong direction on Hull St. Police traced the car to a car taken from a Billerica resident.

According to police, the suspect saw the cruiser and fled the car. He was chased and apprehended on Bullough Park in Newtonville.

Police probe theft try

Police said a black female in her late 20's and three children entered the store around 2 p.m. Tuesday. According to the store manager, the woman allegedly left the store concealing a ski jacket and hat under her coat.

According to police, the manager followed the suspect through the mall and reportedly saw her get into a white car.

Police said the suspect apparently knew she was being followed and dropped the items as she was walking.

Items gone from home

NEWTON — Silverware, jewelry and a brown canvas suitcase were reported missing from a Boundbrook Rd. home last week.

Police said the home was entered by forcing a cellar door off of its hinges.

The suitcase was apparently used to carry the items away, police said.

Off to 'windy city'

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Mayor Theodore Mann and other city officials flew to Chicago this week at the state's expense to see an energy facility.

City officials are inspecting the Chicago waste to energy facility as part of a review of two multi-million dollar contracts for disposal of city trash beginning in 1985. The cost to the city for the waste disposal contract is expected to be $20 million for a 20-year contract.

The two conglomerates bidding for the city contract are: UOP Inc. of Illinois, heading up the Northeast Solid Waste Resource Recovery Council (NESWC), and Wheelbrator Frye Inc. of New Hampshire, coordinating the 128 West Resource Recovery Council.

Correction

NEWTON — A story in last week's Newton Graphic incorrectly reported the location of a talk given by astronaut Franklin Chang to school children. The talk was given to a group of Lincoln-Eliot Elementary students. The Graphic regrets the error.

lunch and would not make a substantial difference in the deficit. In fact, Silbey told the committee, losses for the year might increase.

Silbey and Gentile also investigated a suggestion made by committeeman Robert Ricles that lowering the price might make more money for the schools. Their study found that a reduction in price would not "generate sufficient participation to reduce the deficit."

For the remainder of the school year, the School Committee approved Silbey and Gentile's recommendation to use the time to allow for menu experimentation by food services managers. The number of lunch choices will be reduced with "heavy reliance" on big sellers such as pizza and lasagna.

A la carte items will also be increased to include more "popular" items like potato chips.

Since the deficit cannot be substantially reduced this year, Silbey and Gentile's report reasoned, "It makes sense to try to reduce food costs and collect information about possible future predictions in labor costs by experimenting with the menus and offerings this year."

Gentile suggested the hiring of a New York consulting firm, Gerard E. Smith, Assoc., who makes partial studies of school lunch programs for free and then recommends steps to take, including the hiring of a consulting firm.

"On the theory that you get what you pay for, I'm a little nervous about these people who are going to come in and do it all for free," committee member Ann Berwick said. "I think we should look further for a consultant."

Doctors think well of The Gables

Are you sick of your present home? The prescribed way to cure your housing ills is to join the many professional people moving to The Gables in Newton.

Almost all the first 35 two and three bedroom attached single family homes have already been sold, and a healthy number of the next group of 16 have been reserved. When homes like these in the $265,000 to $400,000 range go so quickly there must be good reasons.

And there are many: rooms are huge and offer unusual detailing; decks or courtyard areas are large and private; each home has a full basement and an attached two-car garage. There are tennis courts, a clubhouse and swimming pool. Security includes combined gatehouse/electronic surveillance.

Examine the furnished models any day from 9 to 5 to see why so many doctors have got their check up. Newton's best new address is at the junction of Parker and Dedham Streets, directly adjacent to the Charles River Country Club. Call (617) 969-0200 for a private appointment.

Girl Scout troops list Cookie Sale managers

NEWTON — A firm believer in scouting, Nancy Grissom of Newton knows the importance of the Cookie Sale in raising funds for the Girl Scout programs. Grissom is the local service unit cookie chairman of the 1982 Girl Scout Cookie Sale for Patriots' Trail G.S. Council.

Today in the wake of Proposition 2½ and federal budget cuts, cities and towns must depend on well-established organiztions like the Girl Scouts to provide extracurricular programs for their youth. The Girl Scouts organization understands this need and is responding to it. Every box of Cookies purchased insures that the Girl Scouts will succeed.

Proceeds from the 1982 Cookie Sale will be used in a variety of ways. These include: Financial assistance for local girls to attend camp and wider opportunity events, expanded programs that reflect the changing role of women, and the maintenance of local camp facilities at optimum levels.

Grissom will be coordinating the distribution of cookies and the reordering for the troop cookie managers of Newton's 15 participating troops.

Troop cookie managers in Newton are:

Currently a Scavenger Hunt is starting to locate the oldest G.S. artifact in the Patriots' Trail Council area to celebrate 70 years of Girl Scouting. What can you dig out of your attic that others would enjoy seeing? We, in Newton may even be the ones to discover the oldest scout item. For information call 893-6114 by April 1.

Outdoor Camping Tips

Nothing is as exhilarating as going on a well-planned outing in the snow, but everyone should know certain things like the importance of keeping in body warmth. It is vitally important to cover head, ears because 50 percent of your body heat can be lost that way. Wear mitts rather than glovers so fingers can keep each other warm. Heat loss multiplies tenfold if you're wet. When the mercury drops near zero, don't walk too fast either, because you'll breathe too deeply and freezing air will damage your lungs; wearing a scarf over your mouth, nose helps. When hiking in a large wooded area like Cedar HIll, carry a map and emergency kit in a coffee tin (good for boiling water): matches, candle, paraffin cubes for lighting kindling, knife to cut wood, high-energy foods like candy bar or raisins. Then go home and thaw out.

Lester, Taylor voted First Church readers

NEWTON — The newly-elected readers for First Church of Christ, Scientist, Newton, Alan K. Lester and Patricia A. Taylor, began their three-year term of service Feb. 7.

Since a Christian Science church consists entirely of laymen, local branch members are elected by the membership to all administrative positions and to conduct services.

Lester will conduct Sunday morning services and Wednesday evening meetings, replacing Daniel E. Griffin as First Reader. Miss Taylor, who will assist with the Sunday services, succeeds Constance Houghton as Second Reader.

The primary duty of the readers is to read the Bible lesson-sermon at the Sunday service. This is a weekly compilation of related references from the Bible and the Christian Science denominational textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy. This comprises the sermon, and it is read at all Christian Science churches throughout the world. Prayer, responsive reading by the congregation, hymns and a solo constitute the rest of the service.

The Wednesday evening meeting includes readings by the First Reader from the Bible and Science and Health, as well as an opportunity for members of the congregation to tell informally of instances of healing received through prayer as understood in Christian Science.

Mr. Lester is assistant director/curator of the Longyear Historical Society/Mary Baker Eddy Museum in Brookline. Miss Taylor is employed by The Christian Science Publishing Society in Boston.

Aldermen: Keep the noise down

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Its only rock-n-roll, but in the future it might have to be at a lower volume.

The aldermanic Legislation and Rules Committee last week approved an amendment to the city's noise ordinance that will allow city agencies to make use of three meters available through an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) grant. The meters measure decibel levels.

According to Alderman Carol Ann Shea, the noise ordinance currently in effect is "very subjective" and thus unenforceable. The decibel meters would allow for an objective measurement of noise volume.

The purchase of the meters, which comes at no cost to the city, must be approved by the full 24-member Board of Aldermen.

"I don't know any other way to deal with it. This is very specific," said Shea of noise pollutants. "I feel we should have something more than we have right now."

"The noise ordinance we have right now is very unenforceable," added Shea. "Who makes the decision and is going to take the measure (of the noise level)?"

The Town of Brookline received part of the same EPA grant a year ago and has been using the decibel meters since that time with relative success, according to Shea.

As recommended, the decibel meters would be divided among the building health and police departments.

Some aldermen, however, thought the ordinance would still be difficult to enforce.

"What are we going to do?," asked Alderman Wendall Bauckman, "Say wait, don't make that noise again until we get the machine? How are we going to enforce it?"

Alderman Vern Vance also had problems with the regulation. "What if a bird is singing loudly but sweetly,?" he asked.

The ordinance restricts the use of devices employed in construction and demolition; public address loudspeakers; and the use of electric motors and internal combustion engines employed in yard garden maintenance.

Noise sources, such as fixed plant equipment, electronic devices and musical instruments, causing noise pollution or noise injury would be judged at the property line in which the offending source is located.

A violator of the ordinance if convicted could face up to a $50 fine.

Joseph Silverstein featured on WCRB-FM

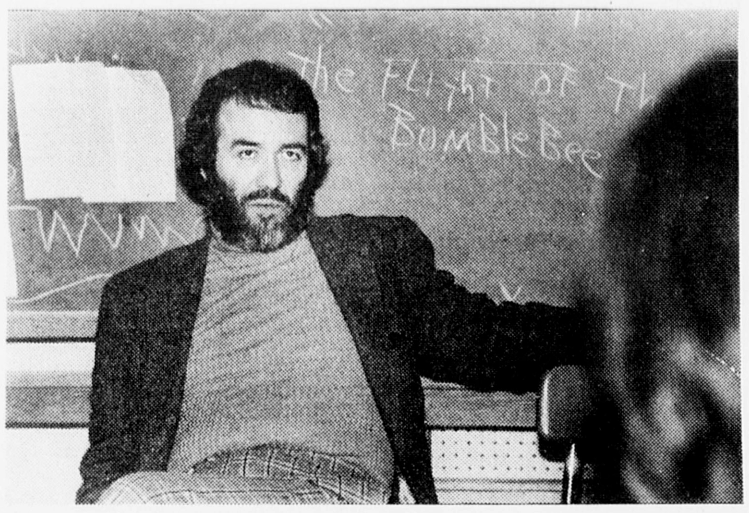
NEWTON — Joseph Silverstein of Newton concertmaster of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, will be featured on WCRB (102.5 FM) in a series of Monday evening broadcasts throughout the month of February. The series is a tribute to Silverstein as he enters his twentieth year as BSO concertmaster.

The opening program on Feb. 1 featured Silverstein performing Gian Carlo Menott's Violin Concerto with the Curtis Institute Orchestra. Lorenzo Muti conducts this concert at Philadelphia's Academy of Music. Silverstein's musical studies were in part at the Curtis Institute.

Bach's solo violin sonatas and partitas will be played by Silverstein in the second program on Feb. 8. In the final two broadcasts, pianist Andrew Wolf, director of the All-Newton Music School, joins Silverstein in performances of the violin sonatas of Brahms on Feb. 22. All broadcasts begin at 9 p.m.

Joseph Silverstein joined the Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1955 at the age of twenty-three, became concertmaster in 1962, and was named assistant conductor at the beginning of the 1971-72 season. He is also the first violinist and music director of the Boston Symphony Chamber Players.

His involvement in the Boston Area music scene is extensive. Silverstein is chairman of the faculty of the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood and adjunct professor of music at Boston University. In the fall of 1976, he led the Boston University Symphony Orchestra to a silver medal prize in the Herbert von Karajan Youth Orchestra Competition in Berlin. He is also music director of the Worcester Symphony, and principle guest conductor of the Baltimore Symphony Orchestra.



MUSICAL INTEREST - Career day for junior high students in Newton last week included a visit by Charles Schlueter, principal trumpet player for the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who appeared at the Bigelow Jr. High program.

Highlands branch hosts show of suburban landscapes

HIGHLANDS — Josephine Schneider of Newton is showing paintings at the Highlands Branch of the Newton Free Library, 20 Hartford St. now through the end of February.

Schneider believes her strongest images come from painting that which she knows best and sees every day.

Her show "The Suburban Landscape" includes paintings done in her own Newton neighborhood. Schneider works on location and is especially interested in painting portraits of houses, emphasizing the shapes and patterns made by strong sunlight.

Schneider, a graduate of the Newton Schools and Wellesley College, with a BFA from Mass. College of Art, has shown her paintings at Boston City Hall, Impressions Gallery and the Waban Branch of the Newton Free Library.

The man judges go to when in trouble

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

In the arena known as the courtroom, there are few legal gladiators who command the reputation of a burly, tough former cop named Thomas Troy.

In 15 years of practice, Troy has become one of the premier defense lawyers in the state. The reason for his superstar status and minimum $25,000 fee: Tom Troy wins and wins and wins.

The 51-year old, 6'2, 210 pound attorney has not lost a trial in five years. He has represented more than 40 defendants on murder charges and boasts that he never lost a one.

"I think the last time I lost I got very disturbed and totally drunk," says Troy. "The world hates a good loser."

He has cleared judges and politicians accused of taking bribes and street toughs accused of murder. He likes money and publicity, but most of all he loves being a lawyer.

A criminal lawyer does not repeatedly win the celebrated cases that Troy has without grabbing headlines and gaining a following among colleagues, judges, and court clerks. The word also hits the streets - If you're in big, big trouble, get Troy.

How does he win? He has a battery of weapons. He intimidates witnesses, angers and wears down district attorneys with carefully crafted shouting matches and countless objections, skillfully uses the law to his advantage, and performs before juries like a seasoned Shakespearean actor playing Hamlet.

Troy practices with three associates out of an office in downtown Boston. As he sits in a plush leather chair behind a desk covered with briefs and legal opinions, the gray-haired attorney chain smokes cigarettes.

"I can't ever remember thinking I'd like a particular case, it just comes my way," says Troy. "I suppose it is because I am considered a high profile guy."

Troy, who has attracted considerable attention from several controversial cases in Waltham recently, says that a case must be "interesting and scream for relief" for him to take it.

He recently joined the defense team of Waltham Doctor Arif Hussain, convicted last summer of raping a Brigham and Women's Hospital nurse. The conviction is being appealed. Hussain also faces charges of raping one other Waltham Hospital patient and sexually assaulting another.

Does Troy expect to turn the tables in the Hussain case? "I am sure that once the facts are heard in any of the cases I see fit to represent, the people who sit on the juries will become believers," he responds.

He is also representing demoted Waltham police captain William Carmody, charged with vehichular homicide in the death of a Metropolitan State Hospital patient. Troy says Carmody is an "old friend."

In addition, he has announced that he will represent several Newton men charging a Waltham police officer with brutality.

"The man doesn't lose cases that is why people come to him," says Troy's associate Michael Reilly. "He is flamboyant and on television, but if he was losing cases all of that would be worth nothing."

"He has an ability with a jury," adds Reilly, who came to work for Troy four years ago. "It's almost like an instinct."

Troy is perhaps more than anything else a showman and like all performers, he loves applause. In his closing arguments, he has been known to use ditties, songs and poems.

When Troy represented a man accused of mail fraud with the star prosecution witness a dope dealer that turned state's evidence for leniency, he composed the following poem in a Boston Italian restaurant that was used as part of his closing argument:

"Beware of those who weave a tale, to keep themselves out of jail, men of lust, men of greed, who take from those what they need, ...Sexual favors that's his goal and lying here is his role."

Troy is anything but modest. The boasting is part of his strutting style. "There are not too many Tom Troys," says the cocky New England Law School graduate. "If you add up the wins and losses, you have to say I'm a winner."

Troy was was born in East Boston and brought up in Wilmington. His father was a Boston police officer shot and killed in the line of duty two weeks before Troy was born.

Troy dropped out of Wilmington High School at 17 and joined the Marine Corps. After three years as a marine, he finished high school and became a Wilmington policemen. In 1953, he became an MDC officer. He began law school at age 33 in 1964 and graduated three years later.

In 1968, Troy defended a Boston man who was charged with a bloody, triple murder in an infamous Massachusetts criminal case. The man was acquitted.

The adjectives have all been used. Tough. Hard Drinking Irishman. Street Fighter. Intimidating. These are the buzz words colleagues use to describe Troy.

In 1975, Troy defended an MDC police officer charged with murdering his girl friend with a revolver. The officer was acquitted.

One Boston weekly called him the "lawyer that judges go to when they are in trouble."

A writer for another Boston newspaper once called him an overweight, tough fisted bull in a china shop kind of guy that would be created by Jimmy Breslin if he didn't exist.

In 1976, a Medford marine was charged with killing a man. Troy pleaded self defense to the jury. The marine was acquitted.

When asked how much he makes in a year, Troy says that "in his corporation" he has an "authorized salary of $135,000." Of course, he adds smiling, "that is without bonuses."

"Most people can't afford me," says Troy.

In 1978, Troy defended a Mass Maritime Academy student accused of killing a Newton youth in a brawl. The student was acquitted on the murder charge. The jury found the student guilty of assault and battery.

Troy did not play football, basketball or hockey as a youth or a marine. He was a boxer. He says that if he was not a lawyer in another time he would have been a "Roman Gladiator."

He feels comfortable as a fighter. Troy says the best part of being a lawyer is seeing how much "damage" he can do each day.

During a major trial, Troy works 18 hour days. He says that on a typical day he leaves his Reading home at 8 a.m and returns by midnight. How does he relax? "I read law," he says.

In 1979, Troy defended Charlestown Judge Richard Woods accused of taking a bribe. The judge was acquitted. In the same year, Troy defended a South Boston man charged with beating his brother's girl friend to death with a frying pan. The South Boston man was also acquitted.

Troy says that most of the prosecutors he faces are anxious to make a reputation by beating him in the courtroom. He says most of the young attorneys "overprepare," adding there is no subsitute for "experience.

In February 1980, Diana Ossinger, Newton Mayor Theodore Mann's secretary for eight years, was charged with stealing $24,000 from the mayor by cashing his paychecks at the Newton Treasurer's Office. Ossinger was initially found guilty in Newton District Court by a judge. Troy took the case to a jury trial after the conviction. Ossinger was acquitted.

Troy calls assistant district attorneys "nice boys" and in closing arguments often refers to "the might and majesty" that the prosecutors have at their disposal.

"They snap their fingers and they have 20 cops investigating a case," says Troy, "while I am sitting here all alone and I have to abide by the resources my client can give me."

Troy says he particularly despises young "snotty" district attorneys "with a keen desire to succeed overnight."

He attributes his own success to "background, training, hard work and experience."

"It is a knowledge of law and the totality of circumstances that make a good trial lawyer," he says. "It doesn't happen yesterday."

Troy's aggressive tactics in the courtroom might be considered unorthodox by the highbrow legal establishment.

During one trial, he nearly exchanged blows with an assistant district attorney. "Your a little #!())," Troy said, standing face to face with the prosecutor. "And I dare you to do anything about it anytime."

But when Troy is asked if he practices intimidation in the courtroom, he says that he "likes to take control of a situation."

Troy has made more than a mark on the profession that he says requires him to "seek the truth." His name and legal artistry are legend in courtrooms throughout the state.

All great performers need an encore. What will Troy's be? "Well there are no mountains to climb," he says. "I'd just like to stay on top of the hill for a while."

In 1981, an officer was suspended from the Newton police force as a result of larceny charges and found guilty in court. Troy took the case to a jury. The officer was acquitted.

Newton man was victim

Jail term for one in car death case

DEDHAM — One man pleaded guilty to charges stemming from an Oct. 25 accident that killed a Newton man and injured a Walpole man in Sharon while a second suspect, alleged to be the driver of the car, charged in court he was kidnapped.

Receiving one-year concurrent sentences in the Dedham House of Correction is Maurice P. Dogett, 19, of Providence, R.I. Dogett pleaded guilty to charges of the illegal possession of a .22-calibre handgun and ammunition.

Norfolk Superior Court Judge Thomas E. Dwyer scheduled a second hearing for Dogett for Tuesday when he learned the defendant had been at Bridgewater State Hospital because he threatened to commit suicide while at the House of Correction.

"I am interested in his competency," Dwyer said. "I will accept his plea, but if a hospital report says he is not competent, that could alter these proceedings."

Prior to Dogett's change of plea in the case, co-defendant Harold Tilson Jr., also of Providence, in an outburst over the objections of his attorney, charged he was kidnapped by Dogett.

"I am not getting any justice here," Tilson told Dwyer. "What I am saying here is falling on deaf ears. I want something done immediately."

Dwyer continued Tilson's case to Feb. 16 for trial.

Tilson is charged with manslaughter in the car crash that killed Theodore J. Occhialini, 25, of Newton and Newport, R.I., and injured Robert E. Collins, 26, of North Street, Walpole. Critically injured in the accident was Occhialini's 3-year-old son Sean.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Route 1 and Old Post Road in Sharon, near Bickford's Pancake House. Tilson was allegedly the driver of the car which was being chased by State Police.

He is charged with manslaughter, assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, the unlawful possession of dangerous weapons and a number of motor vehicle charges.

Attorneys in the case said yesterday was the first they heard of the kidnapping allegation from Tilson.

Since their arrests, Tilson and Dogett have implicated each other in various crimes, including an armed robbery in Rhode Island. They have been kept apart at each court appearance.

Debate on who should grant DNA permits in city

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A debate among aldermen on who should be the permit-granting authority for firms conducting recombinant DNA experiments in the city has delayed the passage of an ordinance restricting such research.

Although no institutions are now experimenting with DNA in Newton, the lack of an ordinance leaves the city open to companies that might want to conduct DNA research here.

It is this fear and the potential of new delays because of the influx of six new aldermen that has frustrated Ward 8 Alderman Cynthia Creem. New England Nuclear, located on Wells Avenue in Ward 8, presently has facilities to conduct research at p1 and p2 containment levels and is building laboratories that will allow them to do p3 level research.

Current federal guidelines regulating DNA research do not pertain to private industry although New England Nuclear has agreed to abide to those guidelines established by the National Institute of Health.

The ordinance, which was first introduced to aldermen on April 6, 1981, was further delayed Wednesday by the Legislation and Rules Committee as members failed to reach a consensus on the authority that would grant a DNA facility site plan approval. Of the eight members on the aldermanic Legislation and Rules Committee, six are new to the committee.

"My feeling is the sooner we get it done the better," noted City Health Commissioner Bernice Joyal. "I also realize that the new people (board members) need some orientation. They haven't had the backround."

Joyal, who said she did not care whether aldermen participated in the process or not, admitted there is now "no protection," but noted that there was "no one knocking at the door" either.

As the ordinance is now drafted, the City Health Commissioner makes the final decision on the issuance of permits after the facility's site is approved by the Biohazards Safety Committee.

However, some aldermen believe that the Board of Aldermen should have a say in the site plan approval of a DNA facility. This conviction caused Creem to recommit the ordinance back to committee after it had reached the floor of the board in December.

Legislation and Rules Committee Chairman Ethel Sheehan disagreed with Creem noting that the process would "become too political" if the Land Use Committee become involved in the site approval decision. She noted that the addition of an area alderman to the Biohazards Committee would serve the interests of a particular ward.

The Human Services Committee first approved an ordinance last year that would have involved aldermen in the permit-granting process. However, a revision of the ordinance (which Creem took objection to) that excluded aldermen from the process was passed to the full 24-member board out of the Legislation and Rules Committee.

"If we don't do anything until March we won't have any control over DNA research," said Creem. "There was no need for the delay. Companies now can do whatever they please."

Dioxyribonucleic Acid (DNA) is the basic organic material transmitting hereditary traits in humans. A growing number of companies and academic institutions, including Harvard University in Cambridge, are involved in the implanting of DNA from one organism to another.

Some experts claim that DNA experiments are potentially dangerous and could result in cancer-causing agents and other bacteria with no known antibiotics, to be released in a community.

Carol Ann Shea, former chairman of Human Services, said the committee "felt strongly that the board of aldermen should be involved" noting that there were land use considerations."

Lion win clinches state berth

Mike Antonellis scored nine points and pulled down six rebounds in the first quarter en route to a 17-point, 15-rebound performance as Newton South clinched a spot in the 1982 State Tournament with a 61-48 triumph over Concord-Carlisle Friday at Newton.

The Lions are now 12-2 overall and 9-2 in Dual County League action. If they were to lose all three of their remaining games, they would still finish 12-5, more than the 70 percent required to qualify.

"Antonellis was just tremendous in the first period," said a happy Joe Killilea. "He controlled the boards at both ends of the court."

Scott Anglin also contributed 12 points and 13 rebounds and Meatchie Russell added 10 points in the winning effort.

Antonellis' early heroics gave the Lions a 19-12 lead. They held that seven-point advantage at halftime (27-20) before increasing it to 46-34 after three periods.

The game's biggest play came in that third stanza. Concord-Carlisle had cut the deficit down to six, but Anglin upped it back to nine with a rebound hoop and a foul shot for a three-point play. The Lions then got the lead to 12 and kept it there the remainder of the game.

Newton South, still hoping for at least a share of the DCL crown, hosts Bedford Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.

Newton North started out strong against Brockton, but a poor shooting third quarter led to a 47-41 defeat. The Tigers took a 24-17 lead into the locker-room, but could score just seven points in the third quarter to allow Brockton back into the game.

Brockton took the lead for good with a bucket by Charlie Kotopoulos with 3:24 to play. Kotopoulos put the Boxers up 37-36. Brockton would outscore Newton North, 10-5, the rest of the way to capture the win.

Junior guard John Humphrey conitnues to be a ray of light in a dark season for the Tigers. The elusive backcourter dropped in six first-quarter points to pace the Tigers to an 8-4 lead after one period.

Humphrey finished with nine of his team-high 11 points in the first half. Newton North's best scoring quarter was the second when the Tigers tossed in 16 points. Humphrey was the lone double-digit man for Newton North.

The loss left the Tigers with 1-13 record in the league and 1-15 record overall. Newton North will travel to Cambridge on Tuesday.

Watertown played a strong basketball game, but mental mistakes in the final minutes hurt in a 71-65 loss to Winchester. The Red Raiders struggled early and came back to play a strong second half scoring 40 points.

The summaries:

North skaters slip, fall to Weymouth South, 4-3

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

It hasn't been a season to excite or inspire coach Don Crowley, but this was one that he honestly felt his Newton North Tigers should not have let slip away. Admittedly, there have been some games this year when, as Crowley is the first to say, the Tigers were just plain awful. Saturday afternoon, however, simply wasn't that sort of day. Thus a reason why this particular 4-3 loss to Weymouth South at the Pilgrim Arena seemed to hurt a little more.

"We played well, we really did," Crowley insisted after watching his club drop to 4-9-2 on the year. "Our forechecking was strong, we skated well and everyone hustled. It was the kind of game we deserved to win."

But they didn't, and that in itself is symbolic of Newton North's entire season. Close almost every time out, but not able to break that fine line between victory and defeat. "We haven't passed the puck the way I'd hoped we would," said Crowley in a soft tone. "Our young people are coming along, but we still have problems finishing off our plays."

The Tigers lost to a respectable team in Weymouth South, but certainly not a great one. Newton North never led and the largest Wildcat advantage was one goal as the two teams traded scores throughout. Center Glen Fitzgerald got the Wildcats on the board early with the first of his three goals just 32 seconds into the contest. But, befitting the manner in which this contest would proceed, Tom Ryan got that right back at 3:58 with a shot from directly outfront which found its way to the left corner.

More of the same came our way in the second stanza. Fitzgerald took a pass from John O'Donnell 2:08 into it and drilled the puck past North goalie Rob Incorvati, giving the Wildcats their third lead of the game, 3-2.

For awhile, it appeared Weymouth South would hold to that. The 'Cats began dominating play in the period and enjoyed many more opportunities. But just when they seemed prepared to take control, the Tigers scored. Defenseman Tom Whiting retied the game at 3-3 with only 1:04 left in the period. Tom Grady dug the puck out of the right corner and got it back to Whiting, who was stationed in the center, just inside the blue line. Whiting skated a few strides toward the net and whistled a high drive through a maze of players.

The winner for Weymouth South came 4:21 into the final period on a shot which Incorvati just missed. Fitzgerald carried the puck into the Newton North zone, but when he reached the left faceoff circle he lost his balance and fell. From the ice, he took a backhanded swipe at the puck, sending a floater toward the net. Incorvati, perhaps thrown off by the slowness of the shot, let it slide through.

The Tigers had their chances over the last 10 minutes, but this time could find no answer for Fitzgerald and the Wildcats.

Clutch shooting by Dave Farrar and the rebounding of 5-10 Scotty McAdam lifted the Newton Catholic hoopsters to an avenging 53-52 Catholic Suburban League victory over neighboring rival St. Patrick's Saturday night at the East Junior High Gym, Watertown.

St. Pat's preyailed by a basket, 46-44, in the previous meeting. Newton Catholic boosted its record to 4-9 as a result of the win while St. Pat's dropped to 3-10.

Farrar, a 5-9 guard, scored the Lancers' last three points. He hit on the front end of a 1-1 foul opportunity to give his club a 51-50 advantage with 30 seconds remaining. McAdam pulled down a rebound and fired a long pass to Farrar for an easy layup that ended the scoring with 15 seconds left.

McAdam, a junior forward, made four clutch rebounds in the last 45 seconds. Newton Catholic held an eight-point lead at one juncture in the third quarter, but St. Patrick's cashed in on the Lancers' mistakes to fight back on to even terms.

Co-Capt. Phil Capello was the leading scorer for the Newton quinet with 17 points, while Farrar contributed 11 and John Mongolleli 11, all in the first half. Jim Greene paced the losers with 16 markers and Paul Piselli and Mark McHugh had a dozen each.

Newton Catholic ran into foul trouble by game's end. Three players, Tom DeRosa, Capello and Finelli fouled out, while Mingolelli, Farrar and Jim Ross were each tagged with four fouls by game's end. Piselli was the lone St. Pat's player to exit with five fouls.

Lion grapplers close in on 10th

The Newton South wrestling team set a goal of winning 10 matches this season and they came just one victory away from that goal Saturday night by defeating Brookline, 39-14, in a non-league encounter.

The Lions have three matches remaining to get their 10th victory. They have a 9-3 record with two of those losses coming in the Dual County League. The only non-league opponent Newton South lost to was Waltham. Newton South will host Belmont in an effort to gain its 10th win.

Arrows streak stopped at unlucky 13 by BB-N

The St. Sebastian's boys' basketball team, which was the only undefeated schoolboy basketball team in the area, lost that distinction Wednesday night by losing to Buckingham, Browne and Nichols, 53-47, at Cambridge.

The Arrows carried a 6-0 Independent School League record into the fray and they were 13-0 overall. Nichols came up with their best basketball effort of the season to defeat St. Sebastian's.

The Arrows could have been looking ahead to Friday night's matchup with Rivers. The Redmen dropped a 74-68 decision to Governor Dummer to remain two games behind the Arrows with a 5-3 record in the league.

The best Rivers can do is beat St. Sebastian's and wait for someone else to knock off the Arrows. The game will be at Rivers and will start at 8 p.m.

St. Sebastian's seemed on the way to its 14th straight win of the season at the start of the game with Nichols. The Arrows jumped out to a 7-2 lead in the first quarter, but Nichols would score the final four points of the frame and go into the half leading by a 22-17 score.

St. Sebastian's trailed through most of the third quarter, but came to life near the end of the period. Forwards Bob Peretti and John Bean began to click and by the early stages of the fourth period the Arrows had captured a 35-33 lead.

The effort required to bring the Arrows back was to great and Nichols scored six straight points to retake the lead for good. Center Tony Walker poured in a game-high 23 points to lead the Nichols attack. Jim Fratto tossed in 10 points for the winners.

Peretti and Bean finished with 13 points each for the Arrows. Dan Gilbert popped in 11 points for St. Sebastian's, while Tom O'Connor had eight points.

B.B. and N.(53)--Fratto 5-0-10; Walker 7-9-23; Stonestreet 1-3-5; Mernin 1-1-3; Rosseau 3-0-6; McKinney 1-2-4; Raker 1-0-2. Tot. 19-15-53.

ST. SEBASTIAN'S (47)--Gilbert 2-7-11; O'Connor 4-0-8; Peretti 4-5-13; Bean 5-3-13; Ritt 1-0-2. Tot. 16-15-47.

Lions taught hockey lesson by Acton, 15-3

By Steve Tiberi
Sports Correspondent

The Newton South hockey team met the best the Dual County League had to offer and they learned they still have a lot to learn.

The Lions were beaten by DCL and EMass powerhouse Acton-Boxboro, 15-3, Monday afternoon at the Cleveland Circle Rink. The Colonials, 15-0 on the season, never gave the Lions a chance by scoring five times in the first period and twice in the first two minutes of the contest.

Newton South had lost three times this season, but two of those losses were by a goal and the third was by four goals. After the first seven games of the season, Newton South was in every game they played and that was a tribute to the attitude and heart of the players.

Acton-Boxboro is not your run of the mill team. The Colonials are led by league-leading scorer Bob Sweeney, who punched in the first two goals of the game. Sweeney scored early, but he was held to just two assists the rest of the way.

"It was a tough game," said Newton South coach Charlie Rezzuti. "They are a great team and we just have to put this behind us. There's not much to say about this game except that they are a tough team and we have to go against them again next Tuesday.

"Everybody played well," Rezzuti added. "A lot of players got a chance to play and our third line came up with our first goal of the game. Acton is one of the top teams in the state. We just have to get ready for the remaining games.

"We've got some teams coming up like Lincoln-Sudbury and Weston that we tied in the first half of the season," said Rezzuti. "We have a shot at beating those teams."

The Lions did receive a strong effort from the first line of Steve Mosca, Ken Fay and Ken Kohlberg. These three deserve mention because they killed penalties, played on the power play and were put the most pressure on the Acton throughout the game. They were on the ice a lot, but still maintained their level of play.

The score was 13-0 in the third period when Newton South scored their first goal against Acton back-up goalie Mark Wilson. Freshman John Jewett tipped in defenseman's Mark Paglia's drive from the point. The goal was greeted by the Newton South bench as if it had tied the game.

Steve Mosca drove in the rebound of a Ken Fay shot for the second Lion score three minutes later. Mosca is the leading scorer on the Lions with seven goals and 14 assists for 21 points. Winger John Cohen drove in the final goal of the afternoon for Newton South. Cohen flipped the puck into an open net after he took a good pass from Mosca.

The game was well out of reach, but the Lions persisted. Newton South has earned a 1-4-3 record this season and in two of the three ties the Lions came back to tie the game. Coach Rezzuti has said it often "This team never quits."

For Acton-Boxboro it was a chance to pad the stat sheets. Winger Paul Bourbeau netted five goals in the game and dealt out two assists to be the top scorer for the Colonials. Peter Bedford scored three goals for the Colonials and Sweeney had the first two.

Jeff Norton scored Acton's third goal in the first period, while teammate John Perry scored in the second period. Andy Bachman tallied in the second period for the winners as did teammate Kevin Houle. Rob Abbott scored Acton's final goal of the game with 4:57 left in the third period.

Acton pumped in 45 shots on Newton South goalies (starter) Rich Wenning, who played the first two periods, and Mike Hochberg, who played in the third period. Wenning faced 33 shots in the first two periods of play.

Acton goal Tom Barrasso picked up an assist on Acton's first goal of the game and shutout the Lions for the first two frames of the game. Newton South had 11 shots on net in the first two periods and had six shots on goal in the third period. The summary:

Tigers put scare into Brookline

It would have easily qualified as the biggest shocker of the season in the Suburban League — if it had come off. But it didn't, and thus Brookline High was able to escape the Newton North gym with just a major scare Tuesday night and not a disastrous loss.

Don't let it be said, however, that the 1-14 Tigers (losers of 13 straight now) didn't give the Indians everything they could possibly handle. Brookline, which entered the contest atop the league at 10-1, found itself in a 42-42 deadlock with 39 seconds left. Only after Fred Hill hit a basket, Newton North missed, and Chuck Green converted two free throws could the Indians be confident that they would remain in first place all alone with a much tougher than expected 46-42 victory.

"I don't know if it was because we were up for the game or what," said North coach Jerry Phillips, "but we played very well tonight. We had a lot of young kids in the lineup and I think I can see them gaining confidence."

The Tigers haven't exactly been roaring this season, but they came charging from the gate Tuesday to grab a 12-9 lead after one quarter behind the four points apiece from Mark Copolla (12) and John Humphrey (12). Brookline closed to 14-13 early in the second stanza, but the Tigers then went on a run which saw them build the lead to a peak of 10 at 28-18. The half ended with Newton North still holding the advantage, 30-23. Humphrey was again the big gun in the second quarter with six points.

"We played good defense in the first half and offensively we handled their press very well," said Phillips. "But the press began disrupting us in the second half and we just couldn't get the ball upcourt. That proved the difference."

Debbie Quinn: North's leader on the court

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

Her statistics may not create quite the same stir as those of Weymouth North's Joanie Powers, but there is a feeling amongst many of the more knowedgeable basketball people that the finest player in the Suburban League plies her trade not down around Rt.3 but closer to Rt.128, where Debbie Quinn stars for Newton North's defending state champions.

Quinn is not a hidden jewel, but with Powers averaging nearly 30 points per game and Weymouth North leading the league this year, the limelight has shifted in that direction. Last year, it was Cambridge's Medina Dixon overshadowing Quinn and fellow Tiger Donna Yaffe (while North beat the Cantabs for the state crown), and this season the mantel has been passed to Powers. "Joanie is a great player, but in my mind, Debbie has more all-around ability," says Newton North coach Allyson Toney. "Joanie is six feet and that alone allows her to score a lot of points. Debbie has to rely on court sense, dribbling ability and sound defense in addition to scoring."

While it may be just a question of bias as to who is better — Quinn or Powers — this is for sure; Quinn is one of the truly great female athletes to ever come out of Newton North. "I think she may be the best ever," says Toney. "I know that's a pretty big statement, but I haven't seen too many girls play as many sports as well."

Quinn's athletic resume reads thusly: Suburban All-Star in basketball her junior and, for certain, senior years; Suburban All-Star in softball as a shortstop; and All-Scholastic two straight years as a center-halfback in soccer. "You'll notice," Toney points out, "that in every sport she plays the position which puts you right in the middle of the action. Or maybe I should say, she is the action."

Despite missing the opening game with torn ligaments in her thumb (suffered during soccer season), Quinn has enjoyed a spectacular year for the Tigers. She is averaging 21 points, 14 rebounds, four steals and three assists a game. For two-thirds of the season, she was the Tiger offense. She has scored 20 or more points in 12 of their 14 games, tallying 19 and 12 in the other two. The 12-point game actually may have been her best of the year. In that 60-46 victory over Weymouth South, she pulled down 14 rebounds and handed out six assists.

"The rebounds are the incredible thing," says Toney. "Debbie's a guard, but she has the instinct to follow up her shots and get the rebound. She scores a lot of her baskets that way."

Her teammates began to rely on her so much that midway through the season Quinn and Toney had to hold a meeting and explain that basketball was still a team game. "It got to the point where the girls were passing up open shots to give the ball to Debbie when she had four people covering her. Debbie got very frustrated and told them to start shooting," said Toney, referring to one game where Quinn scored 23 of the team's 33 points and another where she got 21 of 35.

But that gives you an idea of what people think of her ability. Quinn is only an average 5-9, but she projects an intimidating, aggressive force on a basketball court. She doesn't shy away from the heavy action underneath the boards; she instead seems to revel in it. That, and her court awareness, is what separates Quinn from the pack. "She plays with common sense and control," says Toney. "She also loves to take the ball right to the basket, and that is something you don't see many girls do."

The college scouts apparently agree. Hot on Quinn's list are Penn State, Syracuse, North Carolina, Boston University and UConn. She won't decide anything until the spring, but she's looking for a school where she can major in physical therapy.

For the moment, however, she's concentrating on helping the Tigers return to the state tournament and hopefully defend their championship. Yaffe was a deserving MVP in Newton North's run to the title last March, but none of it would have been possible without Quinn's contributions. Toney calls her a "[illegible] player." A look at Quinn canning crucial free thro[illegible] jumpers throughout that tourname[illegible] qualify for the 1982 tourney — and at [illegible] once more — Quinn will be a figure to watch.

Kelley's 17 sparks girls' hoop win

Debbie Quinn scored 21 points, Jenna Lammers added 19 and Beth Kelley enjoyed her finest game of the season with 17 points and 13 rebounds to lead the Newton North girls' basketball team to a 66-44 triumph over Brockton Friday at Brockton.

The Tigers essentially won this game in the first quarter. Diane Russell opened the game with a basket and then watched Quinn and Lammers take over. Quinn tallied nine points and Lammers eight in the ddfq1period, giving the Tigers a 19-6 cushion.

They kept pouring it on in the second period, outscoring Brockton, 16-10, for a halftime lead of 35-16.

Kelley then made sure there would be no comebacks with 11 fourth-quarter points.

In addition to tossing in 19 points, Lammers also had an outstanding floor game with eight assists and eight steals.

"We came out strong and played aggressive defense," said Newton North coach Allyson Toney. "The man-to-man defense was what what helped us build that early lead."

Now 10-5 overall and 10-4 in the Suburban League, the Tigers host perenially strong Cambridge, Rindge and Latin Tuesday at 5 p.m. The two teams met last year in the Division I State final, and while neither is playing quite that well this season, Tuesday's matchup promises to be another great contest.

Watertown managed to score just nine points in the second half and the result was a 52-26 loss to Winchester. The Red Raiders trailed by a two-point margin, 19-17, at halftime.

The Sachems went to work in the second half and scored 33 points to nine for Watertown. Mary Montouri led the way for Winchester scoring 10 of her game-high 15 points in the second half. Elaine McCarthy was the leading scorer for Watertown with seven points. The summary:

The Brighton woman repeatedly called City Hall and other city departments for assistance for her niece.

Pellegrini's niece, who has an incurable disease and did not want her name used, lives on St. James Street in Newton Corner.

The sick woman lives on a private way that was not sanded and had no street sign. As a result, an ambulance that came to the house two weeks ago did not immediately find the street, according to Pellegrini.

The woman is cared for by a visiting nurse and was concerned that a quick trip to the hospital may be made more difficult by the icy street.

Pellegrini even called the landlord of the private way - reportedly a City Hall department head, but could not get results. She was trapped in a bureaucratic run around.

"In desperation I called the mayor," she said, "not even thinking he'd answer my call. The mayor turned around and had a sign put up so an ambulance could find the street and a barrel of sand put at the end of the road."

"It's all becaue of the mayor," she added. "Other than that nothing would have been done. I was so impressed with the way he handled it. He was just so gracious to me. I don't even know him."

The city does not have the authority to plow the street because it is designated as a private way.

Pellegrini said before she called Mann, she had telephoned the Department of Public Works several times, the landlord and Newton Police.

"I must have made 15 calls," she said.

Chief issues stove warning

NEWTON CENTRE — According to Newton Fire Chief Edward B. Reilly, Jr., woodburning stoves and fireplaces were the main factor in a 32 percent increase in heating fires in one and two family dwellings between 1979 and 1980. They accounted for 42 percent of the fire fatalities in one and two family dwellings in 1980.

The major fire problems related to wood burning stoves and fireplaces were: improper installation, combustible materials too close to the fireplace or stove, lack of maintenance and allowing creosote to build up.

Chief Reilly reminds citizens in Newton that they must obtain a permit from the Building Department before installing a wood burning stove and it must be inspected before it is put into operation.

Lois Pines will be speaker on February 18

NEWTON — The American Business Women's Association's Boston West Chapter's guest speaker on Thursday, Feb. 18 will be former State Representative Lois Pine. Interested women are invited to attend Pines' talk on "Women in Politics" at the Trim Conference Center at Babson College in Wellesley at 7:30 p.m.

Pines, an attorney and candidate for the office of lieutenant governor is a three-term state representative for Newton and former regional director of the New England Office of the Federal Trade Commission.

Women wishing to attend the Boston West Chapter dinner meeting prior to Pines' talk should make immediate reservations by calling Jean Salvucci at 893-7620 or Johanne DeMarco at 237-4072 as space is limited.

The American Business Women's Association is devoted to advancing women in business through educational seminars; development of individual skills and leadership abilities; knowledge of diversified business techniques; and improved business relationships. All women who are gainfully employed are eligible for membership, which is by invitation only. ABWA is one of the fastest growing organizations of its type in the country. Currently there are 1900 chapters with members in all 50 states and Puerto Rico. Last year alone the chapters of the non-profit Association invested over one million dollars locally for scholarships, tangible evidence of ABWA members' firm belief that eduction is the key to helping women help themselves advance in the business world.

The Boston West Chapter for ABWA meets on the third Thursday of the month at Babson's Trim Conference Center for educational, business and social programs. Guest speaker for March is Barbara Blitz who will discuss "Corporate Imaging and Career Goals."

The Boston West Chapter will also cosponsor with Babson College's Division of Continuing Management Education for Women a day long conference on Saturday, May 1 on "Progress" for women advancing in their careers. Keynote speaker will be Ellen Wallach.

The program for the day will include workshop presentations, panel discussion and lunch. For more information about the conference or ABWA's Boston West readers may contact Chapter President Joanne DeMarco at 237-4072.

WEST NEWTON — Davis Block, a former hotel and railroad house, in the center of West Newton, was recently purchased by the Richmark Development Corporation, of Newtonville. Currently occupied by several retail businesses on the ground floor and by apartments on the second and third floors, the building was originally built and owned by Seth Davis in 1831, as the West Newton Hotel.

Born in 1787, Davis lived in West Newton for about 84 years. A politician, lecturer, teacher and a naturalist, he planted approximately 1000 trees in and around the town during those years. Davis lived on Eden Avenue where he spent his 100th birthday along with the mayor of Newton, city officials and hundreds of the residents of West Newton who had come to admire and respect this vivacious and good-natured man.

Today at the intersection of Washington and Watertown Streets, the Davis Block Building as it is now known, is a reminder of the past. Its charm and simplicity reflect the serenity of a 19th century New England town.

Plans to renovate and upgrade the overall appearance of the building and landscape will be designed by Dooling & Siegel Architects. The architects will work in cooperation with the City of Newton in order to preserve and enhance the historical value of Davis Block.

North students headed to France and Spain

NEWTONVILLE — On Friday, Jan. 29, 30 North High School students left for France and Spain. The larger of the two groups, comprised of 20 students, will be spending one month in Paris. The students have been placed in families in which there is a boy or girl of similar age attending North's sister school in Paris, L'Ecole Massillon.

The second group, comprising 10 students, will spend the same month in La Coruna, in northern Spain. North's sister school here is Colegio Videlba. The Spanish program is organized in the same way as is the French. Students are placed in families where there is a boy or girl of similar age and interest. The students attend classes as well as do a significant amount of touring during their stay.

The French and Spanish students, with whom the Newtonites are currently visiting, will return to Newton at the end of March for a similar experience.

There are several uniquely interesting aspects to the program according to David Phelan, Foreign Language Department Head and organizer of the exhanges. "Number one is the cost. Our students are spending one month in France for $585 plus spending money. The program to Spain is a bit more, given that the students opt to spend three nights in Madrid. According to Mr. Phelan these low prices are due to the fact that he handles all the arrangements through a local travel agent and the cost of room and board are assumed by the families.

This year marks the fifth exchange with Paris and the fourth with La Coruna. Phelan is currently trying to develop a similar exchange with Florence, Italy.

"All of these students will be marked for life by this trip. Not only will they have improved their language skills to a significant degree and learned a great deal about another people and culture, but they will be better people as well. They will have grown tremendously," according to Phelan who concludes that March and April will be "hopping as usual" at North, given the presence of 30 very special guests.

Former higher tar smokers affirm MERIT choice for taste, ease of switch, and long-term satisfaction.

The research results are overwhelming.

New National Smoker Study provides solid evidence that 'Enriched Flavor,'™ MERIT offers a satisfying alternative to higher tar cigarettes.

MERIT Taste Sparks Switch.

Nationwide survey reveals over 90% of MERIT smokers who switched from higher tar are glad they did. In fact, 94% don't even miss their former brands.

Further Evidence: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

MERIT Clear Choice In New Tests.

In addition, extensive unmarked-pack tests confirm that MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar when compared against higher tar leaders.

Confirmed: The overwhelming majority reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Confirmed: When tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist.

These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

New car deals sweeter

By Dede Ketover
Staff Writer

Factory rebates, free oil changes, top dollar on trade-ins and liberal discounts are part of a sweeping incentive program area car dealers are employing to help relieve overstocked inventories and mid-winter sale slumps.

"We're making enormous price consessions and so is everyone else," said a Route 1 Norwood car dealer. "Right now it's a buyer's market," he added, "it's an ideal time to buy a car."

Since Rodman Ford in Walpole began their rebate offers, sales have soared.

"Compared to sales last February," said general manager Joe Cullinan, "sales have tripled and the rebates are what's bringing them in."

Ford offers rebates on selected models from $300 to $2,000 off the base price. In addition, Rodman Ford is offering to extend the warranty on your new from one year or 12,000 miles to two years or 24,000 miles.

Another incentive for those customers interested in buying a Ford Escort or Lynx is free maintenance for the first two years or 24,000 miles.

Willoth explained everyone is suffering right now from a high inventory, but Chrysler dealerships are in a unique situation.

"(Lee) Iaccoca said if we wanted the chance to offer customers the rebate program we had to buy a certain number of cars. Now we're paying interest on all those cars just sitting in the lots. We have to move them. With rebates and our discounts we're making great deals. Sales are up from last year and all you hear people talking about is rebates."

Offering more incentives to buy a new car

Factory rebates, are one part of an icentive program offered at Silver Lake Dodge in Wellesley. General manager Richard Kennedy said Silver Lake will also foot the bill for oil changes on your new car for as long as you own it.

"We have to get our inventory down to a managable size," Kennedy said.

Another incentive many area dealer's offers to pay top dollar on trade-ins. "Hey, people are holdling on to their cars," explaind Kennedy, "it's expensive to buy a new one. We know that, so we're prepared to make the best deal we can."

Right now, said Kennedy, a customer with good credit could walk in with their old car and drive out with a 1982 model by putting down only ten percent of the selling price. "Take someone looking at a 1982 model for about $7,000. Ten percent is only $700 and with a $300 rebate that would mean only putting down an initial $400."

At West End Chevrolet in Waltham, dealership operator Chad Mitchell said bad economic times for the auto industry means good times for the consumer to buy a car.

"Our pencils are sharp," Mithcell said referring to the effort in his sales department to meet a price range the customer afford. "We are forced into to making the best deals because it doesn't do us any good to have these cars sitting in the lots."

Mitchell also cited the scarcity of good used cars, rebates and overstocked inventory as reasons why people are driving out "the best deals in a long time."

Chevrolet rebates range from $300 to $1,000 with the private dealer contributing 25 percent of the alloted amount.

With no rebates, no free oil changes not even a free lollypop, Paul Keigan, general manager of Dedham Datsun said, "We don't need any hocus pocus prices to lure the customers in.

Stallouts topping record

By Micheline Maynard
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — Motorist are likely to remember the frigid Winter of '82 as much for its record-setting cold temperatures as for the number of car starting and stalling problems it has caused, officials said Monday.

In many parts of the country, triple the normal number of motorists are asking for help starting their cars or have experienced stal'ed vehicles en route, said David Walker, director of automobile technical services for Champion, a producer of spark plugs.

The Michigan Automobile Club reported its busiest January in at least three years. The auto club logged more than 12,000 emergency road service calls during the past two weekends.

In Chicago, the AAA Motor Club received calls at a rate of 2,000 a day from Jan. 9-18.

A report compiled by Champion showed Northern New Jersey towing firms have received triple the usual number of calls while one area is Rhode Island recently recorded 3,500 trouble calls in one day.

The spark plug company, which annually charts the nation's starting problems, said a quarter of the nation's 90 million vehicles did not start at least once last winter which was relatively mild compared with what the nation is experiencing this year.

Walker predicted the car troubles would hit one in three motorists this year.

"Our surveys have shown that cars have come into this winter less prepared than usual and they're simply not ready to face these cold conditions," Walker said.

Walker said many motorists automatically blame their batteries and have them replaced or charged. The company found that many of those people still had trouble starting their cars and could have solved the problem by having a tuneup instead.

Walker said it is still not too late for motorists to have tuneups and other work performed on their autos to avoid any further winter driving problems.

Has your car driven you too far?

Maybe it's the transmission. Or the steering. Or the brakes.

Whatever the reason, maybe your car has reached the end of the road. If it has, turn to a BayBank.

The BayBanks have Consumer Interest Loans for automobiles, and because these loans are simple interest loans, you only pay interest on the amount you still owe.

So if your car has driven you too far, think about getting a new one started with a Consumer Interest Loan from the BayBanks.

Rules for jump starting

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Improper "jump starts" of dead batteries during the winter can result in serious eye injuries, the American Optometric Association warns.

Frozen batteries and improper attachments of battery cables can cause explosions and shoot battery acid and particles into the eyes, the association said.

Safety goggles are the best precaution against injury, it said.

The association gave these tips on the proper and safe way to jump start a dead battery.

—Be sure the dead battery's fluid is not frozen, the water level in both booster and dead batteries is full; and that both batteries are negatively grounded and of the same voltage.

—Set both cars' parking brakes; place automatic transmissions in park and manual ones in neutral, and turn off both ignitions.

—Attach one cable first to positive pole of the dead battery and then to the positive pole of the booster battery. Attach the other cable first to the negative pole of the booster battery and then to the stalled car's engine block.

—Start the booster car first, then the stalled car. When the stalled car's engine is running, remove cables first from the engine block and booster car's negative pole and then from the positive poles.

The association said if battery acid should come in contact with the eyes, flush the eyes with cool water continuously for 15 minutes and then go promptly to a hospital emergency room.

Never too young for car safety seat

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A number of hospitals across the country now offer their maternity patients a new service — the free use of a car safety seat to protect the baby on that first ride home.

In some cases the parents are allowed to keep the seat until the baby outgrows it. They are asked only to return it to the hospitial for later use by other infants.

The free car seat program is part of a larger infant safety effort in which most of the nation's 7,000 maternity hospitals are involved to one extent or another. The American Academy of Pediatrics has spearheaded the campaign since 1980.

Some hospitals rent the seats. Others sell them in the hospital gift shop. Still others limit their involvement to patient literature stressing the importance of a safe first ride.

The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, an industry group that lobbies the government for safety improvements, says more than 1,500 children under the age of 13 die in car crashes each year. The problem is especially acute for children less than one year old.

David Shinn, public education director for the pediatrics group, has no exact figures on the number of hospitals providing free use of car safety seats but said the practice is becoming very common.

In an interview, Shinn said money for seat-loans and related programs comes from both federal sources and private donations from service organizations and other groups.

"It's a community health issue," he said, "totally supportable with local funds."

Shinn said 45 to 50 percent of the infant passengers in the country now ride in car safety seats — a "dramatic increase" he attributes to the pediatrics group's campaign.

But Shinn also said safety experts estimate only 20 to 25 percent of infants seen riding in seats are properly strapped in.

Frank renews call for help for 7 Soviets

WEST NEWTON — Congressman Barney Frank, D-Mass., last week renewed his call that Soviet officials immediately grant exit visas to seven Pentecostals and their families who took refuge in the U.S. embassy in 1978 in an effort to leave the Soviet Union.

Frank, in a letter to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev, also asked Soviet authorities to release Penetcostal hunger striker Lidiya Vashchenko from a Moscow hospital as soon as she has recovered from the effects of fasting since late December. Frank asked his colleagues to join him in signing the letter to Brezhnev and another to President Reagan.

Lidiya, 31, and her mother, Augustina Vashchenko, 52, embarked on the hunger strike to protest and dramatize the refusal of Soviet officials to grant them permission to emigrate to a nation where they would be free from religious persecution. Five members of the Vashchenko family and two members of the Chmykhalov family have lived in the basement of the U.S. embassy since June 1978.

Frank is the House sponsor of a joint resolution which calls on the Soviet Union to grant the seven exit visas. At Frank's request last week, the House Human Rights Subcommittee agreed to expedite consideration of the resolution, moving it from March to Feb. 10.

"The tragedy that has befallen the Siberian Seven must end," Frank said. "We must not duck our responsibility to free peoples everywhere by becoming complacent in our dealings with the Soviets.

"We must assure the Soviet Union that we will never grow tolerant of the continuing violations of basic human rights and the denial of simple religious freedom," Frank added.

Frank asked Brezhnev that, pending receipt of exit visas for the Vashchenko and Chykhalov families, Lidiya Vashcenko be allowed to return to the safety of the U.S. embassy as soon as she is able to leave Moscow's Botkin Hospital. And Frank, who obtained the signatures of 114 other House members on the joint resolution, asked Brezhnev to take the steps necessary to grant the seven exit visas.

Meanwhile, in a separate letter to President Reagan, Frank asked the President to raise the issue of the Pentecostals with the Soviet government. Discussions of the case occurred recently at the ministry level.

"Your interest and concern over the fate of the seven...is sincerely appreciated," Frank said in his letter to Reagan. The Fourth District Congressman asked that Reagan continue to work on behalf of the seven by issuing another statement in support of their petition to emigrate.

7 candidates view second spot

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON— The Massachusetts lieutenant governor should be a liaison between the governor and the communities, an advocate for consumers and a trusted advisor to the state's chief executive, according to several candidates seeking that office.

Appearing relaxed and often joking with one another, the seven announced candidates: William Geary, one-time advisor to former governor Michael Dukakis; John Kerry, former First Assistant District Attorney, Middlesex County; Louis Nickinello, chairman of the legislative Committee on Transportation; Lois Pines, past state representative from Newton; Joel Pressman, Mayor of Chelsea, and State Senator Samuel Rotondi (D-4th Middlesex) all gathered last week for a candidates night at the Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge. They discussed their views of the office of lieutenant governor and the role they would play if elected to that office.

"The lieutenant governor should be a trusted advisor and confident of the governor," Geary told the audience of about 100 people who attended the conference, sponsored by the Moderate Action Committee (MACPAC).

Geary, former Assistant Secretary of Consumer Affairs during the Michael Dukakis administration, focused on what he said is the importance of a close relationship between the governor and lieutenant governor. Geary, 34, became a close Dukakis advisor when he was eventually named by the former governor a special assistant on gubernatorial appointments.

"The governor and lieutenant governor could work better if they do not view each other as adversaries," said Geary, who, in early 1981, was the first candidate for lieutenant governor to throw his hat in the ring.

Another former Dukakis appointee pursuing the second highest office is Evelyn Murphy, former Secretary of Environmental Affairs. Murphy stressed her experience in environmental issues. "I have a good record, a record for building coalitions," said Murphy, adding that she viewed off-shore oil drilling and water problems as environmental issues she dealt with through coalitions. "The coalitions worked," said Murphy.

Also pointing to his area of expertise was State Representaive Louis Nickinello, who for seven years has headed the Committee on Transportation. "I can positively address our basic need for mobility," said Nickinello.

Nickinello also said he would seek reforms in the property tax system and continue to give his support for a death penalty. "I would work with the governor," said Nickinello, "That's how I see it, as an assistant to the governor."

A former state representative from Newton, Lois Pines told the audience that she would establish the office as a place where troubled municipalities could turn to for help.

"Right now, there is no place for cities and towns to go and find out how others have dealt with certain issues," said Pines, a corporate attorney who recently resigned as head of the New England headquarters of the Federal Trade Commission.

An active supporter of the "bottle bill" and Equal Rights Ammendment (ERA), Pines, who established the first commission on asbestos in the country, said, "I've been an advocate for the consumer. I've been there to fight and I'm pleased that I've been effective."

Chelsea Mayor Joel Pressman called for MBTA level-funding for the cities and towns and property tax reforms. "There's a crisis in our cities and towns," said Pressman, "brought about by fiscal mismanagement." A proponent of Proposition 2 1/2, Pressman said, "Yes, I voted for Proposition 2 1/2, but was the alternative?" Pressman said he viewed the lieutenant governor's post as an advocate for the cities and towns.

State Senator Samuel Rotondi, Chairman of the Public Service Committee and Special Commission on Civil Service Reform, echoed the view of the other candidates that the office should be an advocate for consumers and small businesses.

"In the democratic process, the government provides a role there, helping those who can't compete," said Rotondi.

"Who can best help the governor as a partner?" asked John Kerry, former First Assistant District Attorney, Middlesex County, who said that the lieutenant governor should be someone with proven ability in the democratic process.

Steve Raichlen can't stop writing about us. And our chef.

Boston magazine has praised Apley's twice. In June, 1981 its food critic said "this hotel restaurant is different" and in January, 1982, he called Apley's one of the city's "seven great rooms" and said these nice things about us:

"Apley's is unique among restaurants of its type because outside patrons consistently outnumber hotel guest patrons ... for the moment, no other hotel restaurant in Boston can beat it. The success of Apley's is ascribable in part to the enormous sum the Sheraton Corporation spent to open the restaurant ... But Apley's owes its success equally to the talents of its 35-year-old executive chef, Robert Brody. The French-trained Brody ... applies the latest French techniques to native ingredients to create a cuisine that is contemporary, American and unique."

Community service centers announce day care openings

WEST NEWTON — The Newton Community Service Centers, Inc., with its offices at 492 Waltham St. in West Newton has announced that a limited number of openings exist in each of its programs offering care for children beginning at age three months up through latency age. In making the announcement, Anthony Bibbo, ACSW, Agency Executive Director, stated that inquiries may be made by contacting the offices of the respective programs.

Day Care was established by the NCSC, Inc. in 1970 offering care for pre school children beginning at age three. Since that time, in keeping with the changing needs of the community, Bibbo pointed out that services have expanded to include Infant/Toddler Care; After School Care for latency-age children; and Family Day Care with services for Children of all ages and flexible scheduling to meet parent needs.

Beginning with the very young at the Infant/Toddler Center, a program is designed to provide full time care for 20 children between three months and three years of age. The program, located in the Auburndale Congregational Church at 64 Hancock St. promotes a great atmosphere where each child has a primary caregiver who is most familiar with his/her daily needs. All natural vegetarian snacks and lunches with homemade baby foods are served daily. Pampers are provided. The hours of operation are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily. Additional information may be secured by contacting Georgia Buttrick, the director at 969-4237.

The Preschool Day Care Program provides care for children from two years, nine months to five years of age. Children are grouped in three self-contained classrooms according to age and developmental needs. Each classroom is supervised by a head teacher and full staff of assisting teachers. The curriculum focuses on the individual needs and abilities of the preschool child and is structured to enable each child to reach his or her potential through non-competitive, open-ended experiences. Many activities focus on social and emotional development and the child's increasing ability to become a secure, contributing member of the group. We encourage parental involvement, which is supplemented by two parent/teacher conferences and a home visit each year. Lunch and two snacks are served daily. The hours of operation are from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday thru Friday. Havi Stander is the Director for this program as well as the After School Care Program. She may be reached at 332-8887

AFTER SCHOOL CARE

The After School Care program provides care for children in Kindergarten through the fifth grade after public school hours. Children are grouped by age in two self-contained classrooms. The activities and routine of the day provide opportunity for children to relax, unwind, play and socialize in a warm, supportive and structured environment. Weekly field trips to nearby museums, parks and special interest areas stimulate classroom discussions and activities. Groupings are small, with a teacher/child ratio of one to seven, which allows for individualization and opportunity to focus on special skills and socialization issues. Close parent/teacher contact is emphasized. Hours of operation are as follows:

3-6 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday; 1-6 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday.

The Family Day Care System provides full or part-time day care in private homes throughout Newton, Waltham and Watertown. Day Care providers attend regular training sessions dealing with child development, curriculum activities and home management. Professional staff support each provider with regular home visits, phone consultation and shared resources.

Children of all ages beginning at six weeks will be cared for in a warm, loving home environment. Temporary placements, after-school care, vacation and snow day placements are available. Ruth I. Dain, director, may be reached at 964-0069.

In addition to these services, all licensed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, two activities, the playgroup for infants, toddlers and preschoolers, is in operation Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 8:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and the newly formed Do Drop-In for parents and children for playgroup and social activities Mondays thru Fridays, 9:30 a.m. - 11:30 a.m. and Wednesdays 2 - 4 p.m. are available through Ruth I. Dain.

The Newton Community Service Centers, Inc. offices are located one block from West Newton square. Public transportation is available through MBTA Bus #520 or #521 or Suburban Bus Company; Framingham-Newton local.

SING OUT - Anna Saphier of the singing "Newtones" gives it her all during a weekly practice in Newtonville. The group often performs around Newton for civic clubs and other senior citizens.

And now, the 'alleged news'

By Sally Wilkes
Graphic correspondent

NEWTON - Meet "the lovely" Jack Cole, a nationally-known and respected Boston television reporter who spoke his mind, on air, just one time too many.

Cole, a Newton resident, made headlines within the industry with his famous line before a commercial break: "We'll be right back with more alleged news."

On consultants, this Newton duo sings: 'For one thousand dollars a day there is nothing we wouldn't say.'

That line, which was unpopular with the TV station management, brought a series of job changes to other Boston stations and finally, a career change which may have put him into his natural element.

With fellow Newton resident Joan Faber, Cole has been making the Cambridge nightclub scene for the past six months with a comedy act called, appropriately, "The Alleged News in Review."

The controversial Cole and cafe singer/pianist Faber have been playing to full houses since his switch from "on air" news broadcasting to "on stage" lampoons of television newscasts.

Cole, who made the rounds of Boston network affiliates after his "alleged news" gaff, says the "Alleged News in Revue" has a wealth of topics from which to draw.

"Television news is seldom a primary news source," he says. "It tends to be either a rehash or a follow-up of whatever was in the morning's newspaper."

The theatrical duet, who have drawn a regular following at Ryles in Cambridge, parody governmental and social issues of local, national and world interest.

In a parody of psychoanalysts: "What does an analyst do? I've no idea. Have You?" And on the labors of consultants they sing, "For one thousand dollars a day there is nothing we wouldn't say."

With Faber tickling the piano keys and a dapper, turtle-neck dressed Cole seated on a barstool next to a mock-up of the famous CBS "eye", the pair takes musical jabs at such noted figures as Secretary of State Alexander Haig and Budget Director David Stockman. In a satire on Stockman - a tune called "Money Side" they sing, "Grab your coat, and

Woman is the finalist for North principal job

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON - The woman recommended by the Newton school superintendent for the job of principal of Newton North High School said last week she applied for the job because "the Newton schools have a tradition of excellence" stemming from "teachers who have high academic standards."

Marya Levenson, 39, is currently assistant director of the Principal's Center at Harvard University and was, according to Newton Superintendent Aaron Fink, the overwhelming choice of the 23-member committee charged with finding a replacement for Principal Richard Mechem, who is retiring at the end of this school year.

Fink made the announcement of his recommended choice on Thursday. Fink, who refused to release the names of the semifinalists for the job which reportedly received about 100 applications from around the country, said Levenson "possessed to a high degree those qualities of intellect, sensitivity and leadership required for the principalship of Newton North in the years ahead."

Meanwhile, the state supervisor of public records is reviewing the superintendent's refusal to release the names of all applicants for the principalship. The state became involved in the issue when Fink refused to make the list of applicants public after a freedom of information request by The Newton Graphic. In its written request, the newspaper cited previous rulings by the supervisor of public records that the names of all applicants for public positions were open to the public.

Levenson will replace Mechem, who is currently paid over $41,000, if the School Committee confirms the screening committee's selec-

Tax notices on the way, Brady says

By Steven Burke

NEWTON — New property tax impact notices went in the mail Tuesday. Approximately 22,000 homeowners in the city should receive notices by the end of the week, according to Chief Assessor Harold Brady.

Brady said Tuesday that 8,600 were mailed that afternoon and the rest mailed today (Wednesday, Feb. 17).

For information on your tax impact notice, or to set up an informal hearing, call 552-7331.

The notices are the result of an accelerated revaluation that began last May and cost the city nearly $1 million. The notices are based on an estimated tax rate of $22.10 - a drop from last year's rate of $177 per $1,000 of assessed value.

Under the revaluation, however, the average assessment for single and two family homes is expected to skyrocket from 700 to 800 percent. The city received initial certification of residential values last Wednesday from the state Department of Revenue. The city must still receive approval of commercial values aand final certification.

Brady said the estimated $22.10 tax rate is not final and "it could possibly go down a bit depending on our final valuation totals after adjustments."

The notices, originally scheduled to be mailed by Jan. 1, include a comparison of the homeowner's actual 1981 property tax bill and estimated 1982 property taxes. The actual tax bill for 1982 will be mailed in April.

The city was considering using a mailing house to send out the notices faster, but the high cost prevented it, according to Brady.

Brady did not know when the last revaluation was completed and implemented in Newton. A revaluation was conducted in 1974, but was not

Everyone has a story to tell

NEWTON CORNER—— You don't have to be rich or famous to write your life story.

As a group of aspiring authors at the Newton Corner Senior Drop-In Center are proving, everyone has a good story to tell.

"It's a great outlet for them," says Sister Margaret Potts. The sister instructs the group of a dozen senior citizens who are writing the stories of their lives. Each Friday afternoon, the enthusiastic group gathers at the center where they exchange another newly-written chapter.

"If they don't write it, then it will be lost forever," says Sister Margaret, a former English teacher with a special interest in life histories.

According to the sister, the seniors, who call their group "The Newton Corner Writer's Guild," are writing the books for children and grandchildren, hoping the family history will be carried on.

"There's a great interest now in people finding their roots," remarks the sister. "Children really like to hear about their families too."

'I've learned more about myself. I've dug into things in my life that I didn't even remember.'

While preserving an individual family history is one of the main motivations of some in the group, others find their writing to be a catharsis.

"I've learned more about myself," says Madaline Jodrey, a retired nurse from Brookline. "I've dug into things in my life that I didn't even remember," adds Jodrey, who amuses everyone with occasional antidotes, like the one about how "Papa contributed to my religious education by polishing my shoes on Sunday!"

Heartha Douglass said she hopes her grandchildren will find her stories inspirational and use them as a guide for their own lives.

"I wanted my children to catch the simple parts of my life," said Douglas, a Nebraska native who awes fellow guild members with vivid stories of the Dust Bowl and the effects of the Depression on Midwesterners. Douglas, a former schoolteacher, is concerned that the lifestyle into which her grandchildren are being reared lacks the quality of life she knew. "My life was so differesnt from my children's."

A life-long West Newton resident, Helen Evans says simply, "I just enjoy the writing." Evans has written stories about Newton during the Depression years and particularly her mother's reputation around West Newton for making sure the family ate well, even in the hard times.

Sharing their diversified backgrounds is one of the greatest attractions of the group. "It's a very varied group," says Sister Margaret. They come from around the United States. One grew up on a farm, while another lived over a bakery in the city. Some are religious, others are not. One member spent several years at Harvard University while another was working in a factory. Yet they all have something in common. "They've all had their ups and downs. But they've made it through," remarks Sister Margaret.

The members of the group began writing their books in September, after the center's director saw an article in a February, 1981 issue of The News Tribune, a sister publication of The Newton Graphic, about writing your own life history. Using tips from How to Write Your Own Life Story, by Lois Daniel, they began writing about the highlights of their lives, such as births, holidays, romances, jobs, illnesses, special people and historic events.

One writer, Mildred Holmes, has completed her book but still enjoys comming to the weekly sessions. "I just keep coming." A fellow writer, Theresa Leitner, adds, "I wouldn't miss it for the world."

The director is Barbara Burns.

Lunch at Bloomies for a soggy pooch

CHESTNUT HILL - A soggy, bedraggled German Shepard strolled into Bloomingdale's Department Store recently, chowed down on fresh pastries and curled up to sleep beneath an herbal shampoo display to the amusement of employees and customers.

Allayne White of Belmont, who works at the Borghesa Cosmetics counter at the department store, said the female pooch was an instant hit with shoppers at the store, although it was somewhat out of place.

"She's very good tempered and she made a tremendous hit with all the shoppers at the coffee bar," White said last week.

After lunching on rolls offered by employees, the black-and-tan dog - its fur matter by the weather and one of its hind legs injured, possibly from a run-in with an auto - curled up to sleep.

White said a security officer at Bloomingdale's called Newton Police later in the day and the dog was taken to a Newton animal hospital where it was given a check up and a number - 74.

White was told that unless the owner came forward or someone adopted the pooch, it would be destroyed. So although she said she lives in an apartment complex and is not allowed to keep pets, by the end of last week White dropped by, picked up the dog and went in search of a suitable home.

"I'm going to try to find her a home," White said last week. "She would be a very good dog for someone to adopt."

Fire officials check for possible arson in blaze

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NONANTUM — The two-alarm blaze that destroyed an unoccupied, two-family Nonantum house last Wednesday morning may have been arson, according to a Newton fire official.

"It's still under investigation. But it's definitely suspicious," said Captain Carmine Tedesco of Newton Fire Prevention.

According to Tedesco, fire officials obsevered fresh footprints in the snow surrounding the 3½-story, wood-framed house at 9 Bridge Street, which is owned by Mary Saunders.

Fire officials also questioned a neighbor on California Street, who told investigators that one of his rubbish barrels was completely emptied and another was almost empty, though they were full the night before the blaze, according to Tedesco.

"It appears paper products were scattered throughout the house," said Tedesco, who added that fire officials inspected the home for gasoline and other flammables. "There was no trace of gasoline," said Tedesco.

The Victorian home has been vacant since September and is currently up for sale, according to Tedesco.

Two firefighters, Frank Jordon, of Engine 5, who was treated for a back injury, and Frank Hudson, of Engine 3, who was treated for nausea and weakness, were rushed to Newton-Wellesley Hospital and later released.

"The weather conditions made it a difficult fire," said Tedesco. "The conditions were very slippery and cold."

Tedesco also said that low-hanging utility wires around the house made it difficult to bring in the aerial ladder. The distance between the house and the street also made it harder for firefighters, according to Tedesco. Inside, Tedesco said firefighters were faced with "intense heat."

"The roof caved in and the stairway was burnt out," added Tedesco, who said the ceilings were in a collapsible condition as firefighters battled overlapping flames inside. "The house was completely damaged," said Tedesco.

The remains of the house, which according to the Assessing Department was valued at $15,500 in fiscal year 1981, are expected to be torn down by the Building Department this week, according to Tedesco. Six engine companies and two ladder crews battled the fire, which began shortly before 3:30 a.m., when Box 244 was struck. The second alarm was sounded five minutes later.

Boston, Waltham, Wellesley and Weston engine companies covered Newton fire stations as firefighters battled the blaze for nearly two hours. Fire apparatus remained on the scene until noon.

Vera L. Harris, 23 of Mattapan, was taken to Newton-Wellesley Hospital suffering from head, pelvic and abdominal injuries after she was freed from the wreckage, according to police. But a hospital spokeswoman said Sunday evening there was no record of Harris.

Police said Harris was driving west on Nahanton Street when her car skidded on ice and slammed into a city-owned tree at 1000 Commonwealth Ave. about 2:20 p.m. Saturday.

Dave, don't forget your hat; Leave your scruples on the doorstep; Then just direct your feet, to the money side of the street."

A number on Alexander Haig, entitled "Four-star Generals" goes: "Four-star generals take no joy; Unemployment, unemployment; They're all lusting, fit to bust, for just one last command; For a general's only genuine enjoyment, my enjoyment, is in mustering, blustering, Custering a stand."

Having improvised on the piano since the age of five, Faber's musical arrangements team with Cole's witty writing to add a humorous dimension to some well-known tunes.

The comedy team takes off on the lines of Cole Porter's "It's delightful, it's delicious, it's delovely" in one particular satire on former President Jimmy Carter' futile attempts to eliminate deductions for the "three-martini lunch."

"It's delightful, it's delicious, it's deductible," the duo sings.

With Cole's years in the broadcasting industry and his natural attention to issues in the news the pair have come up with a different theme for each monthly performance at the Cambridge night spot.

Last month, focusing on Ronald Reagan's first year in office, the humorists advocated that the president drop his first lady, Nancy, and marry the more glamorous Liz Taylor.

With that suggestion they sang: "Let's make Liz Taylor-Hilton-Wilding-Todd-Fisher-Burton-Burton-Warner first lady of the land."

The show on George Washington's "alleged" birthday, Feb. 15, dramatized credibility in government as the comedians disclosed how "Washington sacrifices credibility for three-day weekend."

The "Alleged News in Revue" duet is backed up by two producers who also hail from the Garden City. Jeff Brewster works as audio-producer and photographer and colleague Rick Grant is manager and stage director for the pair.

Program to help isolation is created

WEST NEWTON — The absence of uncles, aunts, cousins, and grandparents represents a serious threat to urban families, according to Dr. Gerry Krick. Many family problems result from a sense of isolation created because relatives live too far away to be helpful.

An Extended Family Program is being organized to deal with this problem by providing foster aunts, uncles, cousins and grandparents for families who see the need for such relationships. Not just families, but single parents and single people have much to gain from this program. Children with only one parent will have the opportunity to build a close relationship with substitute fathers or mothers.

Flexibility will characterize the program, Dr. Krick says. Those who are interested will meet with others to decide how much time they would like to spend together and how that time will be spent. House parties, picnics, trips and other informal activities will alllow people to get to know each other so that eventually group support will be available if some personal or family need arises.

Children have only two parents as adult models. As Margaret Mead writes: "The child who, temperamentally and in terms of his gifts, matches neither parent, may grow up isolated, alien, and lost unless by some chance he or she finds a different model in some parent substitute." Both children and adults need close friends of different ages outside the family. The Extended Family Program can provide such friendships.

People of all religious persuasions will attend a discussion of this program on Sunday, Feb. 21, at 10:30 a.m. at the Unitarian Church, 1326 Washington St., West Newton.

The Newton Coalition for the Prevention of Nuclear War is open to all those organizations and individuals who would like to know what can be done about the nuclear arms crisis.

The First Baptist Church is located at the corner of Beacon and Centre Streets and ample parking is available.

Possible principal named for North

tion. Levenson said Friday, "I'm very excited and proud to be recommended for the position."

With declining enrollment and tight budgets, Levenson said, "There are a lot of challenges ahead for the Newton schools and I am pleased that I will be working as part of that" is she is approved by the School Committee.

If the committee does not approve Fink's recommendation of Levenson it must then ask the superintendent for a second recommendation. By law the committee cannot choose an applicant not recommended by Fink.

Although none of the interviews or names of applicants for the job were open to the public, Fink said last week, "I believe the process worked and worked very well. I feel confident of this recommendation."

Fink said there were about 100 applicants for the position with 19 interviewed by the faculty and student division of the screening committee and seven interviewed by the entire committee, including parents.

Fink said there "was good representation of local and national candidates as well as women and minorities." He met with candidates from St. Louis, New York City, Washington, D.C., and Chicago, although only one of these was invited to meet the entire committee.

If confirmed, Levenson will become principal of the high school as it meets the challenge of its first year as a four-year school. Fink said that during the screening process, she spent two days visiting Newton North and also visited Newton South High, currently in its first year as a four-year school.

Levenson received a B.A. in history in 1964 from Brandeis University and a M.Ed. in 1971 in Secondary Education from Boston University. She is currently completing her doctoral studies in planning and social policy at the Harvard Graduate School of Education.

A former history teacher from 1971-1975 in the Boston schools, Levenson served as "Flexible Campus Coordinator" at Madison Park High School in Boston for one year before becoming assistant principal of this school which has 2500 students.

During his two-year tenure as superintendent of the Boston schools, Dr. Robert Wood appointed Levenson as his staff associate.

Levenson will be interviewed by the School Committee at its Feb. 25 meeting at 7:30 p.m. at Bigelow Junior High.

Fink said he thought Levenson, if she is appointed, would be the first female high school principal in Newton North's history. Next year, according to Fink, two of the six junior high principals will be women. Currently eight of the 17 elementary principals are women.

Audit just shows the T's true colors

As if the recent conviction of former MBTA Chairman Barry Locke didn't discourage commuters and taxpayers about the chances of cleaning up the 'T' the state auditor last week released a scathing report on mismanagement and abuse at the transportation authority.

As reported in Newton-area dailies, Auditor John J. Finnegan reported a list of questionable contracts, fare revenue shortages, overtime abuses and waste which may have cost the T more than $26 million in recent years.

Newton, according to the audit, shelled out about $3.39 million to help support the transit system in 1980.

The audit report reads like a book about people who thought the cash register was bottomless.

In 1977, the audit says, a contract was awarded with an estimate that the design for the southwest corridor Red Line extension would cost $18 million. The estimated cost has soared to more than $47 million. Nearly $5.3 million was spent to buy and install three boilers at the South Boston power plant, Finnegan said, but the project was abandoned when 80% complete because a power study committee recommended buying power from Boston Edison.

A research corporation was paid $50,000 to study the public's attitude toward the T. As Finnegan said in the audit, "The MBTA doesn't have to pay anybody for this information. All they have to do is spend 10 minutes talking to commuters during rush hour at Park Street Station."

The list goes on. A bus driver's $15,500 in overtime brought his annual pay to over $42,000. A token collector tallied over $20,000 in overtime in one year, boosting his annual pay to over $43,000.

Two revenue auditors' jobs were created by the T in 1980 - and never filled.

And the list just keeps going on and on.

The auditor's prime recommendation is that "All of the authority's activities should be strictly monitored and controlled and a strong and independent internal audit function should be established."

The reputation of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts for spawning corrupt politicians, promoting patronage as a way of life and not even being capable of getting a bus from point 'A' to point 'B' on time is surely reinforced by this audit report.

Perhaps the MBTA system should just be shut down and preserved as an example for other cities on how not to run a transit system.

WOW! IF I PUT $2000 EVERY YEAR INTO AN IRA, AT TODAY'S INTEREST I'LL BE A MILLIONAIRE WHEN I RETIRE! NOW IF I CAN JUST FIND A JOB TO RETIRE FROM.

Graphically speaking

In the money and going south

Although Graphically speaking can't lay claim to personally ever being in the money, we're told those folks lucky enough to win some cash in the lottery quickly find out just how many friends they have.

The problem is usually that they didn't know these new-found "friends" were even friends.

So in spite of that we'll tell you about a communique from the New Hampshire Sweepstakes Commission which notes that lucky Catherine Keegan of West Newton recently walked home with $1,000 in the N.H. Sweeps' "Money Match" game.

Graphically speaking and Catherine have always been the best of friends, you know.

Good advice for bookies

Okay all you bookies. Listen up. The Newton Free Library needs some help and Graphically speaking has heard about all those old books you have stashed away in your basement.

The annual Friends of the Newton Free Library book sale is coming up in April and you can help out by dropping off books at the Auburndale Branch, 375 Auburn St., Monday through Thursday from 1-6; Wednesday from 9 a.m. to noon; and Saturday from noon to 5.

If you have any questions call Friends Chairman Anne Sullivan at 964-2231.

And for all you people hoarding overdue library books, Graphically speaking plans to come by and put a Denver Boot on your bookcase.

In memory of George

You can call 552-7238 to find out hours when the Homestead is open.

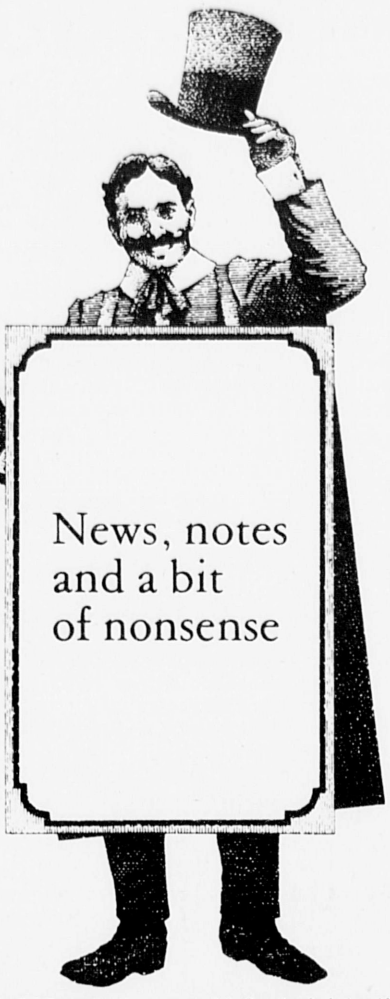
Top appointments

There's always a point to appointments here in the Garden City and some talented local folks were recently named to a variety of city commissions.

At the top of the list, School Committee Chairperson Nancy Mann named Leonard Gentile of Ward 1 to be the committee's representative to the Designer Selection Committee.

The Cultural Affairs Commission gained two new faces also. Former Graphic editor Cindy Black and Henry Schoenberg, both Newtonville residents, were named to the commission by the Human Services Dept. with terms ending Oct. 1, 1984.

John Tedeschi of the Highlands was named to the Youth Commission, with a term ending Nov. 1 of that year and Jane Pitt of Chestnut Hill, Mayor Ted Mann's former chief administrative officer, was named to the Newton Recreation Commission with a term ending Jan. 1, 1984.



News, notes and a bit of nonsense

The Beautification Commission gained Newton Highlands resident Alexander S. Frisch for a term expiring Jan. 1, 1985 and Dr. Richard V. McCann was named to the Newton Community Schools Commission for a term ending Dec. 31, 1985.

Good luck to all.

Just a good sport, Sport

Graphically speaking loves good sports and this week's kudos go out to Robert Berzon of Neshobe Road who recently earned a "Gamefish Release Award" in the 47th Annual Metro South Florida Fishing Tournament.

The lucky fish caught by this lucky angler was a sizeable swordfish, we're told.

Berzon was aboard the Sumpn' Special out of Islamorado in the Florida Keys. Sounds like Sumpn' Special turned that fishing trip into something special.

Foot in mouth?

After targeting several dates for mailing of the new tax impact notices that were never met, Newton assessors apparently became tired of putting their foot in their mouths.

A press release on the revaluation from City Hall dated Feb. 5 deals with a timetable that even Newton assessors can meet.

"State officials will be reviewing the Finnegan Company's revaluation of residential property in the very near future," said Harold Brady, chairman of Newton's Board of Assessors, said in the release.

Thanks for the memories

Lt. Governor Thomas O'Neill (D) braved more than a few Newton Kiwanis Republican businessmen at a recent luncheon. When the meeting ended, a Kiwanis official presented the liberal gubernatorial candidate who told club members that he wanted to increase taxes with a certificate of appreciation for his speech.

"If anyone asks that was for showing up," the Kiwanis representative told O'Neill.

Going South?

At a recent Administration and Planning meeting, Louis Songer of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce informed aldermen that some firms in the Needham St. area in Upper Falls were picking up and leaving Newton for one reason or another.

To which Alderman Rodney Barker responded: "What they want is cheap labor in the south. It's garbage that they are moving because they don't get an answer to a question."

The specific firm which Songer had identified moved to Norwood.

That's south of Newton, anyway.

Just kidding, of course

Legislation and Rules Chairman Ethel Sheehan has seldom turned away from a good joke - particularly if she is the jester.

At a recent meeting of her committee, in which former committee member Edward Richmond had docketed a host of items and was unable to attend, Sheehan said the following:

"He (Richmond) has informed the clerk he is unable to attend and that we can do whatever we want with his items."

Anyone got a match?

When Finance Chairman Edward Richmond recently addressed the Public Safety Committee on the possiblity of a merger of the city's fire and police departments he noted that the idea was not new and that it had been tried successfully in ancient Rome.

What Richmond failed to mention, as one fireman pointed out afterwards, was that Rome burned to the ground.

Marking time

Bring on Night Drive

By Mark White

Last week I visited Fun & Games in Framingham, which, for those who have never been, is a video game arcade.

From the bombs of Missile Command to the "whirrr" of Night Drive the noise is deafening.

On a weekend night you can barely get in the door and the place is packed with kids.

Now, I admit I am a video game connoisseur. Give me a roll of quarters and leave me playing Warlords, Football, Centipede and even Donkey Kong and I'm in Heaven.

That's why I was somewhat disturbed at the recent comments of the Licensing Board director who said that the board is going to get tougher on granting permits for these games in Newton.

As his reason, Carleton Merrill, usually a fair and reasonable administrator, said requests for these games are escalating and "we can't have every corner store and barber shop becoming a mini-amusement center."

In addition, the Board of Aldermen is considering a zoning regulation making it more difficult to have an arcade in Newton.

What is the fear surrounding these games? Would they rather have the kids hanging around the street corners or even bars? Maybe they would rather have gangs of kids in the schoolyards breaking windows.

As one who grew up in Newton I know that entertainment for the youth of this city has always been a problem. The feeble attempts at youth centers failed miserably. And the excitement of dances with punch and cookies wore off quickly.

Let's face it, the kids now are more sophisticated in their entertainment. Kicks for many kids come from drinking, sex and drugs. "Getting high" is a major recreation and a serious problem in this city.

Why not an arcade? Why not a place where the kids can congregate and entertain themselves in a constructive fashion?

Now, I'm sure some people will say that arcades are harmful. But how?

Maybe you can get high from a game of Asteroids. Worse yet, maybe it can become addictive.

Just think, you start off with Space Invaders. Then you progress to Missile Command. You get hooked on Berzerk and finally you start with the hard stuff...Pac Man!!

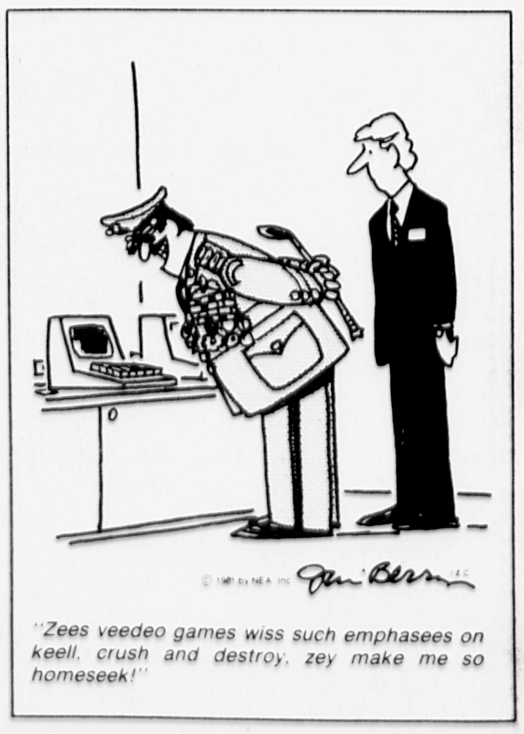
The fear is misplaced. Instead of spreading these games out over pizza parlors, stores and barber shops, why not centralize them at a well-located, well-supervised location with adequate parking.

When I was first elected to the Board of Aldermen in 1973 the Police Department was adamantly opposed to granting permits for any type of coin-operated amusement device. There was a mortal fear that these machines were run by organized crime.

Finally, Rep. Susan Schur and I persuaded the board to change that policy and the Licensing Board approved several locations for video games.

Now, as we see the revolution in video games not only in public places but also with home games like Atari and Intellevision, it is clear that in the coming years video games will provide a major source of entertainment for all ages.

So why not take a bold step. Why not use this fascination with the missiles, Martians and mayhem to provide a place of amusement that would really work as a youth center. It would keep kids off the street and provide a much-needed alternative for "kicks."



"Zees veedeo games wiss such emphasees on keell, crush and destroy, zey make me so homeseek!"

Excuse me now while I go back to destroying the Galaxians.

On DeNucci's backing for Cong. Barney Frank

To the editor:

Representative Joseph DeNucci's reelection endorsement of Congressman Barney Frank a few weeks ago signals both a mark of DeNucci's courage and a confirmation that the district's economic well-being is the critical issue of the 1982 Congressional campaign. In the 1980 Congressional primary, DeNucci supported Waltham Mayor Arthur Clark, a conservative with views on issues closely resembling his own.

At the risk of alienating some of conserviative supporters, Rep. DeNucci is backing Congressman Frank. To his credit DeNucci recognizes that this is the year that Reaganomics is the issue and that the Frank-Heckler fight should be primarily a referendum on the nation's economic policies.

Heckler's support for Reagan policies which have fueled record unemployment and continued high interest rates by providing extraordinarily generous tax relief to oil companies and wealthy individuals is only half of it: The other half involves the Reagan-Heckler budget priorities—slashes to employment, education, transportation, housing, energy and welfare programs, and unprecedented increases to a Defense Department whose policy indecisiveness and wasteful practices merit no such rewards.

While Reagan's economic war on the working men and women of the country may not stir Heckler's Wellesley constituents, DeNucci's Nonantum neighbors are not indifferent to what is happening around them. My hat is off to Joe DeNucci for his leadership and commitment to making these issues the campaign issues for the congressional race this fall.

Keep Warren staffing at the current levels

To the editor:

Dear Superintendent Fink:

As you know, the next school year at Warren Junior High School is planned to be its last. Only the eighth and ninth grades will remain at the school in 19882-83. The teachers at Warren offer an excellent and well-organized academic program and have provided additional services to their students above and beyond their contractual obligations.

The students who will remain at Warren next year deserve the same excellent academic program and the same wide range of extra curricular activities that up to this point have been available to students at the school. The opportunity to be part of an excellent sports program, a winning math team, or an outstanding musical production should be the right of every Warren Junior High School student right up to the last day the school is open.

Providing equity for these students compared to other classes at Warren and in relation to other junior high schools in the city is crucial not only for the students' well being but also to preserve morale and trust in public education in the community at large.

Therefore, we the Warren Junior High School PTA strongly urge that the present eighth and ninth grade staffing be maintained during the coming year. We also request that, when possible,the coaches and advisors for extra-curricular activities remain the same. We would appreciate being kept informed about staffing as decisions are made so that the students and their parents will know what to expect.

As a PTA we also plan to keep functioning as long as the school is open.

Linda N. Shapiro
President
Warren Junior High School PTA

Keep traditional values

To the editor:

The "Moral Mayority" claims that America's moral values are eroding. I think many traditional values have served Americans well, especially the basic principle of freedom of speech, without which Rev. Falwell might not be able to expound his views. Take for example the ideal of freedom of religion, without which it wouldn't be possible to start a new religion, or have any choice at all in choosing which religious persuasion to follow. Which apparently doesn't look so bad to Rev. Falwell as long as it was Christianity that ruled. Without freedom of religion, we could all be forced to become Moonies, or Christians, or Jews, or Buddhists or even Atheists for that matter.

Perhaps the "Moral Values" Rev. Falwell claims to have vanished into thin air were the prevailing antisexual attitudes that led to the criminalization of abortion prior to 1973, and Laws inflicting harsh penalties on people caught in homosexual acts or any sexual behavior other than the missionary position for any reason other than procreation.

Perhaps the Moral Majority views with disdain the recent political gains made by Women to achieve more equal status with Men in American society. Rev. Falwell is hoping to return us all to the good old days when abortion was illegal by helping to pass the Abortion Prohibition Amendment. By arbitrarily defining the fetus as a person with Constitutional rights, abortion will become equal to murdering a living breathing adult. Can you imagine the legal morass enforcing such a law would create? Rev. Falwell is trying to return to the Spanish Inquisition. Women could get convicted of first degree murder for having a miscarriage.

Thanks for 'great coverage'

To the editor:

Just a note to thank you for the great coverage you've given the Jewish Community Center's "phase-in" process. So many people who might not have heard about this endeavor have become involved after reading about it in The Graphic.

We're all very excited about the 1983 opening of our first major branch in over 26 years, and hope you'll be a frequent visitor. Plans for the multi-service center promise a sensational facility.

Again, sincere thanks for helping us broaden our outreach to the community.

To stop payment of legal fees

Judge considers dismissal of suit

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

CAMBRIDGE — A Middlesex Superior Court Judge last week took under advisement motions to dismiss a taxpayer's suit to stop the city from picking up a $10,000 bill for Mayor Theodore Mann's private attorney.

The $10,000 was approved by aldermen last December for Mann's defense in a $1.1 million lawsuit filed by his former secretary - Diana Ossinger. The taxpayer's suit was initiated by a Newton businessman, Vincent Filippone, and approximately 28 other taxpayers.

Ossinger, Mann's secretary for nearly eight years until she was fired in March 1980, has charged that she was illegally terminated and is seeking damages. The West Newton woman was acquitted in October 1980 of stealing $24,000 from Mann over nearly a four year period by cashing his paychecks at the City Hall Treasurer's Office.

Judge Charles Alberti also took under advisement a "declaratory" motion by an attorney for the taxpayers seeking a ruling against city payment of Mann's legal fees. The suit brought by taxpayer's names aldermen, city officials and Mann's Boston Attorney, Edward Barshak, as defendants.

Barshak took over the case last summer after City Solicitor Daniel Funk refused to represent the mayor because of a "conflict of interest." Funk told aldermen that he could be called as a witness in the suit against Mann.

City attorney Kathleen Torres and Boston attorney Anthony Doniger, representing Barshak, both argued that the city is required to pay for Mann's private attorney under a city ordinance insuring municipal officials. Both attorneys made motions to dismiss the taxpayer's complaint.

Donigar said: "It is wholly irrational to require an official who would otherwise be represented to pay his own legal fees because the city solicitor can not represent him because of a conflict of interest." He called opposing arguments "crazy."

Under the ordinance, city officials are insured for up to $1 million in any civil rights suit brought against them in the "scope" of their employment.

Arthur Goldsmith, attorney for taxpayer's, contended that because Mann was "grossly negligent" in firing Ossinger, the city is not required to pay his legal bills under the ordinance.

Claiming she learned of her firing on the car radio, Ossinger has accused Mann of terminating her in "a manner that can only be characterized as intentional, willful and grossly negligent" in an affidavit filed in the taxpayer's suit.

In an opposing affidavit, Mann swore that he fired Ossinger because "our relations had deteriorated to the point where I felt I could no longer keep her employed as my confidential secretary." Mann also swore that he "believed" he had the "right" to terminate Ossinger" and that he has not spoken with her since.

Goldsmith contended that Mann was acting outside the scope of official employment when he requested Ossinger to deposit his paychecks in his credit union account.

In his brief, Goldsmith wrote: "The mayor may be hard pressed to explain why giving his secretary his payroll checks to cash or deposit in his personal credit union account is within his officials duties as mayor...And to argue that failing to discover or detect the loss of $24,000 or more over a period of three years is something less than gross negligence is to distort the meaning of negligence. Losing, one, two or even three paychecks may be negligent. No one if perfect. But missing 58 paychecks has got to be a record."

DIANA OSSINGER

Judge Alberti sharply questioned Goldsmith during the brief oral arguments by attorneys. "What would you do if you were the mayor?" Alberti asked. "Go out and hold a referendum?" Goldsmith argued that Mann should hire a private attorney at his own expense until the case is resolved.

Judge Alberti responded: "I suggest you are begging the question. You are dealing with a public official who has a city solicitor and legal counsel."

Alberti also took under advisement a motion by Goldsmith requesting the city pay $3,000 in legal bills resulting from the complaint and that the taxpayer's suit be held without a decision until the $1.1 million Ossinger suit against Mann is resolved.

Lecture about anti-Semitism at South

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON CENTRE — "Anti-Semitism, centuries old, is alive today," according to Newton resident Leonard Zakim, civil rights director of the regional Anti-Defamation League.

Harassment, assaults and vandalism aimed at Jews are on the rise nationwide with the number of assaults alone increasing from 112 in 1980 to 350 in 1982, Zakim said using statistics from an ADL survey.

Appearing as part of Newton South High's Enrichment Program Series, Zakim told an audience composed of over 40 students, teachers and residents that reports of vandalism (accompanied by swastikas or other anti-Jewish epithets) and harassment are up also up nationwide from 377 incidents reported to the ADL in 1980 to 974 in 1981.

Zakim cited numerous acts of prejudice against Jews in this country and abroad, but said, in this country, there will not be a crisis such as the Holocaust if people "understand that there are laws on the books" and speak out. Organizations such as the Ku Klux Klan and the National Socialist White People's Party are not the danger to Jews, but indifference is, Zakim said.

"It's not the extremists that bother us as much," he said. "It's the indifference of everybody else."

In Zakim's estimation, Newton has little problem with anti-Semitism. He credited a "very sensitive police department," the mayor, the School Committee and the school administration with restraining growth of prejudice against Jews, blacks or other minorities by making "it clear that neither anti-Semitism nor racism will be tolerated."

"That stands in sharp contrast to other communities where perpetrators of such acts have at least tacit acceptance from the rest of the community," he said.

Noting that national membership of the KKK is estimated at 10,500 by the ADL and that there are less than 2,000 "active neo-Nazis" in the United States, Zakim said that 85 percent of anti-Semitic incidents reported to the ADL "are committed by young people."

This is the "most frightening aspect" of the rise of anti-Semitism, Zakim said.

Most of these incidents are considered misdemeanors, but Zakim, an attorney, said the ADL is among organizations fighting for tougher penalities for these kinds of racist acts against Jews and other minorities.

"For the most part, kids pick up on things they are hearing at home," he said. "I think it is a great mistake on the part of law enforcement, particularly, but also parents, to look on these activities as pranks because they are not. They are a very serious matter."

Zakim said the economy, unemployment and inflation are, historically, "bad omens for minority groups."

In times when the economy is bad, ment is up, inflation is up, people begin to get very insecure about their future. When people feel that things are out of their own control," he stressed, " they seek scapegoats."

"Traditionally, Jews and blacks and other minorities have been targeted as those scapegoats," Zakim continued. "When your job security is threatened, when the dream of owning a home is made impossible by high mortage rates, you become even more focused on your own life, and, consequently your indifference to the status of others grows."

Zakim listed recent acts of terrorism and hatred against synagogues in Paris, and named three countries as places where anti-Semitism is currently a "very serious problem" — the Soviet Union, Argentina and Iran.

> 'For the most part kids pick up on things they are hearing at home. I think it's a great mistake...to look on these activities as pranks because they are not.'

The "Falashas," or black Jews in Ethiopia are also suffering and are being "systemically tortured, denied the right to study Hebrew or to pray, and to own land."

"They are right now languishing in refugee camps in Ethiopia," he said.

Zakim also recalled 15 months of terror and harassment suffered by an 80-year-old Jewish Revere woman who was the target of threats and even assault from people in her neighborhood.

When Zakim went to police officials and the mayor of Revere, he said he received a "common response" to anti-Semitism: the victim is blamed.

He said a case is currently being filed on the woman's behalf, but said the abuse stopped when the FBI was called in because the woman's social security checks were being intercepted, a violation of federal law.

According to Zakim, "people will get away with what they think they can get away with" and the FBI coming into Revere to investigate sent a strong message that the acts were not going to be tolerated.

Currently, Massachusetts is rated fourth highest in the nation in terms of anti-Semitic incidents, according to Zakim.

"The important thing is to report it because the only way to prevent another holocaust is to stamp out every single spark of it (anti-Semitism)," he said.

Newton Health Club wins license appeal

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The owner of the Newton Health Club, who faces trial in Middlesex Superior Court on prostitution charges, has won his appeal for a license to continue operating in Newton Upper Falls.

Following a Dec. 12 police raid which resulted in the arrests of three women and club owner, Robert A. McIntosh, Newton Health Commissioner Bernice Joyal denied the club's application for a license.

Joyal has maintained that the denial of the license application was unrelated to the arrests of the women on charges of soliciting for prostitution and McIntosh on the charge of maintaining a house of prostitution. She cited three alleged violations of regulations as her original grounds for denying the license.

In light of evidence presented at a Jan. 21 hearing before Joyal, the commissioner last week overturned her ruling, but warned McIntosh, a 41-year-old Burlington resident, that the three alleged violations were "not trivial" and that the Health Department would monitor the club in the future.

McIntosh was originally cited for employing unlicensed massagists, charging $50 for a massagist's license issued by the Health Department for $1 and for failure to return licenses to massagists who left his employment.

"These practices," Joyal said, "while not rising to the level of literal violations of Health Department regulations, do reflect on Mr. McIntosh's approach and attitude to operating the Newton Health Club."

Newton resident Richard Steinberg, McIntosh's attorney, called the hearing "fair" and said both he and his client were "satisfied with the results."

"The ultimate decision was one I expected and that was that the license would be issued," Steinberg said. "The allegations were responded to and corrected and were not substantial enough to warrant him not obtaining his license."

Although no trial date has been set for McIntosh, a guilty verdict would mean the automatic revokation of the club's license since health regulations prohibit anyone convicted of a felony or misdemeanor involving "moral turpitude" from operating a health club in Newton, Joyal said.

Under new Health Department regulations which went into effect last August, shortly after the club opened, all health clubs offering massage must be licensed. At the time of the arrests, McIntosh's license was still pending.

The arrests were the result of an undercover investigation by Newton and State police following anonymous complaints of "illicit sex" in the establishment at 209 Charlemont St.

The three women arrested on charges of soliciting for prostitution were Donna Kite, 24, of Providence, R.I., Fawn Vincent, 23, of Taunton, and Mary Lee Gazzangia, 22, of Framingham. Their trial date has not been set.

A pre-trial conference date for all four suspects has been set for Feb. 23 at Superior Court and Steinberg said he will file a "motion to sever" to have McIntosh tried separately.

The Yankees are coming

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The New York Yankees professional baseball team will be coming to Newton.

Continental Cablevision, the city's new 52-channel cable television company, is attempting to relay the transmitting signal from a New York station so subscribers will be able to view the Yankees in more than 120 games this upcoming season.

According to Michael Musen of Continental, the company promised the city that it would televise Yankee games from New York over WPIX television.

"WPIX is one of the stations we promised and we're going to get it one way or another," said Musen. "It looks as though we'll be able to do it by April (the start of the baseball season)."

"WPIX was wanted by the city and we promised that we would get it," added Musen.

In order to transmit the WPIX signal, Continental must relay the signal off one of the taller transmitting towers at the Tower Road Industrial Park area to the 60-foot tower now under contruction by the cable television firm.

Due to community opposition, Continental will not go before the Board of Aldermen to request a permit for a larger tower. Sixty-feet is the maximum height allowed under the ordinances governing the Upper Falls area.

Without the use of one of the taller transmitting towers in the area, Continental would not be able to televise the baseball games to Newton subscribers.

Musen said Continental has begun Phase II of its installation operations in Newtonville. Newton Cèntre homes were hooked up last month and Musen said Continental should start installation in the Chestnut Hill area in another month and by "summer's end should be able to offer the system to each area of the city barring unforeseen circumstances."

Kids' camp signs with Babson

NEWTON - Camp Academy, a Newton based day camp for child children 3 - 13, will conduct its summer program at the Babson Recreation Center for the next three years, according to camp director John Cloninger.

"Signing a three-year contract is a major commintment for us as well as for the recreation center," said Cloninger. "It also shows the respect that the Babson people have for such a young program."

The camp was started by Cloninger two years ago. Since then, more that 600 children have attended. Last summer, over 350 boys and girls participated in one or more of the three week camp sessions. Cloninger said Camp Academy is sports oriented, but adds that "ours is a low key, non-competitive approach." While there are team competitions in some activities, emphasis is placed on Red Cross swimming instruction, gymnastics, dance, arts and crafts and other non-competitive efforts. Cloninger feels that when children are given support, encouragement and respect, they will respond in a positive and healthy manner. "Kids who experience concrete success and accomplishment," he adds, develop a strong sense of self esteem and self worth. Our goal is to help them develop these qualities."

This year, a seperate camp designed for pre-school children will operate concurrently with the camp for older children. The pre-school program will feature swimming, games, nature studies and music.

Cloninger is currently planning an open house for Camp Academy at the Babson Recreation Center in April as an opportunity for interested parents and children to meet his staff.

Frank takes aim at Heckler

Frank said that Heckler's effort to reverse benefits given Congress as part of the black lung bill is only a "gesture." Frank said the chairman of the ways and means committee explained what was tacked on to the bill and "after 15 years in Congress," Heckler should have known better.

Frank said he and 43 others in the congress voted against the bill.

Frank also said Heckler was remiss when she voted for a resolution in December which permitted the a Reagan administration to close some unemployment offices administered by the state.

VACANT HOUSE FIRE - Newton fire officials inspected the gutted remains of a house on Bridge Street, Nonantum, last week following an early morning fire Wednesday. Fire officials said arson was suspected in the blaze. The house was not occupied at the time of the fire.

Roy Mennell is chairman of Rotary auction

NEWTON - Robert Keyho, president of the Newton Rotary Club, has appointed Roy Mennell as chairman for the Club's second annual Antique Auction.

In making the announcement, Keyho called it a "key appointment" for the club. Last year under the direction of Mennell the club raised in excess of $ 4,000 toward its community service projects. This event serves two general purposes. It provides an outlet for community residents to join together in an enjoyable atmosphere for participation in a local quality Antique Auction while affording the Newton Rotary Club the opportunity to raise monies to be distributed to needy local projects. Keyho st8ressed it is "most imperitive" that the private sector take a more active role in providing resources for programs that are faced with funding cutbacks. He pledged the concern of the Newton Club to do its utmost to ascertain that vital community service projects not be discontinued as a result of the loss of funding. The community is invited to join in this undertaking.

Mennell has enlisted the assistance of Tom Marquis to join him in a leadership role for this project. As a non-profit organization' Rotary is soliciting items from community residents. The club will provide an appraisal value on items to be donated. These written appraisals may be used for tax purposes upon donation of an item to the Rotary Club Auction.

For additional information write the Newton Rotary Club c/o 276 Church Street or phone Mennell at 527-8090.

OLD UPPER FALLS - This High Street, Upper Falls house has been a residence for 103 years but for 30 years prior to that it served as a social hall, schoolhouse and the First Universalist Church in Newton. The house and its history are featured in an ongoing photographic exhibit at the Depot in Pettee Square' hosted by the Upper Falls Community Development Corporation.

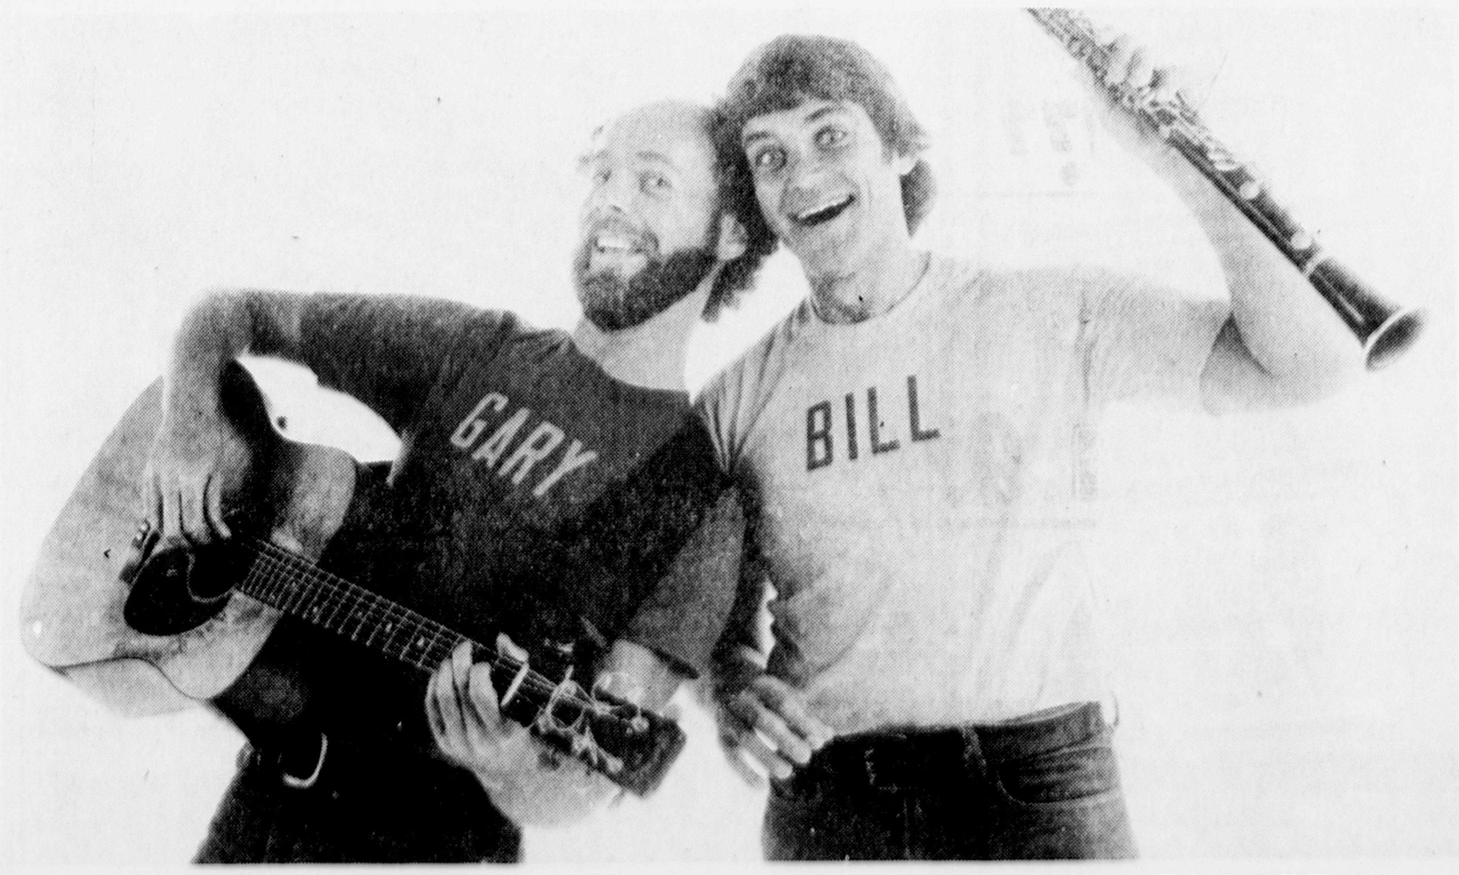
A history of Newton Upper Falls

(The following is a part of the historical and narrative history of Newton Upper Falls churches and schools currently being shown in the third Historic Photo Exhibit at The Depot in Otis Pettee Square, Newton Upper Falls. The exhibit is open during regular business hours, Monday through Friday and Saturday afternoon, noon to 4 pm. Admission is free).

NEWTON UPPER FALLS — At first glance it appears to be just another building setting there among its neighbors on High Street in Newton Upper Falls. A residence for 103 years, few people recall that before it was turned broad side to the street it served for about 30 years as a social hall, schoolhouse and lodge hall and prior to that as the First Universalist Church in Newton. Built in 1842, it is the fourth oldest church building in the city, sharing its longevity with two older churches in the village, First United Methodist and the Second Baptist church. It was the first pastor of the Universalist Church, Rev. Samuel P. Skinner, who played an important part in keeping the town together at a time when it was threatened to be seperated into two towns. Dissention over ward line locations in 1807 and termination in 1833 by the state of the requirement that the Puritan or Congregational Church at Newton Centre serve as a town hall, triggered a bitter battle between Newton Centre and West Newton as they each sought to have the new town hall in their village; a battle that almost resulted in the division mentioned above.

The Reverend Mr. Skinner appears to have prevented this drastic move as we read this eyewitness account by a young Upper Falls schoolboy at the time, John Winslow, who included it in remarks given at a school reunion in Upper Falls a century ago: "Town meeting day was an occasion when boys with public spirit would go to meeting and not to school. How well do I remember the old town meetings held in the Town Hall at Newton Centre, near the Baptist Pond (Crystal Lake). When the question of dividing the town was up it caused many hot debates in town meeting. Two prominent advocates of the proposed division w8ere the Hon. William Jackson of the 'Corner' and Seth Davis of West Newton, which latter place in early days was impolitely called 'Squash End'.

Ironically the final home for the town meetings, selected in 1849, was the abandoned Puritan or Congregational Church in West Newton which was purchased for $1800 and made over into a town hall.



FOR THE KIDS - Arts in the Parks hosts a presentation by RosenShontz, featuring humor, music and stories, starting at 2 p.m. at the Angier School on Beacon Street in Waban. Tickets are $1.50 and information is available by calling 552-7120.

Adoption:

Filling a hole in the heart

Thirteen-months-old Richard Lincoln with his mom, Cynthia, and dad, Bob. Richard, who was two-and-one-half months old when he came to the United States, was born in Peru.

Photos by Art Illman

Anna Cappezzera, 13-months-old, is fed by her mother, Elizabeth, while her proud father, Frank, looks on. Anna was born in Korea and brought to the United States with the help of the International Adoption Agency of Newton.

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

"One thing that made it so nice is that we were going to have the baby we wanted to have so much," said Cynthia Longfellow Lincoln of the Peruvian child she and her husband Bob adopted last March.

For the Lincolns, professionals in their early thirties, adoption served to fill a large and painful void in their lives.

"He has really filled a big hole in my heart," admitted Cynthia as she held her 12-month-old son in the kitchen of her West Newton home. "The way I look at it is that Richard needed a family and we needed a family so we got together."

Elizabeth and Frank Capezzera also of West Newton, adopted their 13-month-old Korean child, Anna, last April. Like the Lincolns, the Capezzaras, professionals in their mid-thirties, were "parents looking for a child."

Phyllis Loewenstein, the director of the International Adoption Agency in Newton, noted that one of the misconceptions about adoption is that outsiders see the adopting parents as "being saintly."

"I'm not comfortable with the family that wants to do something for humanity as a primary motive," she confessed.

What people fail to recognize is that the parents of an adopted child are also improving their own lives. Lowenstein estimated that between 50 and 60 percent of the couples who go through the agency are unable to have children biologically.

"These children are very wanted," said Loewenstein. "Maybe more (than a biological child) because of the frustration each couple has endured."

After years of unsuccessful attempts at having a child biologically, each couple decided what they wanted was a family. Adoption was the means to this end and foreign adoption the quickest means available.

"One of the things that we considered was if we would love an adopted child as much as a biological child," said Cynthia. "I can't imagine loving a child more than Richard."

"I never realized how much fun it would be and enjoyable to have a child," added Cynthia. "We've been in heaven since he came."

After a couple decides it wants to adopt a child, it must go through an extensive home study program. If the agency approves of the couple, it takes from several months to a few years before the match is finalized.

The wait for a healthy caucasian infant is from five to seven years, a time-frame neither couple wanted to confront. "I would have been 40 at that point," said Elizabeth. "I didn't want to take on something like that at that age."

"It was out labor," joked Cynthia of the home study evaluation."It tested our commitment to the project."

Both the Lincolns and the Capezzaras were able to adopt their children less than a year after taking on the home study program.

The Lincolns' child, Richard, was 2½ months-old when the couple retrieved him from a hospital in Peru. Peruvian adoption laws mandate that the adopting parents must pick up the child in the South American country. Anna, the Capezzaras' girl, was 3½ months-old when she arrived in the United States from Korea.

It is no coincidence that Richard and Anna were young when they were first rocked in the arms of their adoptive parents. Each couple requested an infant to experience the child's developmental stages and to place its own trademark on the child.

Adoptive parents opt for a child of a certain nationality for many reasons. For the Capezzaras, there were "fewer imponderables" with a Korean adoption because of the preparation of the child's medical and legal papers. The Lincolns wanted a South American adoption because a relative was married to a Brazilian native.

"It's much tougher to do in concept than to do," said Elizabeth of the decision to adopt a child. "It appears tough because people have never thought about it."

"It's a situation most people don't confront. Therefore they have only thought about adoption in the abstract," said Bob.

Noted Frank: "Until you get involved with it you tend not to know too much about it."

Both couples, however, do have mild fears for when their children enter into social settings outside the family. "In a way we won't really know what we're getting into for a long time," said Elizabeth. "Now she is a cute little baby and everyone loves little babies."

For the Capezzaras and the Lincolns the anxieties that go hand and hand with adopting a foreign-born child have been minor when compared to the rewards.

"There are moments of doubt that people raise." pointed out Frank. "You see people discrimated against and you wonder what it will be like for your child."

"It's changed our lives only for the better," said Cynthia, "The only thing I miss is going out for Chinese food on the spur of the moment."

Newton native is nominated to be CG commandant

NEWTON - Secretary of Transportation Drew Lewis said last week President Reagan has nominated Vice Admiral James Steele Gracey , a native of Newton, to be the 17th Commandant of the United States Coast Guard. The nomination is being sent to the Senate for confirmation.

The 54-year-old graduate of the Coast Guard Academy and the Harvard Business School succeeds Admiral John B. Hayes, who is retiring.

A 32-year veteran of the Coast Guard, the new commandant has served in assignments as varied as commander of a LORAN (Long Range Aids to Navigation) transmitting station in an isolated Tlingit Indian village at Yakutat, Alaska, to Dangerous Cargo and Vessel Movements Officer at the Port of Boston.

Gracey moves up to the Coast Guard's top career officer position from an assignment as commander of the Coast Guard's Atlantic Area and Third District, headquartered at Governors Island in New York City.

"Admiral Gracey brings to the post of Commandant a wealth of experience in all phases of Coast Guard Command," Lewis said, " and his expertise in the field of management, finance and training gives him a valued additional dimension."

The Coast Guard is one of nine operating administrations of the Department of Transportation.

"Admiral Gracey knows the Coast Guard's many missions from first hand experience," commented retiring Commandant Hayes. "He has served with distinction ashore and on ship and is well qualified to assume these new responsibilities."

The new commandant was commissioned an ensign on June 3, 1949 after receiving a bachelor of science degree in engineering, and was promoted to flag rank of rear admiral 25 years later with command of the Ninth Coast Guard District in Cleveland. He was chief of staff at Coast Guard Headquarters when promoted to vice admiral and became commander of the Pacific Area and Twelfth Coast Guard District in San Francisco. He was assigned to the Atlantic Area command in June of last year.

Prior to reaching flag ran8k, Gracey held numerous shore station assignments in the field of management, finance and training, as well as ship command—captain of the Cutter Maripose.

He received a Masters' degree in business administration from Harvard in June, 1956.

He holds the Distinguished Service Medal, Legion of Merit with Gold Star, Meritorious Service Medal, Coast Guard Achievement Medal and Commandant's Letter of Commendation.

Born in Newton, Gracey graduated from high school in Needham. He is married to the former Dorcas Neal of Needham and they are the parents of three children: Kevin, Cheryl and Pamela.

Printmaker plans show at Newton Free Library

NEWTON -"For me, the process of making a print is a series of transformations," explains Newton artist Eleanor Rubin who is featured in a one-women show, "A Season of Anticipation," in the Newton Free Library Gallery, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner from March 8 - 28. There will be a reception for the artist Wednesday, March 17, from 5 - 8 p.m.

Rubin works directly on the plate, without preliminary drawings, creating im ages which reflect her personal fanasies and fascination with transition and metamorphosis.

While often playful, Rubin's drawings, prints, and collages hint at both ends of the spectrum: birth and death, harmony and discord, winter and spring. "Of Menace and Merriment," is a recent series which through the interp lay of harmonious color and tense light lines, shows a figure and a phantom animal in mid-air, about to ascend, or to fall.

"Warmth In Winter" is also an unsettling image; its title setting the scene for a print that is predominantly silver gray, with a small area of scarlet.

Rubin, a talented printmaker, is also an enthusiastic workshop leader. She is eager to help people understand and enjoy prints. Rubin explains the techniques of printmaking, and then urges people "8to get beyond the techniques in order to see the image."

Rubin, who has received her masters in education from Harvard University and a B.A. from Brandeis, exhibited work in recent shows at Boston University and the Boston Visual Artists' Union. She is affiliated with several galleries including the Wenninger Graphics Gallery in Boston, and the Ethel Putterman Gallery in Orleans, Mass.

Currently Rubin is the coordianator of special services for the Education Department at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston.

Library hours are 9-9 Monday - Thursday; 9-6 Friday; 9-5 Saturday and 1-4 Sunday. For more information call 552-7145.

Dr. Eisen now takes special post at MIT

CAMBRIDGE — Dr. Herman N. Eisen of Waban has been appointed the Whitehead Institute Professor of Immunology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Dr. H. Robert Horvitz of Arlington has been appointed the Whitehead Institute Career Development Associate Professor of Biology.

M.I.T. established the two professorships in recognition of the recently-approved affiliation between the university and the new Whitehead Institute for Biomedical Research to be built near M.I.T. One professorship honors a senior and established professor at M.I.T. and the other provides support for the developing career of a younger M.I.T. faculty member. Neither Dr. Eisen nor Dr. Horvitz is among those who eventually will have dual appointments at M.I.T. and the new Whitehead Institute.

The affiliation between M.I.T. and the Whitehead Institute allows certain senior scientists who will be appointed to the research staff at the Whitehead Institute to receive simultaneous appointments to the M.I.T. faculty. In this way, the Whitehead Institute, which otherwise would be devoted entirely to research, will aslo have a formal involvement in teaching, thus enriching both teaching at M.I.T. and research at Whitehead Institute.

Dr. Eisen, the newly-appointed Whitehead Institute Professor at M.I.T., is an authority on the structure and function of antibodies, the protein molecules that biological systems, including the human body, produce to fight infectious agents and other foreign bodies. He develped the use of simple organic molecules as models for the complex components of the foreign agents that stimulate the body's specific immune defenses. With these models he established the number of antibody binding sites an their affinities and showed that the affinities change with time as the body responds to a foreign agent. His recent work has dealt with the highly-specific monoclonal antibodies produced by hybridomas, made by fusing a fast-growing cancer cell with a normal antibody-producing cell.

Dr. Eisen of 9 Homestead St. was graduated from New York University in 1939 and the NYU College of Medicine in 1943. Following medicine and pathology residencies at several New York hospitals, he was on the NYU staff for five years. In 1955, he became professor of medicine at Washington University, St. Louis, Mo., and in 1960 became professor and head of the department of microbiology there. He came to M.I.T. in 1973 as professor of immunology in the Department of Biology and a senior research staff member in the M.I.T. Center for Cancer Research. He is a past president of the American Association of Immunologists and a past vice president of the American Society of Clinical Investigation. He has been a member of the National Academy of Sciences since 1969. He is co-author of a widely used textbook if immunology.

Hiroshima's horrors recalled

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Students at Newton South High School listened in silence yesterday as a survivor of the atom bomb, dropped on Hiroshima, Japan during World War 11, said, ''No one cried or screamed. There was silence. There was just shock.''

The woman is one of the ''hibakusha,'' or survivors of the bomb, who are featured in a film that was presented to students as part of the school's ''Nuclear Education Week'' sponsored by The Enrichment Program.

> 'No one cried or screamed. There was silence. There was just shock.'

Presenting the film, ''Survivors,'' and answering student's questions was Dr. Tadatatoshi Akiba, a Tufts University professor and founder of the Foundation for International Understanding. Akiba established the group to promote awareness of the atom bomb and its effects, and to prevent further use of nuclear weapons.

''I don't want this repeated on anyone else,'' said Akiba, who was 2-years-old and 20 miles away when the United Stated dropped the bomb in 1945.

Akiba explained to students that the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombs killed 210,000 people instantly, caused 100,000 cancer deaths and resulted in thousands of radiation deaths.

In addition, Akiba, a professor of mathematics, told students that embryos were very vulnerable to the radiation. Many were born with unusually small heads, which sometimes resulted in low I.Q.'s.

Higher incidences of early menopause, cataracts, heart disease and cancer are also evident in the bomb survivors, said Akiba. Even more davastating, according to Akiba and several scientists interviewed for the film, is that some of the diseases are manifestated in generations born after the bombing.

Though the studies are inconclusive, a San Fransisco doctor said, ''The possibility is there, the fear is there that the effects will show up in second and third generations.''

A 17-year-old Japanese girl offered evidence that this may be true. Her mother, a survivor of Hiroshima, and her sister had thyroid diseases and her brother suffered from related problems. The girl herself, born nearly two decades after the bomb was dropped, revealed a large lump in her throat. Perhaps out of fear, she has not been examined by a doctor.

Considering all the devastating physical and emotional effects of the bomb, how do the survivors, and the Japanese people as a whole, feel about the event, asked one South student?

''There is no anger or hatred,'' said Akiba. Pointing out that feelings may vary depending how much one was hurt by the event, Japanese people feel, ''That mankind is responsible for the bomb. Many countries contributed to making the bomb.''

Akiba told students that Japan has a firm anti-nuclear policy, however he is worried about recent reports that the United States has nuclear weapons in Japan.

''The Japanese have to play the role of a leader in nuclear disarmament. They should be stronger than they are in that role,'' said Akiba.

One of the Hiroshima survivors featured in the film was a former Newton resident, now living in San Fransisco, whose son attended Newton North High School. One of the ''Hiroshima Maidens,'' who were sent to the United States to be treated by plastic surgeons, Mrs. Shigeko Sasamori, 51, still bears facial scars from severe burns. When her son's friends asked what was wrong with his mother, Sasamori remembers that he became emotionally upset, yelling at his friends never to mention it when she was within earshot.

''He was afraid I would be hurt,'' Sasamori said.

Akiba said he wants to educate people, especially young people, about the effects of the bombs, so that they can deal with the problem in the future.

''It's complex and there's no easy answer,'' he explained. ''You have to separate the facts from the fancy.''

For Akiba, who lives in Arlington with his psychologist wife and young son, writing essays and lecturing is a way of communicating the nuclear issue. For Katie Houlihan, a member of Musicians Against Nuclear Arms, music is another way to deliver the message.

Chief tells how to avoid auto thefts

NEWTON — Chief William Quinn expressed his continuing concern at the number of motor vehicle thefts occurring in Newton and throughout the State. ''Although they are on the decline here,'' said the chief, ''we would like to reduce that number even further.'' ''Motorists cannot make their cars totally theft proof but there are simple and inexpensive precautions that can be taken'' continued the chief. Unattended cars should always be kept locked with the windows tightly closed. They should never be left running or with the keys in the ignition nor should spare keys be hidden in the car. Vehicle registrations and licenses should be kept with the driver, not stored in the car. This practice would make it difficult for the thief to provide proof of ownership or proper identification. Any items of value should be locked in the trunk so as not to tempt a theif to enter the automobile.

''Large parking areas have traditionally been target areas but vehicles can be stolen from any location'' said the chief. It is best to park in well lighted sections and, if possible, to garage vehicles in residential neighborhoods.''

In addition to the above suggestions, Chief Quinn noted that various anti-theft mechanisms may also be installed in motor vehicles. These include devices that lock the steering wheel and shift lever or hood, disengage the ignition, cut off the fuel supply, etc.

Chief Quinn concluded by encouraging citizens to be more alert and immediately contact the police department if they become aware of any suspicious activities around motor vehicles or elsewhere.

Trash talk

A look at a neighbor's trash

By Betsy Lewenberg

From time to time, this column will highlight a successful recycling program. This week's column features recycling in the neighboring town of Wellesley.

Wellesley has a national reputation as a model recycling community. One visit to its recycling center will convince even a non believer that the reputation is well deserved.

From the moment you turn off Route 135 into the disposal area, it is obvious that this is no ordinary refuse facility. The emphasis is clearly on recycling rather than trash disposal. The sign at the entrance informs you that you are entering a "recycling and Disposal Facility" — and not the other way around. A large blue sign soon is visible urging you to save tax dollars by recycling. And once inside the impeccably maintained facility, you have to pass through or detour the recycling center to reach the refuse disposal area.

Wellesley recycles a wide range of materials. Newspapers are deposited into a chute which feeds into a baling machine. Magazines are placed on shelves to be baled at a later date and sold along with other mixed papers for recycling. Steel and aluminum cans are dropped down a chute which feeds a conveyor belt that leads to a magnetic separator which sorts the steel from the aluminum. Cardboard boxes are placed in an open top container. Clear glass, green glass and brown glass (all color sorted) is also deposited in open top containers. There are four foot high plastic containers for each of the following materials: brown paper bags, aluminum foil, green plastic containers, clear plastic bottles and milk cartons. The recycling center also has serveral Salvation Army dumpsters for reusable goods and clothing, and an area for recycling waste oil, batteries and tires.

In addition, seperate areas are set aside for firewood, compost, wood chips, scrap metal and reusable items. Nothing seems to be forgotten. Instead of disposing used Christm as trees, Wellesley gives them to Weston Nurseries where they are used for mulch. The town even has a used book exchange.

Wellesley generally manages to avoid the middleman recycling processor in order to receive top do llar for its materials. It bales its own newspapers, cardboard, mixed paper, aluminum, and even plastic and milk cartons. Steel is separated on site from aluminum by a magnetic drum, saving time and expense at an intermediate stop. Even the hauling of most materials is done by town vehicles to var8ious locations, both in and out of state.

implemented after residents stormed City Hall complaining the high values were unfair and inaccurate.

Brady said that a master assessment with new property values of all homes will be in municipal libraries by Friday. The list, which can aid taxpayers in informal and formal appeal hearings, will also be printed in local newspapers.

Taxpayers can appeal their new values or obtain information and data that is the basis for the new assessments by setting up an appointment with the Acton firm, Finnegan Associates, that conducted the revaluation. Taxpayers can also receive the five comparable values of other homes used to determine their new assessment at the hearing.

Taxpayers can set up an appointment with Finnegan Associates by calling the phone number included with the new assessment. Brady has refused to release the phone number to the press until tommorow.

The new tax bills for homeowners will reflect classified tax rates which allow a greater shift of the tax burden to commercial and industrial properties. Under a classification law, approved by the legislature in 1978, commercial properties can be taxed as high as 150 percent and residential properties can taxed as low as 65 percent.

Taxpayers can appeal the April tax bills by filing for an abatement with city assessors within 30 days of receiving the bill. If unsuccessful, taxpayers can also appeal to the state Appellate Tax Board up until 90 days after receiving the bill.

Eligible taxpayers can file for a variety of exemptions applying to those over 70; the blind; veterans; those over 65 in a tax-deferral program and surviving spouses who qualify.

Under a hardship clause any homeowner who is unable to pay his or her taxes can apply to the assessors for an exemption or partial exemption.

To call to make an appointment for information or to set up an informal hearing, homeowners can call 552-7331.

Hearings will begin on Thursday, Feb. 18 in War Memorial Auditorium. Hearings will be scheduled by telephone appointment only. Brady said walk-ins will not be accommodated and "would only create confusion as the records would not be readily available."

Hiroshima's horrors recalled

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Students at Newton South High School listened in silence yesterday as a survivor of the atom bomb, dropped on Hiroshima, Japan during World War 11, said, "No one cried or screamed. There was silence. There was just shock."

The woman is one of the "hibakusha," or survivors of the bomb, who are featured in a film that was presented to students as part of the school's "Nuclear Education Week" sponsored by The Enrichment Program.

> 'No one cried or screamed. There was silence. There was just shock.'

Presenting the film, "Survivors," and answering student's questions was Dr. Tadatatoshi Akiba, a Tufts University professor and founder of the Foundation for International Understanding. Akiba established the group to promote awareness of the atom bomb and its effects, and to prevent further use of nuclear weapons.

"I don't want this repeated on anyone else," said Akiba, who was 2-years-old and 20 miles away when the United Stated dropped the bomb in 1945.

Akiba explained to students that the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombs killed 210,000 people instantly, caused 100,000 cancer deaths and resulted in thousands of radiation deaths.

In addition, Akiba, a professor of mathematics, told students that embryos were very vulnerable to the radiation. Many were born with unusually small heads, which sometimes resulted in low I.Q.'s.

Higher incidences of early menopause, cataracts, heart disease and cancer are also evident in the bomb survivors, said Akiba. Even more davastating, according to Akiba and several scientists interviewed for the film, is that some of the diseases are manifestated in generations born after the bombing.

Though the studies are inconclusive, a San Fransisco doctor said, "The possibility is there, the fear is there that the effects will show up in second and third generations."

A 17-year-old Japanese girl offered evidence that this may be true. Her mother, a survivor of Hiroshima, and her sister had thyroid diseases and her brother suffered from related problems. The girl herself, born nearly two decades after the bomb was dropped, revealed a large lump in her throat. Perhaps out of fear, she has not been examined by a doctor.

Considering all the devastating physical and emotional effects of the bomb, how do the survivors, and the Japanese people as a whole, feel about the event, asked one South student?

"There is no anger or hatred," said Akiba. Pointing out that feelings may vary depending how much one was hurt by the event, Japanese people feel, "That mankind is responsible for the bomb. Many countries contributed to making the bomb."

Akiba told students that Japan has a firm anti-nuclear policy, however he is worried about recent reports that the United States has nuclear weapons in Japan.

"The Japanese have to play the role of a leader in nuclear disarmament. They should be stronger than they are in that role," said Akiba.

One of the Hiroshima survivors featured in the film was a former Newton resident, now living in San Fransisco, whose son attended Newton North High School. One of the "Hiroshima Maidens," who were sent to the United States to be treated by plastic surgeons, Mrs. Shigeko Sasamori, 51, still bears facial scars from severe burns. When her son's friends asked what was wrong with his mother, Sasamori remembers that he became emotionally upset, yelling at his friends never to mention it when she was within earshot.

"He was afraid I would be hurt," Sasamori said.

Akiba said he wants to educate people, especially young people, about the effects of the bombs, so that they can deal with the problem in the future.

"It's complex and there's no easy answer," he explained. "You have to separate the facts from the fancy."

For Akiba, who lives in Arlington with his psychologist wife and young son, writing essays and lecturing is a way of communicating the nuclear issue. For Katie Houlihan, a member of Musicians Against Nuclear Arms, music is another way to deliver the message.

NEWTON — Chief William Quinn expressed his continuing concern at the number of motor vehicle thefts occurring in Newton and throughout the State. "Although they are on the decline here," said the chief, "we would like to reduce that number even further." "Motorists cannot make their cars totally theft proof but there are simple and inexpensive precautions that can be taken" continued the chief. Unattended cars should always be kept locked with the windows tightly closed. They should never be left running or with the keys in the ignition nor should spare keys be hidden in the car. Vehicle registrations and licenses should be kept with the driver, not stored in the car. This practice would make it difficult for the thief to provide proof of ownership or proper identification. Any items of value should be locked in the trunk so as not to tempt a theif to enter the automobile.

"Large parking areas have traditionally been target areas but vehicles can be stolen from any location" said the chief. It is best to park in well lighted sections and, if possible, to garage vehicles in residential neighborhoods." In addition to the above suggest ions, Chief Quinn noted that various anti-theft mechanisms may also be installed in motor vehicles. These include devices that lock the steering wheel and shift lever or hood, disengage the ignition, cut off the fuel supply, etc.

Chief Quinn concluded by encouraging citizens to be more alert and immediately contact the police department if they become aware of any susp icious activities around motor vehicles or elsewhere.

Fink wants 4-percent school spending hike

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Although the mayor has asked all city departments for budget cuts of 4.5 percent, the preliminary school budget unveiled Thursday night calls for a more than $1.5 million increase over last year.

While the increase appears large compared with cuts being made by other departments, the School Department this year (unlike city departments) has included money for collective bargaining salary increases in their budget.

The anticipated collective bargaining increases are contained in the salary account, which is up almost $2 million. The next largest hike is a very distant second: fuel and utilities with a projected increase of $142,882.

In presenting the FY83 budget, Superintendent Aaron Fink told the School Committee that, based upon committee budget guidelines and a school-by-school analysis of the needs of the system, he was bringing in a $39,280,633 bottom-line figure, up 4 percent from last year.

The overview showed increases in salaries and other accounts totaling about $2.4 million being offset by cuts in staff and other areas amounting to $969,591. The net effect is a $1.5 million increase over last year's bottom-line figure of $37,763,033.

According to Fink, declining enrollment is responsible for the $750,436 in staffing cuts.

Fink said his recommendations meet the School Committee priorities for maintaining pupil-teacher ratios and teacher loads at approximately current levels.

According to Fink, projections show that pupil-teacher ratios will actually drop from 23.1 at the elementary level to 22.9. In the junior highs, the ratio will rise slightly from 14.5 to 14.6. At the two high schools, ratios will drop from 17.1 to 16.8.

Fink also said that a study of declining enrollment and professional staffing cuts since 1976 shows that the two have kept pace in Newton, with a percentage enrollment decline of 30.3 compared with a total staffing percentage drop of 26.1.

The account which includes fixed charges such as health insurance, insurance, workmen's compensation and unemployment compensation is expected to decrease by more than $158,000 for next year.

Fink said that although the costs of Blue Cross-Blue Shield and life insurance have gone up more than 24 percent to over $1.9 million, a $528,160 cut in unemployment compensation left the overall account with a 7.2-percent recommended decrease.

More than $75,000 is targeted predominately for purchasing new classroom furniture which Fink says is "urgently needed."

Defense keeps Lions roaring

By Steve Tiberi
Sports Correspondent

The Newton South boys' basketball team demonstrated why they will be a force to be reckoned with in the upcoming EMass Tournament Monday night at the Catholic Memorial Gym.

The Lions came out like lambs and weren't playing at their best. Yet, Newton South still managed to put together a stellar defensive effort to come-from-behind and dump the Knights, 71-61, in a non-league contest.

Catholic Memorial at 4-12 on the season is not a powerhouse, but it is a Division One school with talented players. The Lions, who have wrapped up a tourney berth and have finished the league schedule, came out a little flat and the Knights took advantage.

CM behind the shot blocking of high-jumping sophomore John Cooper and shooting of forward Tony Costa opened up a 18-11 lead after the first period and led 27-14 with 4:55 left in the middle period.

"We were a little flat at the start," said Newton South coach Joe Killilea. "Our defense stunk in the first half and our players were thinking about 24 (Cooper). He blocked a few shots and they were looking for him."

The Lions were missing layups in the first half and the shots just weren't dropping. Enter senior guard Dave Hill, who was the catalyst of the South comeback, sank three straight baskets to end the first period. Hill was a ball of fire all over the court and he would pick up the slack.

The slack was created by off nights from both center Mike Antonellis and forward Scott Anglin. The two Lion big men were in foul trouble all game long and sat out quite a bit of the second half. Antonellis finished with five points and Anglin scored eight points, which is well off his average of 15.8 per game.

"Mike and Scott were in foul trouble all game," said Killilea. "But,it is a tribute to our team depth that we were able to comeback without their services. Gene Lindsey and Greg Wands did a great job coming off the bench. Our whole bench played well and that is a good sign come tourney time."

The Lions put on a min-spurt in the final minutes of the second period to close to 31-28 at the half. CM's John Riley led the way for the Knights scoring eight of his 10 points in the first half. Cooper also had 10 points for the Knights in the initial frame. The two would score just six points between them the rest of the game.

The Newton South defense came out strong in the third quarter and the emergence of forward Steve Abrams as a force on the offensive and defensive boards helped. Abroms, is 6-1, but he picks his spots and comes down with a lot of key rebounds.

The Third quarter was evenly played and the Lions still trailed by three, 49-46, going into the fourth period. The Lions would start the final frame by exploding for an 18-6 run to take control of the game.

Hill started things with a steal and driving fast break layup. Scott Anglin picked up a big defensive rebound and South had the ball trailing, 49-48, with a chance to take the lead for the first time in the contest.

Abrams made the play that would vault the Lions into the lead for good. The senior jumped between two CM forwards and grabbed an offensive rebound. He went right up with the shot, hit the basket and was fouled. Abrams sunk the free throw and the Lions were ahead, 51-49, to stay.

Abrams pumped in eight of his 16 points in the final quarter. Hill also sparked the Lion attack by hitting 10 of 12 freethrows. Hill the best clutch freethrow shooter on the team and he kept driving and getting fouled by the Knights. Hill had a game-high 28 points to lead the Lions. Hill's partner is mayhem is guard Meatchie Russell. The slick sophomore had four of his 10 points in the final quarter.

Russell also contributed with tremendous ball-handling and tight defense. CM could never get going in the fourth quarter and scored their first point with just 4:57 left in the period.

Scott Anglin and Antonellis didn't score a point in the South fourth-quarter surge. They were on the bench with foul trouble, but the Lions cameback anyway and that should spell trouble for any future tournament foes.

The Lions are now 14-2 on the season with a 5-0 record in non-league games. Newton South plays its final game of the season Thursday night at Quincy. The summary:

NEWTON SOUTH (71)--Abrams 5-6-16; Scott Anglin 3-2-8; Hill 7-14-18; Russell 4-2-10; Antonellis 2-1-5; Lindsey 1-2-4. Tot. 22-27-71.

Tiger skaters slip past Quincy

John Butterworth and Tom Whiting each scored third-period goals to boost Newton North to a hard-fought 5-4 win over Quincy Wednesday night in a Suburban League contest at the Watertown Arena.

The Tigers went into the final frame holding on to a 3-2 lead in what had been a see-saw battle. Butterworth's goal gave Newton North a 4-2 lead, but Quincy came right back five minutes to close the gap to two goals. Whiting then added the insurance tally two minutes later for the Tigers as Quincy would pull the goaltender and score with five seconds to play.

Dave Buckley and Butterworth scored goals in the first period as the Tigers recovered from a 1-0 deficit to take a 2-1 lead. Tom Grady scored the lone Tiger goal of the second period. Newton North's offense pumped 40 shots on the Quincy net.

The victory ended Newton North's league season with a 5-9-2 record and the Tigers will play Billerica on Wednesday.

Bob St. Cyr scored two goals and Tom Paschal collected one goal and four assists Wednesday night to power Waltham High to a much tougher than expected 5-4 victory over hapless Cambridge, Rindge and Latin at the MDC Rink in Cambridge.

Though no powerhouses themselves, the Hawks nonetheless did not figure to have too difficult a time with the winless Cantabs. But that attitude almost caused their downfall. "I tried to tell the kids all week what kind of game this would be," said coach Peter Yetten. "But it's human nature to take a team like this lightly. We felt that if we stepped on the ice it was a victory. We learned a great lesson. You can't just show up, you have to work for everything in this life."

St. Cyr gave Waltham a 1-0 lead early in the first period when he sent a quick wrist shot from the slot to the far corner, but the Cantabs responded with the next two markers to take a surprising 2-1 lead into the middle stanza.

"To beat a team like Cambridge, you have to dump the puck in and try to break them down with good forechecking and hustle," said Yetten. "We didn't do that. Everyone tried to do it on his own."

St. Cyr gave the Hawks a 2-2 tie entering the third period when he beat the Cantab goalie in the final four seconds of the second. Paschal took a shot from outside the blue line, the goalie bobbled the rebound and St. Cyr pounced on it.

The Hawks then came alive in the third. "We were flat for two periods," said Yetten. "But I blasted them in the locker room and told them they'd better get going or they would lose this one."

Paschal gave Waltham the lead again two minutes into the period when he won a face-off in the Cambridge zone and drilled the puck over the goalie's shoulder.

Newton Bantams look to tourney

Despite extending their undefeated season to 47 games (47 wins and four ties), the Newton Youth Hockey Bantam AA team had to be satisfied with a victory in the consolation game of the Taft School Invitational Hockey Tournament played at Watertown, Conn., the weekend of Feb. 5-6&.

Newton opened the tourney with a difficult 3-2 win over a surprisingly tough team from Lewiston, Maine. The Bantams second game was against national powerhouse Oyster Bay, Long Island.

The Oyster Bay six was out to avenge a 6-2 loss to Newton earlier in the season, and with two goals in the first of game and a power play tally at 5:53 of the first period, they looked poised to make amends.

Newton coach Dick Flecther commented after the game that one more Oyster Bay goal and Newton was ready to be blown out.

But that goal never came as the Newton defense, with Kenny Castriotta in goal and defensemen Chris Biotti, Chris Heitman and Jimmy Burke, stiffened and the forwards started to take the game away from the Long Island skaters. Before the first period was over, Biotti scored from the point to make it 3-1.

In the second period, Heitman walked in from the blue line and blasted a slap shot past the screened Oyster Bay goalie. Paul Healey registered the equalizer for Newton at the 8:42 mark.

During a furious third period which many of the observers and scouts called the best period of bantam hockey, they had ever seen, no goals were scored and the game ended with a comeback 3-3 tie for Newton.

Unfortunately, to qualify for the championship game having tied Oyster Bay, the Bantams needed to win in their third game against Hamden, Conn., by 22 goals, and the final 12-0 win fell far short.

The consolation game was anticlimatic as Newton raced to a 6-0 lead against a tired Natick team, and coasted home for a 6-3 victory.

All the Newton forwards were strong contributors during the tournament. The three forward lines are Eddie Sullivan, John Mullowney and John Connors; C.J. young, Jon Sachs and Timmy Marchand; and Bobby White, Healey and Tom Bachner. Connors' play deserves a special note as he was frequently called on to spell one of the defensemen while playing a regular shift at left wing.

The 1981-82 Bantam team is excitedly looking forward to defending the State Bantam Division I championship won by Paul Buckley's 80-81 Bantam AAs. Many graduates of that team are now playing varsity hockey at Newton North High and several area independent schools.

The Mass. Division I Bantam Championship Tournament will be hosted again this year by Newton Youth Hockey and will be played the weekend of March 19, 20 and 21 at the Fessenden School Rink, West Newton, and the Babson College Rink in Wellesley.

The round robin games will be played at both rinks Friday night and all day Saturday, with the two semi-final games and the championship game played at Babson Sunday morning and Sunday afternoon respectively. Anyone interested in seeing Massachusetts' future schoolboy and college stars work their magic in the world's fastest game should plan to take in some of the tournament.

The Newton Bantams expect to be even stronger at tourney time with the return to action of Jamie Rice and goalie John Fletcher who are currently playing varsity hockey at Rivers School and St. Sebastian's respectively.

It would be a tremendous achievement for Newton Youth Hockey's Bantams to represent the state at the National Championships two years in a row. Youth sports are playing an increasingly important role in the community as school athletic budgets are squeezed by the pressures of the times, and this is an opportunity for the people and the businesses of Newton to show their support. Either by volunteering time to work on the tournment, or by donating merchandise for the raffle or buying an advertisement in the Ad Book to help raise money to subsidize the evnt.

Anyone interested in helping in any way should contact Frank Bachner at 332-6327 evenings, or 862-5500, ext. 7775, days.

North trackmen are tri-champs

Brockton gained a share of the Suburban League boys' track title for the second year in a row Wednesday with a 49-37 victory over Newton North at the Cambridge track.

The meet left Brockton, Newton North and Weymouth South all tied for the championship with 7-1 records.

The Tigers were hurt immensely by the loss of Ralph Davis to an injury. Undefeated this season in the dash, Davis had to sit it out and the Boxers, led by Jay McGee, swept the event.

Waltham High's improving boys' track team won its second straight meet Wednesday with a 46-29 triumph over Quincy High.

Kevin Cloherty won two events to power the way, taking the shot put and the dash. Other winners were Greg Platt in the mile, Tim Biggins in the 300 and Joe Walter in the two-mile.

"We had some people out injured but we still performed well today," said coach Greg Kasabian. "We're not going to beat someone like Brockton or Newton North yet, but we are getting better."

Quinn (40) shoots down Cantabs

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

In a season filled with shining moments, this was Debbie Quinn's brightest one.

For Newton North, it was very simply a game they had to win. Lose it, and the Tigers chances to qualify again for the EMass Girls' Basketball Tournament were nil. Quinn made certain the dream would last another day.

Thanks to a 40-point, 15-rebound performance from their No.1 star, the Tigers ran their record to 11-5 overall and 10-4 in the Suburban League with a scorching 68-42 victory over nemesis Cambridge, Rindge and Latin Tuesday afternoon at the North gym.

It's not certain if Quinn's 40 points constitute a school record, but it's doubtful that any gal has ever completely dominated a Newton game as Quinn did Tuesday. She controlled every quarter, scoring eight in the first, 12 in the second, 10 in the third and 10 in the fourth.

But despite those heroics, the Tigers still had to give much thanks to their defense for the rout. From the opening whistle, coach Allyson Toney's crew followed the basics of team defense, switching off smartly to help a teammate and covering the Cantabs aggressively off the ball.

"That was the real key," said Toney afterward. "Last time we played them, we guarded them after they got the ball. This time we were denying them it. Our defense was the whole story."

A spinoff from good defense usually is a strong running game, and the Tigers got theirs in gear very quickly. They took a 13-10 lead after one quarter and then buried the Cantabs in the second stanza, rolling up 23 points en route to a 36-24 halftime advantage. Quinn had 21 first half points, but she wasn't the only Newton offense. Beth Kelley, who has come into her own in the last week, knocked in 13 of her 15 to give that pair 34 of the team's 36. Jenna Lammers scored the only other two.

Kelley's contribution both offensively and off the boards (13 rebounds) took much of the pressure off Quinn. The Cantabs couldn't double on Quinn because Kelley gave proof that she could hit. And if they dropped off to fight Quinn and Kelley down low, Lammers was always there to sink jumpers over any zone.

But the Tigers didn't need Lammers' scoring this time, only her floor game. The senior guard handed out eight assists as she worked the ball nicely into Quinn, who made a career out of setting down low just to the left and right of the lane with her back to the basket. The Tigers kept getting the ball to her and Quinn turned and swished five-footers through the hoop.

One kept waiting for Cambridge, which entered the contest at 9-3 and second place in the Suburban League, to make a run. But it never happened. "They're an explosive team. We never stopped worrying that they could comeback," said Toney.

Quinn, naturally, buried the Cantabs for good. She opened the third quarter with three straight baskets to spark the Tigers to a 42-28 cushion. Displaying her versatility, Quinn scored first on a rebound, next on one of her turnarounds from the left of the lane and finally on a 12-foot rainbow pop. Lammers added a foul line jumper to the run and the Tigers settled into a 16-point lead.

The denoument came with 5:53 remaining in the game when Quinn pulled down a defensive rebound, dribbled the length of the court past the entire Cambridge team and layed the ball in. That made the score 56-38, forcing a Cantab timeout, and when Quinn worked inside for another hoop immediately after, the Tiger spread had mushroomed to 20.

Dolores Williams scored to cut it back to 18, but a final blitz of 10-0 pushed it back to 28 (68-40)

South's Hill, Anglin named DCL 1st team All-Stars

By Steve Tiberi
Sports Correspondent

The Newton South basketball team, which is headed for the EMass State Tournament has placed two players on the Dual County League first-team All-Stars and two more have receive honorable mention, it was announced Thursday.

Junior forward Scott Anglin and Senior guard David Hill were voted first-team All-Stars by the league coaches and Senior center Mike Antonellis and Sophomore guard Meatchie Russell received honorable mention.

Wayland, which won the DCL with a 14-1 record, also had two players named to the first-team. Wayland's 6-8 center Russ Doherty, considered by many the best big man in the state, and Guard Tom O'Shea were selected. Acton-Boxboro's backcourt combination of Lee Oldenberg and Peter Nyberg were also named to the first-team.

Aside from Antonellis and Russell, Concord's Andre Sherrion and John Dolan received honorable mention honors along with Tim Coleman of Acton; Mike Hoyt of Wayland, Pat Weatherbee of Bedford and Mat Ginsberg of Lincoln-Sudbury.

The players selected to the DCL All-Star team will participate in the Jim Hayes Memorial Basketball game tonight, 7:30 p.m., at Concord-Carlise. Hayes, a former coach at Concord, died of cancer. The game will pit the All-Stars against league champion Wayland.

The Lions had a strong year in the league, capturing victories over both Acton-Boxboro and Wayland in tight games. It was in these contests that the talents of Anglin and Hill showed why they were All-Stars.

Anglin, a 6-3 forward with the touch of a 5-8 guard, was the fourth leading scorer in the league. He averaged 15.7 points per game and showed an ability to score from both inside and outside. Anglin collected 110 rebounds in the first 15 games of the season.

"Scott makes it tough on the opposition," said Newton South coach Joe Killilea. "He is a lot of trouble because he can take it inside and out. He is a strong rebounder and has a nice shooting touch. He's the best junior I've seen in my years at Newton South."

Anglin's contributions don't stop when Newton South looses the ball. He is an imposing force on the defense, also. "Scott is a shot blocker," said Killilea. "He is intimidating on defense. Opposing players check to see where he is before they shoot and that takes them out of their offense. There's no doubt that he is a solid all-around player and he'll be back next year."

Hill, who was also chosen to the Dual County League All-Star football team as an end, was one of four guards to make the first team. He was right behind Anglin, scoring at a 15.2 points per game clip. He is a solid outside shooter and exceptional running the fast break. He also works hard on defense and fills the off-guard role to perfection for the Lions.

"Dave does a lot of things well," said Killilea. "He shoots, rebounds, gives out assists and plays tough defense. He is also a hard worker and one of our team captains."

At 6-1, Hill has hauled in 45 rebounds thus far and had dealt out 61 assists on the year. He is teamed with Russell, more on him later, and together they form a well-balanced backcourt combination.

"Dave is probably the best clutch free-throw shooter on the team," said Killilea. "He has won at least eight games in the past two years by tossing in free throws in the final seconds. With the tournament coming up that will be important. Not too many teams will want to foul him in the final seconds."

Antonellis, who was voted to the All-Star team a year ago, started slowly this season because of a shoulder injury. He missed four games and it took him about another three or four to get back into playing shape.

When he did get himself back on track, the 6-5 center began to play well and contribute. In 10 games he pulled down 73 rebounds and averaged 12 points per game.

"Mike kept opposing defenses honest," said Killilea. "They couldn't key on Anglin because Mike would keep hitting. He is a strong rebounder and shot 68 percent from the floor. He's getting back in stride just in time for the tournament."

Mike also received all league honors in football at the end position.

Russell may become the best of them all. The number of guards on the first team suggests the caliber of talent in the league, but Russell was just a whisker below that level if not even.

He is the playmaker for the Lions and his team-leading 113 assists indicates he performs his task well. He averages 8.5 points per game and 8.4 assists per contest. He also had 30 steals on the year and hauled in 44 rebounds.

"Meatchie makes the other players better," said Killilea. "He is a great penetrator that can dribble through zone defenses. I saw him play in junior high in the ninth grade and he could played varsity then. He can only get better."

Arrows fall to strong Redmen

Rivers edged one game closer to the top position in the Southern Division of the Independent League Friday night with a critical 69-61 victory over rival St. Sebastian's at Weston.

Considered at the beginning of the season as the favorites by most experts to win the league, the Redmen have been upstaged for the last two months by the sensational start of St. Sebastian's. While the talented Redmen struggled in the early going and even failed to defend their own holiday tournament back in December, the Arrows played brilliantly. They won their first 13 games — including the Rivers Holiday Tourney — and found themselves leading the Southern Division by two full games.

But in the first meeting of the year between the two Independent powers Friday, the Redmen served notice that they aren't ready to vacate the throne just yet. Rivers was never in trouble, moving out to a 14-6 first quarter lead and a 35-20 cushion at halftime. It grew to a peak of 24 points in the third period before garbage time set in and the Arrows were able to make the score respectable through a 25-point fourth quarter.

The Arrows held Rivers' center John Sims to 18 points, 10 below his seasonal average, but what they didn't bargain on was guard Jeff Wynne. Averaging only 12 ppg., Wynne broke loose for 24 to bury St. Sebastian's. Kevin Sims also added 11, giving the Redmen more balance than they've seen in a long while.

Wynne was the catalyst in the first half. He and Sims scored four each in the opening quarter as the Redmen grabbed that 14-6 advantage. Bob Peretti (four) and John Bean were the only scorers for the Arrows.

The second period was where Rivers pulled away, however. Wynne popped in eight from the perimeter and Sims did a solid defensive job on opposing center John Bean as the Redmen essentially wrapped the contest up.

The closest St. Sebastian's could come in the second half was the final margin of nine points.

Thus, Rivers moves to 10-4 overall and 6-3 in the league while St. Sebastian's, losers now of two straight, is 13-2 and 6-2. Rivers is at Lawrence Academy Wednesday while St. Sebastian's hosts St. Mark's.

The summary:

South and Redmen fall in ice contests

St. Sebastian's fought back from a two-goal deficit in the second period only to have Belmont Hill explode for five goals in the third period enroute to an 8-4 triumph.

Belmont Hill jumped out to a 2-0 lead after the first period. The Arrows responded with a pair of goals to start of the second period. Jeff Simpson netted the first goal with assists to John McNamara and Ned Fortin. Chris Kennedy tied the game for the Arrows five minutes later on a goal with another assist going to McNamara.

Belmont Hill scored to make it 3-2, but St. Sebastian's co-capt. Maury McCarthy tallied with 13 seconds remaining in the second frame to send the two teams into third period tied at 3-3.

Belmont Hill popped in the first three markers to take control of the game in the final stanza. Simpson scored his second goal of the night for the Arrows, but Belmont Hill potted two more for the final score.

The loss dropped St. Sebastian's to 2-6-1 on the year. Tha Arrows will play Milton Academy on Saturday.

In other Independent League action, Rivers scored seven goals in the first two periods to breeze past Governor Dummer, 8-2, Wednesday in a matchup at Weston.

The Redmen got two-goal performances from John Flahive and Mark Petralia to lead the scoring attack.

Flahive, a senior, pumped in the first goal of the game for Rivers with just 22 seconds gone in the first period. Flahive also scored in the second frame for the winners. A defenseman, Flahive played a strong both on both ends of the rink.

Petralia, a sophomore, scored the third Rivers goal and it was the eventual game-winner. Petralia is the center on the third line and he also scored in the second period for the Redmen.

Bob Daley scored for Rivers in the first period and Steve Masiello, who also had two assists, scored in the second period for the winners. John Carlin and Jonh Boyle also tallied for Rivers. The Redmen are 7-4 on the season and will host St. George's on Saturday.

The effects of playing two games in a row were evident in Newton South's 8-1 loss to Bedford. The Lions played Acton-Boxboro on Tuesday night and went back to Assabet Wednesday night against Bedford.

The first period was a scoreless tie, but in the second period Bedford scored twice in the first two minutes to start down the winning road. Chris Courtoglous led the way for the Buccaneers scoring four of their eight goals. John Cohen was the lone goal scorer for the Lions in the second period. The summary:

Tiger balance paves way to share of title

Newton North showed its balance by capturing nine events with eight different winners to clinch a tie for the Suburban League championship Friday with a 58-28 rout over Brookline at Cambridge.

The Tigers finished 7-1 in the league, the same as Brockton and Weymouth South.

Winning for Newton were Tom Carleo (mile), George Fulk (1000), Paul Passavant (600), Billy Drew (300), Kevin Troy (shot put), Gerald McHugh (two-mile), Lew Hunter (high jump) and John Drew (hurdles). The Tigers were also first in the relay.

Waltham High completed its season with a 65-19 loss to powerful Brockton to finish at 2-7.

The bright spot, however, was the Hawks sensational Greg Platt, who posted the fastest 600 clocking of the year in the Suburban League (1:18.7) in his first try at that distance.

Platt finished the season undefeated while splitting time between the two-mile, mile, 600 and 1000.

He was Waltham's only victor Friday.

Weston High finished a close second to Wayland on the All-Dual County League Meet held Saturday at the Wayland Field House. Wayland took top honors with 72 points and Weston tallied 68½.

Two Weston trackmen won events. Frank Hamm won the mile and was timed at 4:40.5. Rick Hall won the shotput with a toss of 44 ft., 6¼ in.

Newton South's Scott Butler won the hurdles in the time of 5.9.

MIAA goes to bat for high school seniors

The Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA) Board of Control voted at its January 27 meeting to extend every possible Association consideration to high school seniors who have been compelled to leave their schools to matriculate into colleges this semester in order to preserve future social security (survivor) benefits.

Hundreds of high school seniors in the Commonwealth are affected by a law passed by the United States Congress which terminates survivor benefits for all college age students who are not enrolled as full time college students on May 1, 1982.

This requirement became known to the affected students only recenty and has required a large number of seniors to remove themselves from their high school and immediately enroll in college as full time 1982 Spring semester students.

The MIAA Board of Control consisting of school committee members, school superintendents, high school principals, athletic directors and coaches took the following initiative in order to restore some stability and opportunity which the social security requirement abruptly removed from these students:

"Because this situation can only occur during the 1981-82 academic year and because the students affected have no control over the circumstances and are in the midst of a most unsettling change in their lives, high school seniors affected by the new S.S. law may be declared eligible for high school athletic participation under Rule 9 (page 24 of the MIAA Rule Book) by the MIAA Executive Director provided - One- The student will not participate in any college sport program during the current academic year; (2) the high school diploma is withheld until the May-June graduation; (3) conclusive documentation of social security benefits is submitted by the principal with the waiver request."

MIAA Rule 9 defines high school athletic eligibility as a privilege offered high school students who are under the complete jurisdiction and full supervision of that high school principal. This rule has rarely, if ever, been waived by the Association. The Board's sensitivity to the severe degree of disruption that the new S.S. regulation represents to the affected students was the motivation of the Board's unprecedented action.

Member high school principals must understand that the affected students are athletically not eligible for interscholastic partipation until a waiver of Rule 9 is requested in writing and subsequently approved by the MIAA Executive Director. The option for requesting the rule waiver rests with the high school principal; the Board advises principals who receive such waivers to attempt to hold these students responsible for all local rules related to athletic participation at that school.

The MIAA is a non-profic association to which 365 senior high schools in Massachusetts have voluntarily elected to affiliate themselves.

Lions waltz past Bedford, 66-31

The Newton South basketball team tuned up for their upcoming date with the EMass State Tournament by trouncing Bedford, 66-31, Tuesday night in the final Dual County League game of the season for the Lions at the South Gym.

The Lions took complete control of this game from the opening whistle. Newton South outscored Bedford, 23-7, in the first period and breezed to the victory. Scott Anglin led the way for Newton South scoring seven of his nine points in the initial frame.

Greg Wands played a solid defensive game and also tossed in a team-high 11 points. Center Mike Antonellis dropped in 10 points for the Lions and Scott Abrams and Dave Hill tossed in nine points apiece for the winners. Guard Meatchie Russell only had four points, but he dealt out seven assists for the Lions.

The Lions will have two more tuneup games next week against Quincy and Catholic Memorial.

Newton North played strong basketball for one half and then got overpowered by Cambridge, Rindge and Latin in the final 16 minutes Tuesday in a 53-41 loss at Cambridge.

The Tigers, paced by John Humphrey's six points, trailed by just five (16-11) after one quarter. With Scott Olsson tossing in six in the second period, they cut that to three (26-23) at the half.

But the Cantabs, now 10-4 and in third place in the Suburban League, went ahead, 37-31, after three and ran away with it in the final quarter.

The closest the Tigers could get in the fourth was 39-36 with 6:30 remaining.

Humphrey was Newton's high scorer with 13 while Mark Copolla and Olsson added 12 apiece. Gus Saunders led Cambridge with 14.

10th win eludes Lions

Newton South failed in its quest to win its 10th match of the year Tuesday in the most painful of ways as Belmont just nipped the Lion wrestlers, 23-22, at Newton.

Now 9-4, the Lions went into the heavyweight match needing a pin from Bob Baker to prevail, but Baker's opponent stalled at every opportunity to avoid it and give Belmont the victory. Baker won by a 5-0 decision, but Belmont held on to the dual meet.

"In a situation like that it becomes a question of whether the guy is stalling so obviously that the referee should award a pin," said South coach Charlie Hurwitz afterward. "As it was, the ref had already given the guy a warning and two penalty points. We felt it was such a stall that Baker should have been given the pin."

But the Lions had many other chances to take the meet. "When it comes down to one point, you think back to so many ways it could have turned," said Hurwitz. "Usually you figure you can't afford to make one or two costly mistakes, but we made eight costly ones."

Steve Arduino opened the match by pinning his opponent at 100 pounds. The teams split 107 and 114, with Newton's Steve Steinberg taking the latter on a decision. That led to the first key mistake. Mark Colling dominated his opponent at 119 and should have won, but Belmont's Tim Folan kept avoiding near-falls and managed a 4-4 tie. "We didn't know it then, of course, but one more point and it would have given us the meet," Hurwitz said with disappointment."

The match remained close, however, as Rob White and Rob Schone both won by decision at 128 and 134, respectively, and Dave MacDonald tied at 147. Neil Johnson then kept the Lions alive by avoiding a pin at 187 despite wrestling for the first time in four weeks. "Johnson did a tremendous job," said Hurwitz.

Newton North captured pins in the last three weight classes, but this strong finish couldn't overshadow a slow start as the Tigers lost to solid Weymouth North team, 36-27, in a Suburban League meet.

The Tigers lost seven of the first 10 weight classes and they couldn't get dig themselves out of a hole that deep. Bill Morrissey pinned at 169 for Newton North and Leo Butera followed that with a pin at 188 for the Tigers. Al Fortune closed the dual meet by pinning his heavweight opponent with just 33 seconds gone in the first round. Paul Bresnahan pinned at 147 for the Tigers. Steve Hartman won the team's top effort award by winning a decision at 134.

Tapping a new energy source

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

"Just when I was feeling depressed, the service (Retired Senior Volunteer Program) gave me my own renewed strength, vitality and pride." — Anonymous.

NEWTON — The elderly are probably this country's most underused and misunderstood resource. That is the premise of RSVP.

The Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP), which operates from the Davis School in West Newton, takes this latent resource and harnesses it into community energy. And for the senior citizen who has too much time on his or her hands, it is an opportunity to utilize the talents, skills and experiences that might otherwise go wasted.

Vincent Gallivan, 79, has been co-coordinator of the RSVP wordworking workshop for six years. The workshop, which involves eight men between the ages of 69 and 79, meets twice a week to repair toys and furniture for nursery schools, and create gifts for RSVP to sell.

"I get happiness in helping someone and I enjoy what I'm doing," said Gallivan. "I think more senior citizens would come if they knew about the program. I don't think enough of them know what's going on here."

Launched in 1971 out of ACTION, a federal voluntary agency, RSVP now is in its tenth year nationally and ninth locally with more than 560 volunteers 60 and over involved between Newton, Weston and Wellesley. About 52 percent of the senior volunteers from the tri-community area are from Newton.

"The goal is to place people 60 and over in volunteer jobs that will suit the community's needs," noted Barbara Ireland, the director of RSVP in Newton. "We try to emphasize the skills of the older person."

Nationally, there are more than 260,000 volunteers (representing three percent of the elderly eligible for the program) currently involved in RSVP contributing about 52 million hours of service a year.

RSVP promotes a "feeling of being needed" for senior citizens as well as a "use and appreciation of their skills," said Ireland.

Howard Lipton, director of Human Services, noted that it is essential for people to keep busy when they retire.

"Someone who keeps busy stays healthy, if not physically, at least emotionally," said Lipton. Volunteers give between two hours per week to five hours a day to the service.

The eight programs offered by RSVP range from the Friendly Visitor program where senior citizens visit housebound elderly and nursing homes to the Living History program which affords the elderly the opportunity to share their life experiences in area classrooms.

"We got to the point where we had so many talented people in Newton, Wellesley and Weston that we developed the program to serve the community and its needs," Ireland said.

According to Ireland, the elderly volunteers from the Newton agency gave about 77,000 hours of service in 1981 at a computed cost of 83 cents an hour.

The program, which has not yet been affected by federal budget cuts or Proposition 2½ at the state level, operated with $72,000 during fiscal year 1982, $24,000 of which was raised at the local level. Nationally, RSVP had an operating budget in excess of $26 million in 1981.

"They felt that the volunteers gave enough to the city," explained Ireland on how RSVP avoided the budget ax at the local level.

According to Ireland, 70 percent of the local RSVP budget comes from Washington and 30 percent from local sources. Newton budgeted $4,500 for RSVP last year; Wellesley, $1,800 and Weston, $300. The remaining funds were garnered through fundraising.

Most of the local funding goes toward the transportation costs incurred by volunteers who must travel to the volunteer stations.

This year RSVP has received, in addition to the expected federal funds, an $8,500 grant to procure 100 new volunteers to work with youth. This will mark the first time the program can afford to advertise itself to senior citizens unaware of the offerings, according to Ireland.

Insulin pump is a lifeline for this diabetic

By Eileen Fitzgerald
Correspondent

LOWER FALLS — "Most people don't even notice it. Those who do see it think I'm wearing a beeper," says Needham resident Jill Witherwell.

But the unobtrusive, black apparatus strapped to Jill's waist isn't a transmitter of messages. It has much more vital, far-reaching consequences.

This mysterious "beeper" is actually an automated insulin pump — a lifeline of sorts — that provides a continuous flow of insulin to help regulate Jill's diabetes.

Jill is unique: she is one of the first patients in this area to wear a new automated insulin pump. Needless to say, Jill feels extremely fortunate. "After giving myself insulin injections three times a day for 14 years, I was ready to try almost anything to help regulate my diabetes," she says.

The cause of diabetes is still unknown, but physicians do know it's linked to a deficiency or impairment of insulin action, resulting in high blood sugar.

Some people with diabetes can control their disease through diet and/or pills. But others, who are insulin-dependent, must take insulin injections. Oftentimes, these patients have difficulty controlling their blood glucose levels; they are either too high or too low.

> 'After giving myself insulin injections three times a day for 14 years, I was ready to try almost anything to help regulate my diabetes....
> "...Knowing that it may reduce the risks of possible complications makes it all worthwhile. More importantly, I have a much better sense of well-being.' --Jill Witherwell

But now with a new way of administering insulin, there is renewed hope. The insulin pump can maintain a near-normal range of blood glucose levels.

Furthermore, it is believed by many in the field that the control of glucose levels may reduce the severity of further complications of diabetes such as blindness, kidney disease or cardiovascular problems.

The insulin pump is still in its infancy stages; it was first used in 1979 at Yale University by Drs. Philip Felig and William Tambourlane.

Witherwell first heard about the pump from her physician, Lawrence Stellar, M.D., a NWH senior internist and consultant whose specialty is diabetes. Dr. Stellar said "I knew that Jill would be an ideal candidate for the pump because she is extremely motivated. Her familiarity with the use of computers is also a plus." Witherwell is a radiologic physicist at Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

Dr. Stellar referred her to Dr. Louis Vignati, director of the insulin pump trials at the Joslin Clinic. Witherwell says installing the pump was a relatively simple procedure. "A needle is inserted under the skin of the abdomen. Attached to the needle is a catheter (a thin, plastic tube) which is connected to a syringe containing insulin. The syringe is hooked up to a battery-operated computer which automatically regulates (except before meals) the amount of insulin pumped into the abdominal tissue, which is then absorbed in to the bloodstream."

Operating the pump requires a great deal of daily care. Witherwell fills the syringe each evening with the insulin and changes the needle every two days to prevent infection. Before meals and snacks, she manually injects a previously determined dosage of insulin from the syringe into the pump and keeps daily records of her blood glucose levels. The rest of the work is left up to the computer, which continuously pumps insulin 24 hours a day. Approximately one-half of the insulin dose is automatical pumped; the other half is provided manually.

Although the insulin pump has proven to be a tremendous aid to insulin-dependent patients, it does have some drawbacks. One problem is the expense. The initial cost of the pump runs about $2,000 and an additional monthly cost of about $100 is incurred with the purchase of syringes, needles, batteries, and Chem Strips, which are used to determine blood glucose levels.

There are also psychological factors to consider. Being hooked up to a pump 24 hours a day may pose some problems for some patients. Witherwell concedes that the apparatus is bulky and she has to make allowances in her clothing to accommodate the catheter. But she is also quick to add that she can, on occasion, substitute an insulin injection instead of wearing the pump.

The pump also curtails a patient's lifestyle. As she says, "you always have to be aware of it and be careful not to jar it." Swimming and bathing with the pump are out of the question since the pump isn!'t waterproof. But this isn't a deterrent for Witherwell "I disassemble the apparatus an hour each day so bathing or swimming isn't a problem. Sleeping with it on, however, does take some getting used to."

Still, she maintains that the pump doesn't interfere with her work or her outside activities. And despite whatever inconveniences that the insulin pump may cause, Jill is hopeful. "Knowing that it may reduce the risks of possible complications makes it all worthwhile. More importantly, I have a much better sense of well-being."

Action on police 'force' case awaits DA report

By John Lempesis
Staff Writer

WALTHAM — Attorneys for three of four Newton men arrested after an alleged disturbance at a local restaurant Jan. 16, asked police officials last week to hold a line-up of police officers involved in the arrests.

But one of the attorneys, Thomas Troy, said an agreement was reached to "hold off on the line-up" until a district attorney's investigation is completed into allegations that police used "excessive force" in arresting the men.

Troy and Atty. Michael Reilly, members of the same law firm, had gone to police headquarters last Wednesday morning to ask for the line-up so their clients might identify the officers who allegedly may have used "excessive force."

According to Troy, such possible identification might be used to seek countercharges of assault and battery and of assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon against some of the identified officers.

Troy also said last week he intends to advertise for persons who were witnesses to the arrests at the Lanai Island restaurant at 479 Winter St. to come forward to tell what they saw. Troy said such ersons could speak with either imself, other defense attorneys n the case or with the district at-rney's office.

In regard to the potential line-p of police for scrutiny by the ien they arrested, First Asst. ist. Atty. Howard Whitehead iid last Wednesday afternoon, To my knowledge, no line-up was iade today." Whitehead added at he believed no decision had ien made about whether to hold ch a line-up. If a line-up were to held, Whitehead said, the cirmstances and procedures for conducting it would be determined then.

On Jan. 16, a number of police responded to a radio distress call from a Waltham patrolman on detail duty at the Lanai Island restaurant at 479 Winter St. After arriving., police helped quell an alleged disturbance and arrested the four 21-year-old Newton men.

Police charged David Rines of 36 Orchard Ave., W. Newton and William Connell of 36 Albemarle Rd., Newton, with assault and battery on a police officer and disturbing the peace. James Kivlehan of 58 Warwick Rd., W. Newton and James Martin Jr. of 11 Rossmere St., Newtonville, each were charged with disturbing the peace. Martin faces a second charge of possession of marijuana.

But Rines and Connell and at least four persons who witnessed their arrests outside the restaurant made complaints that police had used "excessive force," according to police officials and defense attorneys. Police Chief Edward J. Sicotte immediately ordered an investigation into the "excessive force" allegations and soon thereafter, the district attorney's office began its own investigation. Those investigations have not been completed and no charges have been brought against any police officers.

In District Court last week William Matthews of Newton, who is the attorney for Rines, said a show cause hearing applied for by his client had been postponed pending the completion of the investigations. Matthews withdrew as the attorney for Connell because he had represented at least one of the police officers who is said to have been involved in the Lanai Island arrests. Matthews made the same offer to Rines but Rines elected to retain him, Matthews said.

Newton attorney seeks end to 'deceptive' ads

NEWTON (UPI) — A Newton attorney has asked the Federal Reserve Board to order its member banks to stop deceptive advertisements that say Individual Retirement accounts will make people "millionaires" when they retire.

Milton Gwirtzman said last week the advertisements were "deceptive and misleading" because they assume continued high interest rates, which in turn assumes double digit inflation for the next 30 years.

"If that happens, a $652,000 balance in an IRA 30 years from now will be worth only $37,000 in today's dollars," said Gwirtzman, former chairman of the National Commission on Social Security.

"IRA depositors will discover, to their horror, that being a millionaire is a long way from living like one," Gwirtzman said in a letter to Fed Chairman Paul Volcker.

He said the ads, which can be found almost daily, do not warn that under double-digit inflation most prices will be "astronomical" in 30 years. He assumed inflation would be at 10 percent for his calculations.

"The average retired 'millionaire' will be paying $33 a pound for hamburger, $22.75 for a gallon of gasoline, $4,525 for a one-day stay in the hospital, $13.15 for a ride on the subway and $7,000 a month for an apartment that now rents for $400," Gwirtzman said.

He said the ads state, in small type, that the projections result from applying an average interest rate on the deposit of 12 percent compounded daily.

The ads claim "millionaire" status could be obtained if a couple invests $2,000 a year each over the next 30 years, the Newton attorney said.

The former chairman of a nine-member bipartisan commission appointed by Congress to review and recommend options for financing retirement said he thought the IRA hype spelled nothing but trouble.

"I am concerned that the deceptive IRA advertising campaign will persuade the public that programs like Social Security and company pensions are unnecessary in view of the 'bonanza' available from IRAs," he said.

1,500 forced to Waltham

Local job office closing?

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The local division of employment security on Centre Street may be closed as a result of federal cutbacks initiated by President Ronald Reagan.

Approximately 1,500 unemployed area residents would be forced to travel to the Waltham employment security office on Main Street to collect benefits if the cut stands.

The possible closing comes in the wake of severe cuts in the state division of employment security less than six months ago. Under cuts implemented last summer, the state division closed the Waltham unemployment insurance office on Spring Street and the Newton job placement center on Watertown Street.

Edward Malmborg, deputy regional director of the state division of employment security, said the tentative closing date for the local office is the end of March. Malmborg said the cut will "drastically" affect services to local unemployed.

Under the cut, 500 employees of the state division would lose their jobs. Of the 17 person full-time staff in the Newton office, Malmborg speculated that three or four would be laid off.

"The reductions are very drastic," he said. "The staff we have to service the unemployed job seeker has been greatly reduced."

"The number of applicants served will probably be diminished," he added. "I think if I were unemployed I would be very concerned about that."

A bill currently before Congress could partially restore the $4.9 million cut by Congress in the state's unemployment services division that resulted from a resolution on Capitol Hill last December.

"There is a possiblity that some of this may be restored," said Malmborg. "We are hopeful, but certainly not definite."

Under the 1981 federal fiscal year budget, funding for the Massachusetts Division of Employment Security was cut $8.2 million or approximately 25 percent.

The Newton office shutdown is part of a cut that could also calls for the closing of unemployment offices in Chelsea, Gardner, Northhampton, Westfield, Orleans, and Boston, In addition, offices in Cambridge, Fall River, Lawrence, New Bedford, Lowell, and Worcester are being consolidated. .

Malmborg also said that the Norwood Unemployment Office staff will be cut from eight to three. He said the Norwood office will no longer provide employment counseling, testing, and targeted job credits.

"We will do our best to service the people we are now servicing," Malmborg said. "We believe public transportation between the two sites is possible."

The statewide unemployment figures dropped in January from 7.4 percent to 6.9 percent, according to Malmborg.

Newton residents head groups planning center

NEWTON — Three Newton residents will head the task groups that will plan programs to be offered by the Jewish Community Center of Greater Boston at the Central Area Jewish Community Multi-Service Center, JCC president Abbott N. Kahn has announced.

Sandra J. Berbeco has been named chairperson of the Group Work Services committee; Brigite Grossman will staff the Cultural Arts and Education commitee; and Bertram Rodman is chairperson of the Health and Physical Education Committee.

Several hundred men and women are members of some 19 task groups that are determining JCC program and policies at the multi-service center, which will put a cross-section of Jewish agencies, constituents and beneficiaries of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies, within a 20-minute drive of an estimated 70,000 Greater Boston Jews. Located on a 35-acre tract at 601 Winchester St., Newton (the site borders the Charles River and is near Routes 9 and 128). Plans call for a spring, 1983 opening.

Sandra Berbeco is a member of the Board of Directors of the Jewish Community Center of Greater Boston and a Board member of JCC's Brookline-Brighton-Newton branch. She is also vice president of Jewish Family and Children's Service, Chairman of Leadership Gifts for the Women's Division of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies and is a past recipient of CJP's President's Young Leadership Award.

Brigite Grossman is coordinator of the Jewish Community Center's "Experiencing Jewish Boston" bus tour program, and is author of a guidebook to local sites of Jewish interest published by JCC. She was a member of the agency's Central Area Interim Committee, responsible for interim programming at the Winchester Street facility, which will be renovated and expanded as the Central Area Jewish Community Multi-Service Center.

Bertram Rodman has been a member of the Combined Jewish Philanthropies' Facilities Planning Committee since its inception and is former chairman of CJP's Insurance Division and of CJP West.

The Central Area branch will be one of 11 operated by the Jewish Community Center of Greater Boston, serving more than 25,000 people throughout Metropolitan Boston each year. The agency offers a variety of athletic, cultural, educational and social service programs through its centers, pre-schools and day camps, as well as through citywide events.

How to safely use hand tools

By UPI — Popular Mechanics

What are the worst things a person can do when using hand tools? Popular Mechanics magazine reports that a recent survey by the Hand Tools Institute found safety to be its members' biggest concern with hand tools.

The survey found:

1. The single most-mentioned error was failure to wear safety goggles or safety glasses with side shields while using hand tools: This occupies the No. 1 spot because eye injuries are considered to be the most traumatic of the many thousands of hand-tool accidents that are reported yearly by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission.

2. Using the wrong tool for the job: For example, don't use a tack hammer if you're going to drive a spike, or a hand maul to drive a finishing nail. For general bench work and most home carpentry, the correct tool to use is a 16-oz. nail hammer.

3. Right tool, improper use: Even the best-made tool will botch a job when used improperly. Striking a nail with a hammer cheek instead of its face can cause a nailing problem or an accident. Handling a chisel incorrectly can cause severe injury. For example, pushing a chisel with one hand while the other holds the work in front of the cutting edge invites injury. The solution is to clamp work in a vise so both hands are free to handle the tool.

4. Improper tool maintenance: For example, a worn tip on a screwdriver can result in a gashed hand. Similarly, a loose or damaged handle can turn a hammer head into a deadly flying object.

5. Overworking a tool's capabilities: This is a ''bush'' or amateur mistake. Probably the most common error is to use a ''cheater bar'' to increase the leverage of a wrench. Don't do it; instead, move up to the next larger wrench.

6. Hitting a toool with another — wrong — tool: Certain tools are made to hit other specific tools or materials. Use only striking tools to strike with. Don't use a wrench to drive a nail; nor should one hammer be used to strike another. Such misuse invites injury and broken tools.

There are many things that no tool should be asked to do; careless and uninformed do-it-yourselfers are particularly susceptible to accidents caused by tool misuse.

How to use acrylic sheet in place of glass

By UPI — Popular Mechanics

Acrylic sheet has taken the place of glass in many places around the home.

Yet, while most people know how to keep glass looking good, few know the proper care for acrylic sheet which, despite its advantages, is more susceptible to scratching. CY-RO Industries, an acrylic-sheet manufacturer, and Popular Mechanics magazine offer the following suggestions for maintaining and restoring sheet plastic:

When acrylic sheet becomes dirty, wash it with mild soap or detergent and plenty of water. Use a soft, clean cloth or a soft mop for larger areas. Do not use any pressure; let the soap do the work. Then dry with a clean, damp chamois. Rubbing a dirty sheet of acrylic with a dry cloth will scratch its surface. Grease and oil can be removed with hexane or naphtha. Do not use other cleaning agents, solvents or sharp tools to remove spots.

Fine scratches can be removed by hand polishing. Several companies manufacture special cleaners and polishes for plastics. If you cannot obtain these locally, a good-quality automotive cleaner will suffice. Apply it to a soft flannel pad and rub the pad back and forth, or with a circular motion. When the scratches have disappeared, remove all residue and apply a quality auto wax in conventional fashion.

To remove scratches that are too deep for hand polishing, use a polishing wheel in an electric drill.

The first step in buffing is to use a bleached muslin wheel with a medium-coarse or fine compound, depending on the depth of the scratches. Keep the wheel in motion at all times. Too much pressure can soften and burn any spot on which you linger.

Do not start near the top of the piece as the wheel may catch the edge and tear the piece from your hands. Start approximately one-third of the way down, and keep moving back and forth until you have reached the bottom edge. Then turn the piece upside down and repeat the operation. For final finishing, use a Domet flannel wheel with a little tallow to lubricate the surface of the wheel.

A scratched acrylic surface should not be sanded unless the imperfections are too deep to be removed by polishing alone. Use wet-or-dry sandpaper for best results and apply water to its surface

Foam seals well

Adhesive-backed foam weatherstripping is easy to use and ideal for sealing casement windows and the bottoms of sash windows.

To use the foam, you need only peel off the protective backing paper, exposing the adhesive surface, and press it into place. One word of caution: Always wash any surface to which you intend to apply foam stripping. An accumulation of dust and dirt can prevent adhesion.

You will need adhesive-backed foam weatherstripping and scissors. It will take about 15 minutes per window.

1. The surface to which the foam weatherstripping is to be attached must be clean.

2. On sash-type windows you can apply the foam to the bottom of the bottom sash and to the top of the top sash. For sealing the sides of sash windows and the point where the top and bottom sash meet, use either metal or vinyl weatherstripping.

Home repair problems

Q. We are owners of a General Electric Jet 90-001 microwave oven that is rusting badly inside along the bottom edge of the door where the glass plate rests. In fact it is almost rusted through in spots. General Electric does sell an expensive special paint to repair it but I wonder if you could suggest a cheaper alternative? I thought of trying both epoxy and heat-resistant paints. However, I'm worried that these paints might emit toxic or contaminating fumes when the oven is operating. I'd appreciate your help.

A. The paint on your GE microwave oven is a special FDA-approved paint designed for application in a food oven. It is non-toxic and the only paint that meets with GE approval for use in a microwave oven cavity. It should be used. The paint is available in a spray can, part No. WB64X5009.

To make the repair, sand the rusted area below the glass down to the base metal to determine whether or not there are any pinholes or deeply grooved slots in the metal. If the rust has destroyed the metal to the point that you can see through to the bottom, have an authorized repair facility replace the oven cavity.

If, however, there is only surface rust, then sand the area well and apply at least two coats of this special paint. After the paint has dried, apply a bead of RTV sealer (GE part No. WX6X100) around the lip that holds the glass in position, then wipe away any sealer from the glass. This will minimize the chance of moisture getting under the plate which would cause further rusting.

Welcome 'batts'

The procedure for installing insulation batts or blankets in an attic are similar. Both are slightly wider than the space into which they will fit, to assure a snug fit. So you'll have to stuff them down between the joists.

By all means, wear heavy work gloves for this job, especially if you are using glass fiber insulation.

You will need insulation batts or blankets and a sharp drywall knife.

The time it will take depends upon the size of the attic.

1. Bring the temporary flooring to the attic and lay it across the joists for a walkway. Begin insulating at one end of the attic and work toward the other. Do not open packages of insulation until you are ready to use them. They are compressed during packing and will expand when the package is opened.

2. If using batts: Stuff each batt down between the joists. Insert the next batt so it is firmly against the last batt, allowing no break in insulation continuity. At cross bracing, cut the batts to fit around the bracing.

Treasurer questions use of benevolent fund

Scafidi stops payment of trust fund money

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — City Treasurer Theodore Scafidi has stopped payments from a municipal benevolent fund and charged that the trustees have attempted to use the funds "improperly."

Scafidi, who controls all city funds including disbursements and tax collection, recently stopped $1,900 in requests from the three trustees of the Horace Cousens fund to pay a private attorney to clarify the terms of the trust fund in probate court.

The dispute began last year when Scafidi refused to issue a payment from the fund for a senior citizens luncheon. Scafidi contends the trustees have attempted to go "outside the scope of the trust."

Horace Cousens, a Newton philanthropist, set up the fund in his will in 1883 to make reduced interest mortgage loans to needy residents. The interest from the loans and the more than $1 million in the fund was to be "distributed to the deserving poor and needy" of the city.

"I don't see what direction they (the trustees) need," said Scafidi. "The man's will is very explicit. I don't see why they should tamper with the man's desires."

Furthermore, Scafidi opposed the use of the trust to fund a city employee's salary to serve needy residents. The city Human Services Department made the request.

The dispute, which has been simmering since last year, is heating up with charges from both sides and a request by Scafidi for a legal opinion from the City's Law Department on whether the trustees can legally use the trust to hire a private attorney.

"They are no different from any other department," asserted Scafidi. "If they want legal advice why don't they go to the Law Department?"

Alan Tichnor, a trustee of the fund, has accused Scafidi of "overstepping his bounds" and acting "irresponsibly." Scafidi, however, has steadfastly maintained that he has the authority to prevent payments from the fund.

Scafidi has won several rounds in the feud with the trustees. In a legal opinion last year, City Solicitor Daniel Funk agreed that the fund could not be used for the luncheon because all of those attending may not be "deserving poor."

In addition, the trustees never submitted a request to to fund a city employees salary to serve needv residents.

Joseph Alexander, head of the Newton Taxpayers Association, appears to have sided with Scafidi in the dispute. In a recent press release, Alexander urged the trustees to "make safe side judgements in the use of those generous but limited funds." In the release, Alexander also noted that "some might regard" the trustees probate action as "an assault on the provisions of the trust and its income."

Jane Pitt, a trustee of the fund, said the trustees want the probate court to specifically determine Scafidi's role in disbursements and "clarify" the terms of Cousen's will. Pitt, a member of the Appellate Tax Board, previosuly served as deputy mayor for Mayor Theodore Mann.

"The trustees are really interested in making sure everything is clarified," said Pitt. "We want to make sure that we are following the course intended...We want to make sure everything is as Horace Cousens would have wished it."

Pitt has denied that the dispute is an open battle between the treasurer and trustees. "It really isn't a fight," she said. "We really don't feel we are fighting with anybody."

Tichnor, however, sharply criticized Scafidi. He argued that the treasurer has acted "to the detriment of the poor and deserving of Newton."

"The trustees have the sole discretion of the distribution of those funds," he said. "If there is any question about the way the funds are used, it is up to probate. It is not Mr. Scafidi's business to tell us what we can and can not do."

Tichnor also claimed that monies from the Cousens fund have been used in the past for the senior citizens luncheon. Scafidi admitted tnat the funds were disbursed previously, but stressed he did not see the requests.

Scafidi has since implemented a standing order that all requests from the fund receive his approval. "I don't have any objection to using the money for benevolent purposes," Scafidi said. "I don't think they advertise enough to get people to use the money."

Rep. Schur receives honors for her work

NEWTON — Representative Susan D. Schur (D-Newton) has received the commendation of the Massachusetts Municipal Association (MMA) for supporting the successful efforts on behalf of local government during the 1981 legislative session.

Noting that the 1981 session required a "series of very difficult decisions" on the part of legislators, the commendation from the statewide municipal organization described the representative as displaying "sensitivity to the problems of local government and awareness of the need for state action on behalf of municipalities."

"This was a year in which the cities and towns of the commonwealth could not have survived without the willingness of the Legislature to cushion the impact of Proposition 2½ by providing increased local aid and greater local flexibility," said MMA Executive Director James Segel in thanking the representative.

"The Association," added Segel, "extends its thanks for efforts on the floor, for votes on the issues, and for work in committee which supported and promoted legislation necessary for local government."

Among the actions taken by the Legislature in its 1981 session were appropriation of $265 million in new local aid, adoption of new laws that place control of county budgets in the hands of cities and towns (which pay county costs), enactment of new parking fine legislation that will allow communities to keep all proceeds from fines, and passage of civil service reform.

Board to study future housing needs

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — To address the future housing needs of the city's residents, the aldermanic Administration and Planning Committee Wednesday agreed to set up a sub-committee to explore policy questions regarding zoning and land use matters.

The sub-committee, which will work in conjunction with the Planning Department, will pay particular attention to the city's larger homes and investigate the possible legitimization of accessory apartments.

Alderman Edward Richmond, who introduced the item, noted that with the high mortgage rate and inflated housing prices, these older and bigger homes are outside the financial limits of young house-buying couples.

Richmond also made mention of the social trend toward smaller families and the increasing number of single people in the house market who are not interested in the purchase of a large home.

"Smaller families are here and the housing stock is suited for those of a generation ago," said Richmond.

"We have a lot of four to six-bedroom homes," noted Richmond. "If we do not do something to legitimize these avenues, they (large homes) could become white elephants in 10 years."

City ordinances permit the division of a large house into a two-family home as long as the division conforms to local zoning regulations and there is a public hearing on the item.

"The buyers available are not willing to pay the prices and those that are can't pay the mortgage," said Richmond. "We have many single-family homes that aren't marketable."

Richmond, however, cautioned against the legitimization of what are now referred to as "illegal apartments" without a homeowner/landlord paying an increased assessment.

Director Barry Canner of Planning and Development said "one of the things his department has started to do is research through real estate files." The study will allow the city to identify the number of housing units available in the city and their location.

"Our ultimate goal," said Canner, "is to increase the housing stock at an affordable level." The city is now looking at 70 potential housing sites to try to alleviate part of this need.

"You cannot build apartments at the middle-income level unless they are subsidized," Canner said.

The sub-committee will report back to Administration and Planning on a quarterly basis.

Inside: Newton's new revaluation list

Closed doors in superintendent search

By Richard Lodge
Graphic Editor

NEWTON - In a move paralleling recent closed-door interviews of candidates for the Newton North High principal's job, the committee interviewing for a new school superintendent will routinely conduct closed interviews of some of the 110 applicants for that position.

Superintendent Search Committee Chairman Oscar Wasserman said Monday his 18-member group has posted the meeting times of the committee and the public is invited to attend. But, Wasserman said, following an explanation of criteria for scrutinizing applicants, the search committee will then go into executive session, excluding the public.

> 'For all practical purposes (the meetings) are open now but I will go into executive session to protect the confidentiality of the applicants which I believe we are permitted to do.'
> Chairman Oscar Wasserman

The committee is looking for a replacement for Superintendent Aaron Fink who is retiring at the end of the current school year. Fink headed the Newton North principal search group which has refused to reveal the names of any of the estimated 100 applicants for that job, except for Marya Levenson, the woman recommended for the job by the committee. The final choice for a new principal rests in the hands of the School Committee which meets Feb. 25 to review Levenson's qualifications.

A complaint filed by The Newton Graphic with the Secretary of State's office about Fink's refusal to release any names, other than the one finalist, is still pending.

On Monday Wasserman said his committee had consulted City Solicitor Daniel Funk about whether or not the state's Open Meeting Law applied to deliberations of the School Committee-appointed superintendent search group.

Funk said that, following discussions with Attorney Carol Ball in the district attorney's office, he advised Wasserman to post the meetings in public, but vote to go into executive session to discuss qualifications of applicants. Ball was on vacation and could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

Hit by the list, city reacts

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The hardest hit by the citywide revaluation will be the elderly who subsist on fixed incomes and predominantly live in the city's older homes.

But last week when the new tax notices landed in mailboxes around the city for young and old alike, it was the talk of the town.

With tax notices in hand it was the elderly for the most part who visted Newton City Hall to dispute their new assessments and obtain information on how they were reached.

Reaction from business: Page 17

As Mayor Theodore Mann said in response to the dramatic property tax bill increases for many taxpayers, "You can't candy coat castor oil."

Mann, who was criticized during the mayoral election last November for delaying revaluation, said the city is "better off" because the revaluation performed by Cole, Layer and Trumble in 1974 was not implemented. The revaluation was discarded after residents stormed City Hall with complaints.

"We're better off," said Mann. "We had no classification then." Under classification, which was implemented in 1978, cities and towns are allowed to tax commercial and industrial properties at a higher rate.

Mann stressed that the revaluation is a "difficult experience" for taxpayers which the city is required to implement under state law.

"The people who have been underassessed are now being equalized and that is a difficult experience," he said. "The purpose of this is to see all taxpayers pay their fair and equal share. If anybody is paying more than their fare share, we want to know about it and correct it."

"This is not unique to Newton," he added. "There is no choice for any

Chestnut Hill station

Crowd rallies to retain firehouse

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The fight to shield the Manet Road Engine 9 Station from the Proposition 2½ budget axe continued Monday night as more than 120 residents and firefighters went to City Hall to show support for keeping the Chestnut Hill fire company.

Fire Chief Edward Reilly has recommended the closing of the station in response to a directive from Mayor Theodore Mann that city departments incur a 4.5 percent cut in the 1983 fiscal year.

The cut amounts to $293,000 for the Fire Department which will leave it with a budget of some $6.2 million. Of this figure, Reilly estimates 97 percent goes toward salaries.

Reilly has stressed that the public safety impact on the Chestnut Hill area will be "minimal" if the station shuts down. However, he did note Monday there would be a two-minute loss in response time in the "worse case" where the engine companies from Newton Centre would be forced to go easterly of the Manet Road station.

"We have other areas in the city that are beyond two minutes (response time) and we have been emminently successful," added Reilly. Boston is half a mile to the east of Manet Road.

School board eyes annual paper chase

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The School Department uses reams of paper each year but with declining enrollment and other reductions, a few School Committee members want to know why a 7-percent increase is being requested for the cost of all the memos, copies of memos, reports and stationary.

At its first meeting on the recommended $39.2 million budget, the committee discussed increases in the budgets of central administration and School Committee's budgets.

Although city departments were asked by Mayor Theodore Mann to cut back 4.5 percent, the schools are asking for an increase of four percent or more than $1.5 million. However, unlike municipal budgets, the schools are including funds for negotiated wage increases in their salary figures.

This year's budget of approximately $37.8 million represented a more than $177,000 cut over the fiscal 1981 budget.

For next year, an overall 5.7-percent (approximately $40,000) increase in the central administration's budget is being recommended.

The salary account for the seven members of the central staff is recommended to increase by over $11,000, or 4.3 percent, to $266,730. Secretarial salaries could rise to $420,575, up 6.6 percent. Both accounts include projected salary increases.

But, it was the 7-percent increase in photocopying and supplies which raised questions from members of the School Committee.

Noting that the size of School Committee minutes from meetings has "shrunk" tremendously in the last five years or so, Chairman Nancy Mann wanted an explanation of the requested hike.

According to Superintendent Aaron Fink, the number of Search committee

Wasserman told The Graphic discussions of applicants would be done privately "on the grounds of protecting the integrity of the applicants and protecting the degree of confidentiality."

"For all practical purposes they (the meetings) are open now," Wasserman said. "But I will go into executive session to protect the confidentiality of the applicants, which I believe we are permitted to do."

Wasserman said applications for the superintendent's job had come in from around the country, noting "it reads like a 'Who's Who'" of the education field.

Wasserman added that, following consultation with Funk, the committee, in his opinion, can be considered as a group of unpaid "consultants," and as such, would not fall under Open Meeting Law restrictions.

He said the group will meet over the next two to three weeks, "after which we hope to be in a position to make recommendations" to the School Committee, which will make the final appointment to fill Superintendent Fink's job.

"Optimistically we're looking at March 12 to render a list of applicants, who I suppose at that time would be candidates," Wasserman said. He said he expected anywhere from five to 12 finalists from which the School Committee can choose.

Newton League of Women Voters' President Sandra Butzel said the league looked on the move to post the meeting times and explain criteria for screening applicants as a plus.

"We're pleased they're complying with the law," Butzel said Monday. "It is a precedent. My hope is that the School Committee will openly and willingly comply, rather than try to get around the Open Meeting Law.

"This demonstrates we can work within it," she noted.

Funk said Monday he felt posting of the meetings, and explanations of the criteria for screening the superintendent applicants, complied with the expectations of the district attorney's office.

"We've worked out a conciliation whereby we are getting the results we wanted without going to court," he said.

Funk said he felt the superintendent search group does not "fall within the definitional structure of the Open Meeting Law," which says public bodies, such as School Committees, must follow clear guidelines which restrict what information may be discussed behind closed doors.

"We have agreed to open the meeting to discuss these general standards (used to screen applicants) which the committee is more than happy to do but still protect the privacy rights (of applicants) at this stage of the process," Funk said.

Woman robbed, beaten in mall lot

NEWTON — A woman getting into her car in the Chestnut Hill Mall was attacked, beaten and robbed by two women and a man who left her lying in the parking lot as they drove away on Boylston Street, police said.

The woman told police about 8:40 p.m. Thursday that two women approached her asking to see a new coat she had purchased at the mall. The woman, who is from Rhode Island, refused. The two women then jumped her and began pounding her.

Meanwhile, a man got out of the assailants' car, went to the victim's car, and stole more than $100 and numerous credit cards. The two assailants then took the woman's new navy blue wool coat, got into the car with the man and the car was driven away.

The woman was treated for a possibly broken nose and for facial cuts, police said.

Each of the women attackers was described as black, 5 feet 4 and 18 to 20 years old. One of the woman attackers had a cornrow hairdo and wore a heavy coat. The other was wearing a watch cap.

The man who aided the attackers was described as black, 20 to 23 years old, dirty, with a medium dark complexion. He was wearing a watch cap.

Police searched for the robbers unsuccessfully. Police said there may have been two other men in the robbers' car.

They offer help, then beat and rob man

NEWTON — A Commonwealth Avenue man was robbed, attacked and beaten Friday night by two men who said they would help him fix his flat tire, police said.

The man told police he was changing the flat tire at the corner of Commonwealth Avenue and Temple Street when a car with two men and a woman stopped near him.

When the two men got out, he asked them if they would help change his flat tire. The men said they would but when one of them picked up his tire iron, he demanded money from the Commonwealth Avenue man.

The victim handed over his wallet and the robbers took $70 from it. But instead of just leaving with the money, the robbers began beating and kicking their victim and hit him with the tire iron several times, police said.

The victim managed to get away and ran to a Temple Street home where an occupant phoned police. A search for the robbers was futile.

One assailant was white, in his early 20s, 5 feet 10, weighed 170 pounds and was clean shaven with collar-length dark hair. He was wearing a red jacket and a gold neck chain.

The second assailant was also white, in his early 20s, was shorter than the first and clean shaven. He was wearing jeans.

3 firefighters hurt in Hyde street fire

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

WEST NEWTON — Three firefighters were injured Friday evening battling a fire which extensively damaged the top story of a Hyde Street home.

The three men were treated for injuries at Newton-Wellesley Hospital Saturday morning and released, fire officials said.

Firefighter Paul Bari was given 25 stitches in his hand and firefighters Francis Mareau and John Restucci were treated for back injuries received fighting the fire at 325 Hyde Street. The fire gutted the entire third floor of the 2 1/2 story wood framed home, fire officials said.

According to Chief Edward Reilly, the cause of the fire was accidental. Engines 2, 4 and 5, Ladder 1 and Assistant Chief William Dwyer responded to the scene at 6:26 p.m. after Fire Alarm was alerted by a 911 call. Upon arriving on the scene they called for assistance, and Engine 1, Ladder 3 and Assistant Chiefs Leslie Spaulding and Bernard Goulding were dispatched to the scene.

Ted and Barbara Hamon, owners of the house, and their two young sons, Pippa and Jeremy, stood on their next door neighbor's porch watching as firefighters climbed up the 100-foot aerial ladder from Ladder 1, stationed in the driveway of their home, and entered the window of their daughter's bedroom.

"I was upstairs watching TV on the third floor," said Jeremy, 10, who discovered the fire. The youngster said he smelled an odor, went into a third floor room to investigate and discovered a small fire.

"I tried to put it out with water," said Jeremy. However, he said that after opening another door, he saw the blaze had already spread throughout the top floor.

"I opened the door and the room was full of smoke," said Jeremy. "He came running downstairs hysterical saying that there were flames and smoke everywhere," said Jeremy's mother, Barbara, who added that, "I have no idea what started it (the fire)."

By 8 p.m., the Hamons went back into their home to salvage personal items. Though the fire was confined to the top floor, Dwyer said there was extensive water damage and some smoke damage throughout the rest of the house.

Dwyer said it was difficult to fight the fire because, "It's a large area home with only one stairway going up." A firefighter commented that the five gables at the top of the structure "made it real hard."

Along with Ladder 1's 100-foot aerial, two ground ladders were also used to enter a room at the front of the home. Ladder 3 was stationed in front of the house, as the engine companies stayed along Hyde Street. Police cruisers blocked vehicles from entering more than two blocks away from the fire, as ambulances and Red Cross volunteers stood by. All fire apparatus remained at the scene until shortly after midnight.

Fire Chief Edward Reilly and Captain Carmine Tedesco, of Fire Prevention, inspected the home Saturday morning, according to Reilly, who said, "The top floor was completly burnt out and there was very heavy water and smoke damage throughout the rest of the house."

According to alarm operators, a fire box in Auburndale was struck moments after they were alerted to the Hyde Street blaze, and caused some confusion since engine companies from the Manet Road Station on the south side of the city had to be dispatched to Auburndale. However, the box was a false alarm, operators said.

Nonantum house demolished

NONANTUM — The remains of the two-family home that was destroyed last week in a two-alarm fire were demolished Thursday afternoon, a Building Department official said.

Building Inspector Paul Foley said a private demolition company, North American Site Developers Inc., finished the demolition work about 2 p.m. Thursday as department inspectors looked on.

"It's safe," said Foley, who added that the demolition crew would spend the next two days cleaning the area.

Fire officials are still investigating the early-morning which struck the unoccupied home at 9 Bridge Street. Two Newton firefighters were treated for a back injury and nausea after battling the fire inside the 3½-story, woodframed house. Both men were later released from Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

"We don't have any additional information at this time," said Captain Carmine Tedesco of Newton Fire Prevention. "We are continuinmg the investigation."

Tedesco said previously that the fire was being treated as an arson case. Investigators found fresh footprints in the snow surrounding the house. Also, a neighbor on California Street said his rubbish barrels, which were full the night before, were emptied or nearly emptied the morning of the fire. Ispectors also said the that paper products were scattered throughout the house.

"Arson is a problem in the suburbs, though it's more prevalant in urban areas. Still, the suburbs are not immune to it'" said Tedesco.

The home, owned by Mary Saunders, had been vacant since September and was up for sale.

Please, not again

The city of Newton would like to invite you to a couple of meetings this week but you can only stay for a minute or two.

The committee looking for a replacement for School Superintendent Aaron Fink seems to have adopted the superintendent's habits.

Following pressure from the Newton League of Women Voters, which maintained that the Superintendent Search Committee, as an arm of the School Committee, falls under the rules of the state's Open Meeting Law, this search group is now posting the dates and times of its meetings.

That, according to the committee chairman and the city solicitor, means the committee is abiding by the spirit of the OML. In practice, however, the public is allowed to sit in only until after the chairman reads a statement about what standards the group is using to screen the 110 applicants for the second most important job in Newton.

Then you have to leave.

You have to leave because, according to Chairman Oscar Wasserman, the committee goes into executive session, meaning discussions of the applicants, their qualifications, their laurels and their warts are all in secret.

League officials considered this move a victory of sorts, since the search committee, the city solicitor and the School Committee under which all this falls, appear to at least be recognizing the OML.

We say it is hardly a victory for the public to be allowed to hear the rules of the game without seeing any of the players in action or being let in on just what kind of people have applied for this prominent post.

The move by the superintendent search group harkens back to the near past when Superintendent Fink excluded the press and public from screening of Newton North High principal candidates.

How can this possibly be seen as a move forward? Of course one must recognize the contribution of the 18 volunteer members of the search group and their genuine attempt to obtain the most qualified candidate for the post.

But once again, the public gets a look at the candidates (anywhere from five to 12 finalists, according to Wasserman) only when those names are handed to the School Committee for final approval.

Up until that point all the public gets to hear is a reading of the standards.

We can just be thankful that those seeking the job of mayor don't have to go through a School Committee-sanctioned screening committee.

Voting against 'bug zappers'

By Mark White

Thank God for the Board of Alderman.

I mean it - you can sleep safe and sound at night knowing these dedicated public servants are protecting you from all of the eveils of society.

Case in point - On Feb. 16 the board unanimously passed an ordinance prohibiting the passing out of free samples of cigarettes in public places.

As a non-smoker I should be applauding this kind of action but as a former legislator and advocate of civil liberties I am dumbfounded.

First, there is no recorded instance of anybody handing out cigarettes in Newton. They passed a law regulating actions that don't exist. Does that make sense?

Second, the law is probably a violation of freedom of speech and the federal statute which prohibits any local ban on cigarette smoking.

Third, I have supported laws regulating smoking in public places. When I'm trying to enjoy a meal I don't enjoy smoke blown in my face.

But what people do in their own homes is their own business.

If someone wants to take a sample and go home and try it, who should object?

It appears to me that this type of law is needless, unconstitutional and an attempt by a few people to impose their will on all of us.

However, since the board has taken upon itself to cure all the problems of society, I have a few more suggestions.

On outlawing bug zappers: 'This law might be considered since these insidious devices execute bugs without due process and a right to a fair trial'

The first would be passage of an "Overweight Law." Since all of America is on a diet and being overweight is a problem, how about a law limiting the amount of food a Newton citizen may consume in a week. This has the added advantage of reducing the burden on our refuse system.

The second would be the "No Snow Law". From now on, no more than two inches of snow shall be allowed to fall on a Newton citizen's property in any given storm.

Then we could pass the "Law Outlawing Bug Zappers."

This law might be considered since these insidious devices execute bugs without due process and a right to a fair trial.

Then there is the "Poverty Law." Since poverty is a major problem in society, let's ban it. It shall now be illegal for anybody in Newton to be poor.

Then, of course, there's the "Animal Trespass Law." This law shall impose fines for any dog, not a resident of Newton, which enters Newton for the sole purpose of defecating on someone's lawn.

Better yet, since the board has decided to create laws for problems that don't exist how about a law prohibiting rocket ships from landing in Newton, a law preventing a whale from beaching on Crystal Lake, a law against massive oil spills in the Charles River or mudslides in Chestnut Hill. Or how about a law outlawing the driving of a Sherman tank through Newton Centre?

While the rest of the nation is concentrating on getting government off our backs, our city fathers and mothers maintain an attitude that we need laws to regulate everything.

This is just the tip of the iceberg. Still be to considered by the board is a noise ordinance which regulates everything from stereos to steam-shovels. I don't know about you but steamshovels have never been a major problem for me.

This law would require the police, when receiving a noise complaint, to return to the station, pick up a noise meter, return to the scene of the crime, and take a measurement. This, in a city where the crime rate has increased 33% in one year.

It would even prohibit honking a horn to say hello to someone walking along the street.

And, of course, the board has continued its crusade against those "insidious" video games, that are corrupting the morals of our youth. There is a law pending which would allow the board to do the licensing.

So sleep safe, citizens of Newton. Our elected officials are protecting you from all of the harmful effects of society.

But as long as they're at it I have a suggestion for another law.

How about a law restricting the Board of Aldermen to passing one new law each year?

Thoughts on Prop 2½

Officials should make joint effort

By Verne Vance

Proposition 2 1/2 has significantly changed the structure for preparation and approval of Newton's city budget. Prior to enactment of Proposition 2 1/2, the mayor would submit a proposed budget for the so-called "city side", or nonschool side, to the Board of Alderman by April 1 of each year and the board would have 45 days to approve or cut—but not increase—that proposed budget.

The School Committee, working with the school department, would prepare its own budget for the "school side" and then submit that budget to the Board of Alderman, which was required to accept it as submitted. The board would then approve whatever tax rate was required to cover the city-side budget approved by the board and the school side budget approved by the School Committee and submitted to the board. As that structure indicates, before Proposition 2 1/2 the budget process began with determination by the 2 city authorities of what city services were needed and what it would cost to provide them. It concluded with the setting of a property tax rate sufficicent, with other sources of city revenue, to cover those costs.

Proposition 2 1/2 has largely turned that process on its head. To a great extent the maximum level of property tax revenues — the city's largest revenue source — is fixed by the provisions of Proposition 2 1/2. As a result, the city budget process now begins, not with the decision of what services the city needs, but with a determination of how much revenue the city can legally collect.

The process then becomes one of deciding how to allocate the available revenues among the various city services, in an inflationary climate in which the cost of those services is climbing more rapidly than the city's legal capacity to increase its revenues. The school budget is also a part of this revenue process since the Board of Alderman now has the power to approve or cut the proposed budget submitted to it for the school department.

The only flexibility in the process is that introduced by the recent amendments of Proposition 2 1/2 which permit the city to override the Prop 2 1/2 taxing limits in certain respects. Such an override requires a vote of two-thirds of the alderman to submit the matter to the voters at a regular or special election; followed by approval by a simple majority of those voting on the matter, or, to levy property taxes at a level in excess of 5% above the prior year's level, a two-thirds majority of those voting on the matter.

With a possible override to preserve important city services now a significant option to be considered in developing the budget, the Board of Alderman must be brought into the budget process well before a proposed budget has been submitted to them. By law the alderman must still take final action on the budget within 45 days after it has been submitted to them. Since it takes four to six weeks — 28 to 42 days — to schedule, arrange and hold a special election, according to Election Commission Secretary Alan Licarie, the 45-day period would hardly be sufficient for aldermanic review of the proposed budget, consideration by the aldermen of whether to put the question of an override to the voters, the holding of the election for a vote on the matter, and final consideration and approval of a budget after taking account of the result of the election.

In view of these time constraints, if the budget process is to work for the maximum benefit of the city as a whole, it must become, from the beginning, a joint effort of the mayor and the city departments, the School Committee and the Board of Aldermen.

Only by such a joint effort will the city authorities be able to identify a need for a possible override of Proposition 2 1/2 at an early enough date that the matter can be considered, and voted on, in time for the result of the vote to be taken into account fully in development and approval of the final budget.

Graphically speaking

On good years and poetic justice

The good years

A couple weeks ago Governor Ed King and his wife Jody hosted area media reps at Valle's Steak House on Route 9.

The get-together was billed as an informal one but, alas, the olks in charge of setting it up didn't take into account the Tuesday deadlines (for the Tuesday get-together) of a lot of area weekly newspapers.

In spite of that oversight the governor's press office did send out a press release to sum up the morning's thoughts for the benefit of those (including Graphically speaking) who couldn't be in two places at once.

"This was a wonderful opportunity for Jody and me to greet reporters from all over the commonwealth," the governor said in the press release. "They had a chance to ask me about my accomplishments through the first three years of my administration, as well as my hopes and plans for 1982."

Ah, what regret we had upon hearing we missed a chance to hear about the governor's hopes and plans for '82...

Trustworthy trustees

Dorothy Reichard was voted as president of the trustees while Michael Lipoff was named treasurer. Other board members include Estelle Karlin, Arthur Vershbow and Lyman Ziegler.

Good luck, folks.

Couldn't have said it better

The February issue of the Golden Times, the senior citizens' newsletter published jointly by the Newton Council on Aging and Department of Human Services, is an interesting bit of information.

For one, Sawyer Bolan, a retired attorney and RSVP advisory board member, has a column about co-ownership of real estate, personal property and bank accounts as they relate to the city's older citizens. Good reading and informative for some of us young upstarts, too.

But the part of Golden Times we enjoyed the most was a poem, written by John Keefe, one of eight Newton seniors enrolled in the Lifetime Learning poetry workshop.

Mr. Keefe took that lofty topic of "newspapers" and in just four lines, put it all into perspective.

"I'm your newspaper, I whisper and roar; yet I'm simply ideal, for a just-mopped floor."

Enough said.

One other piece of good reading in the February issue (which is available at the city's senior drop-in centers) is about jobs which are available for older workers.

"In these tim es of serious inflation there are older people who are capable and are in need of supplementing their retirement incomes," the *Golden Times*notes.

To help these folks the Department of Human Services and the Newton COA operate the Older Workers Employment Program, to provide full and part-time jobs for area seniors.

Al Green, the program's job developer, plans to travel around to area drop-in centers to discuss the program. Residents interested in learning more can call him at 552-7170.

What is that smell?

If anyone over in Newton Corner has been wondering just what is rotten in Denmark, the answer may lie under some as yet unidentified porch.

Just last Thursday Graphically speaking was out doing a late-night errand, cutting through Newton Corner, when one of those black and white pole cats waddled across the road.

For those unfamiliar with such back-country terminology, it was a skunk, making the rounds from yard to yard.

The skunk made it safely into a side yard and we made it safely out of the area.

NCS offers food for thought

NEWTON — Beginning the week of March 1, Newton residents will have the opportunity to forage in local woodlands for edible foods, shop in natural food stores for exotic delights and debate with experts the pros and cons of different diet plans.

These activities and approximately 300 others are part of Newton Community Schools' spring program for adults.

Newton Community Schools activities in culinary arts have always been popular, noted Gail Holm, coordinator of the Auburndale Community School. "I can't arrange enough classes in food preparation," she stated. "People seem to be especially interested in ethnic cooking and technique."

Through the Auburndale Community School 20 paticipants will have the opportunity to tour Bread and Circus, a natural foods store in Wellesley Hills. There, various foods will be explained and natural food samples will be available after the tour. Residents may also sign up for "A Fish Denonstration" presented by Captain Marden's Seafood of West Newton. The Monday evening session on March 22 will discuss fish buying, preparation , cleaning and fileting.

Newton residents may also learn about natural foods and edible wild foods through Auburndale's Community School. On March 24, Norman E. Pupee Jr. will lead a two-hour discussion on early spring spraying and pruning, indside seed starting and lawn and ground preparation. On May 13, Betsey Lowenberg and Linda Wurm will lead 10 participants through Newton's woodlands in search of edible wild plants.

For those with international tastes, the Underwood/Ward Community School will present a one-session special event entitled "Japanese Cooking." Led by Hiroko Isogawa, the session will represent a dinner menu featuring Tempura, and will instruct participants in the basic techniques needed to prepare this classic Japanese dish.

Complementing the above culinary offerings will be the presentation of several winetasting courses throughout Newton. Two such series will be sponsored by the Mason-Rice and Lower Falls Community Schools.

For more information, call the Newton Community Schools at 552-7118.

The bottom line: taste.

That's the result of the latest wave of research with smokers who have switched from higher tar cigarettes to 'Enriched Flavor'™ MERIT.

MERIT Earns Taste Trophy.

Further Evidence: 9 out of 10 former higher tar smokers report MERIT an easy switch, that they didn't give up taste in switching, and that MERIT is the best-tasting low tar they've ever tried.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

MERIT By Wide Margin.

In addition, extensive unmarked pack tests confirm that MERIT delivers a winning combination of taste and low tar when compared with higher tar leaders.

Confirmed: The overwhelming majority of smokers reported MERIT taste equal to—or better than—leading higher tar brands.

Confirmed: When tar levels were revealed, 2 out of 3 chose the MERIT combination of low tar and good taste.

Year after year, in study after study, MERIT remains unbeaten. The proven taste alternative to higher tar smoking—is MERIT.

Chief blasts magazine

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Fire Chief Edward Reilly verbally blasted a recent Boston Magazine article rating fire protection in local communities, saying it gave an inaccurate picture of the Newton department.

"That's not the way to rate a fire department," said Reilly last week of the article by writer John Strahinich which rated 30 suburban municipalities.

"I agree that fire protection is a costly service. But those communities that aren't getting the best service are rated at the top,," said Reilly.

Reilly also said he opposes using only statistics from a 1-year period to evaluate a fire department. "A major fire in the community could throw off the statistics."

However, the death statistics were measured over a five-year period. A primary researcher for the article said this was done because a major fire could drastically change the results.

> 'They just looked at numbers and figures for one year. It's not an accurate picture....A major fire in the community could throw off the statistics.' --Fire Chief Edward Reilly

According to the article in the February issue, cities and towns were rated by using National Fire Protection Association (NFPA) statistics for 1979.

"They just looked at numbers and figures for one year. It's not an accurate picture," said Reilly, who added that the Insurance Service Organization (ISO), which rates fire departments for insurance companies, gave Newton the best rating.

"The article didn't rate us as one of the best or the worst in the state," said Reilly.

According to NFPA statistics used in the magazine piece, the percentage of fire incidences in Newton was 109 percent, or 9 percent over the national average. Newton fire-related deaths rated 59 percent, or 41 percent below the national average, and the cost per fire was reported as $4,593.66.

Reilly also stated that other factors, such as water supply, equipment and alarm systems should be used to evaluate a fire department. The article did not include those items in its analysis.

"I talked to numerous experts in the field," said the researcher, asked that she not be named. "They said things like water pressure were not relevant. Fire prevention should be the most important thing. If a fire department is preventing fires, which really is their job, then there shouldn't be a lot of fires."

According to the ISO, the Newton Fire Department received a "2A" rating in 1976. "There's nothing better," said spokesman David Rothman. Theoretically, a "1A" rating exists, though no city or town in the nation has ever received such as a rating from the ISO.

"We look at a number of things, such as alarm systems, equipment and general efficiency," said Rothman. He added that he had no comment on the ratings by Boston Magazine. "We don't judge or rate fire departments," he exoplained. "We're a service organization for insurance companies."

A NFPA spokesperson said the statistics were distorted. "When the analysis department compiles statistics they do not compile them for comparisons because they can be misrepresented," said Carol Pisano. "One year gives a very distorted view. It should be done on a five- or 10-year basis," she added.

The Boston Magazine researcher said however she used the same statistics that NFPA uses to evaluate fire departments. She stressed that those fire departments with high fire incidences "Should put more effort into preventing fires."

NEWTON - A story in last week's Newton Graphic about the Feb. 23 meeting of the Newton Coalition for the Prevention of Nuclear War inadvertantly omitted the fact that committees from nine Newton churches and from Andover-Newton Theological School were among the anti-nuclear war groups which formed the Newton Coalition.

Officials of the coalition noted their gratitude to these church groups for their "pioneering work" and expressed optimism for similar activities in other churches and temples.

The Coalition provides a monthly forum to discuss the many anti-nuclear war activities in Newton in an effort to foster cooperation.

Potholes worse than before

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Due to the constant flux in temperature this winter and the large amount of snowfall, the patching of potholes has become a daily headache for Public Works Commissioner Charlie Thomas.

"It's worse than last year," said Thomas, who has budgeted $20,000 for pothole repairs, "Anytime you go through freezing and thawing it's bad."

Thomas noted that with "a couple of more bad spells," he would surpass the $20,000 allocation.

Potholes result from a freezing and thawing cycle which allows moisture to seep into the cracks in the pavement. This in turn loosens chunks of pavement which passing vehicles soon bounce out of place.

"We go out everyday to responses," noted Thomas. He said his department patched most of the potholes in the city last week.

Because of the cold temperatures, Thomas is only able to use cold patch during the winter months which only provides a temporary fix. Permanent repair, which is attained through the use of hot patch, can not be done until April, according to Thomas.

Much of the temporary cold patch loosens with additional moisture. "It will do the job if it doesn't get too wet," said Thomas.

In 1981, the city Law Department received 22 claims involving potholes, according to City Solicitor Daniel Funk. The claims, many of which have yet to be litigated, averaged about $156.

"We're obviously not paying out tons of money for pothole claims," said Funk. More than half the claims the city receives as a result of street defects are denied.

"The thing about street defects is that they have to be reasonable." he added. "We don't pay on overnight potholes."

"If it's right in the middle of a thaw, we're not going to consider the claim," Funk said. "We (Public Works Dept) have to know about it before we can fix it."

In 1978, the year of the blizzard, the Law Department handled about 125 claims. "We had so many claims in 1978 that we drafted a letter denying most of them and it worked," said Funk.

Thomas noted that sections of Austin Street in Newtonville and Woodland Road in Auburndale, both plagued by potholes, would be reconstructed in the spring.

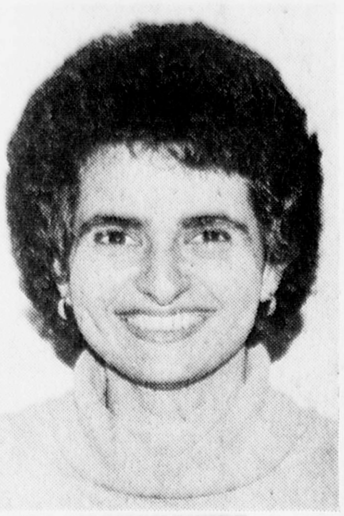
Five named to head JCC service planning



MOZELLE BERKOWITZ

LINDA GOLDSTEIN

LAURA OSKOWITZ

MILLE GUBERMAN KRAVETZ

ADELE NEWMAN

NEWTON — The chairman of five committees which will draw up plans for an expanded level of services to be offered by the Jewish Community Center for Greater Boston at the Central Area Jewish Community Multi-Service Center were recently announced.

Under the control of a Group Work Services committee chaired by Sandra J. Berbeco, Newton residents, Mozell Berkowitz will head the Teen task group: Linda Goldstein, the Children's task group; and Laura Oskowitz, the Preschool task group; Mille Guberman Kravetz, the Adult task group, Adele Newman of Needham will head the Family and Holiday task group.

Nearly 250 women and men, both current and prospective members of the Jewish Community Center of Greater Boston, are involved in the "phase-in" process that, under the chairmanship of Margery K. Katzenberg, is outlining program and policy for the JCC component of the multi-service center.

Even as many of tahe 19 task groups met this week, the Combined Jewish Philanthropies of Greater Boston signed a construction contract that will launch renovation and new building at the 35-acre Newton site on which the multi-service center will be located.

When it opens in 1983, the center will house programs of such CJP agencies as the Bureau of Jewish Education, Jewish Family and Children's Service and Beth Israel Hospital, bringing a network of community services to an estimated 70,000 Greater Boston Jews. The Jewish Community Center will provide extensive programming, with social, recreational and Jewish cultural activities for people of all ages.

Mozelle Berkowitz was on the steering committee of the Israeli-American Havurah ("friendship") and is a member of the American Speech and Hearing Association. She is a speech therapist in the Newton school system.

Linda Goldstein is a member of the Campaign Cabinet of CJP's Women's Division, was incentives chairman for the 1981 Boston Jewish Community Walkathon and was a member of the Jewish Community Center's Central Area Interim Planning Committee. She is owner/operator of the Gilded Lily in Watertown.

Millie Guberman Kravetz is coordinator of Field Work and a lecturer in the Hornstein Program of Jewish Communal Service at Brandeis University. She is a member of the boards of the Jewish Community Center's Brookline-Brighton-Newton branch, Jewish Family and Children's Service, Brandeis Hillel, Harvard Hillel and Jewish Community Housing for the Elderly.

Laura Oskowitz is a member of the Preschool committee of the Brookline-Brighton-Newton branch of the Jewish Community Center of Greater Boston.

Adele Newman has been actively involved in JCC as a member of the agency's central Board of Directors, a founding member of its West Area Nursery School Board and a former member of JCC's Central Area Interim Planning Committee. She is on the Board of Temple Aliyah in Needham.

The Jewish Community Center of Greater Boston currently serves some 25,000 people annually through its branches, day camps and preschools in 11 Metropolitan Boston cities and towns.

MUSIC AND DRAMA - The full spectrum of visual, performing and cultural arts will be offered at the Central Area Jewish Community Multi-Service Center when it opens in Newton next year. Planning programs for the center involves scores or residents on the Cultural Arts and Education Committee, chaired by Newton resident Brigite Grossman (front row, right).

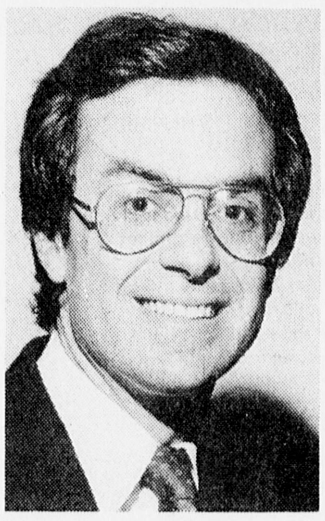
NEWTON — Rabbi Alan Turetz has been reappointed chairman of the New England Rabbinic Cabinet of State of Isreael Bonds for 1982. Rabbi Turetz has been an active member of the Rabbinic Cabinet since its establishment in 1978 and served as New England chairman last year.



RABBI ALAN TURETZ

Congregations of the Orthodox, Conservative and Reform branches of Judaism are affiliated actively with the national and six regional rabbinic cabinets of the Israel Bond Organization. The aim of the advisory bodies is to stimulate participation by the rabbinate in organizing congregations for large-scale support for Israel's economic growth. Two major elements of the congregations program are the annual High Holy Day appeals and synagogue-sponsored Israel Bond events.

The program in metropolitan Boston alone produces 4% of the total Bond sales each year, making it the single most important factor in the organization's ongoing efforts to mobilize development capital for the State of Israel through the sale of Israel Bonds and other securities.

DIANE GRILICHES

WABAN — A local woman has been named director of the new Hebrew College Prozdor (high school) musical production of "Oklahoma" which is to be presented May 1 and 2 in two all-Hebrew performances.

Diane Griliches of Waban, founder and co-director of Kids & Company Music Theatre which operates out of Temple Reyim in West Newton, accepted the new assignment recently and immediately began assembling a cast and scheduling twice-weekly rehersals.

Although she's directed other productions of "Oklahoma" , most recently at the Needham Community Theatre, "this one will provide the greatest challenge," she fepercentageels, as a good of the audience will be unfamiliar with the language.

"I assume I'll have to over-direct, to some extent, to compensate for that part of the audience that d8oesn't know Hebrew but can still enjoy the musical for its acting and lyrical qualities," she admitted, noting that it's "somewhat like going to the opera" without knowing the libretto.

Working in conjunction with Esther Schreier, choreographer and co-director of Kids & Company, Griliches said she intends to retain the same dances that Agenes DeMille made popular to the tunes of "Everything's Up to Date in Kansas City" and "The Farmer and the Cowboy Should be Friends." The Hebrew College Prozdor Orchestra, directed by Jonathan Margolis, will provide the musical accompaniment.

Griliches' only other experience with a non-English production was as director of the "Play of Daniel," performed in Latin by a private school in Dorechester. Among the other musicals to her credit are "Finian's Rainbow," "Guys & Dolls," "Pajama Game"' "Damn Yankees," "Threepenny Opera" and "The Fantastics".

Although she studied Hebrew in the Hebrew College Ulpan for several years and spent a year in Israel with her husband recently, during his sabbatical from the Economics Department at Harvard College, she said she'll have to refine her own Hebrew "because the Hebrew these Prozdor kids are giving me is much better than I'd ever expected."

To choose the principals for "Oklahoma," Griliches asked the students to read the part or parts they wanted to audition for. "I chose them on the basis of voice, ability to project and of course their singing talent," she remarked.

"What I find to be the case is that something happens on stage and you know whether someone can do a role or not. I'm generally not wrong and don't generally overestimate anyone," she said.

Two Prozdor students, Ben Loewy and Adee Shepen, have been named assistant directors of "Oklahoma."

City reacts to release of revaluation list

homeowner in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts."

Mann urged homeowners to can call 552-7331 to set up an informal hearing with the firm that conducted the revaluation. Appointments must be scheduled by March 5.

"It's going to hit all the elderly people," said Alderman Dominic Taglienti. "I'm sure they are going to have a problem."

"I was grabbed by a woman yesterday whose assessment went up $700," noted Taglienti, whose Ward 7 is heavily populated with elderly. "She's ready to retire and can't afford it (the tax hike)."

According to assessors, the average property tax bill for homeowners will jump $152 under the accelerated revaluation of city real estate. This figure was computated by dividing the $3.5 million shift (from business to residential properties under the revaluation) in the tax levy by the more than 22,000 homes in the city.

"The average I hear is $500," said Alderman Bruce Carmichael. "Five-hundred dollars on a person like that (elderly on a fixed income) is going to be a tough burden."

According to 1980 census reports, more than 18 percent of the city's population residing in households are 60 years of age and over.

"It's a fix," said Carmichael. "The elderly are obviously going to be hardest hit."

Newton's revaluation, which was mandated by a state law requiring all cities and towns to bring real estate up to 100 percent full and fair market value, should adjust past inequities in the city's taxation of residential property. Therefore, owners of older homes, which in most cases have been far undervalued, face higher property taxes while the owners of newer homes will have their taxes adjusted downwards.

Alderman Ethel Sheehan noted that the situation faced by the elderly "is a problem" that she "didn't think people realized."

"It's terrible," added Sheehan, "but it's law and what can we do?"

Agnes Neal, 78, of Grove Hill Park in Newtonville, was one of several elderly registering for a hearing yesterday. According to the values released this week, her home is worth $149,000 meaning a jump in her taxes of $1,000 to $3,300.

"I was laughing with tears in my eyes," said Neal, a widow, when she received her new assessment. "That's the most rediculous figure I've ever seen."

The tax-breaks, however, will be less than last year's because many of the exemptions use last year's higher tax rate as a determining factor. In other words, the smaller exemption will translate into higher taxes even before the new assessment.

The minimum exemptions under state statute are:

- Veteran (10 percent disibility of Purple Heart recipient) - $175.
- Veteran (loss of use of one foot or hand) - $350.
- Veteran (loss of use of both feet or hands) - $700.
- Veteran (needy and has special housing because of disability) - $875.
- Veteran (surviving spouse of vets of Quemoy and Matsu) - $175.
- Veteran (100 percent disability) - $525.
- Blind - $437.
- Elderly - Clause 41 - $500. In order to qualify the elderly resident must be 70-years-old by July 1, 1981, lived in the state for 10 years, owned and occupied a home for 5 years, gross income must be less than $7,000 if married, $6,000 if single, and total real estate and personal property cannot exceed $20,000.
- Elderly - Clause 41A - deferral for anyone 65-years-of-age or older who must not have more than $20,000 in assets for 1980.
- Any homeowner can apply for a hardship exemption with assessors.

Taxpayers can appeal tax bills, scheduled to be mailed April 1, can file for an abatement within 30 days of the mailing of the bill. If unsuccessful, taxpayers can appeal to the state Appellate Tax Board.

Under 100 percent revaluation, homeowners are expected to account for 75 percent of the levy ($55,316,400) and commercial and industrial properties are expected to account for 25 percent ($18,183,600), according to Chief Assessor Harold Brady. Last year, commercial and industrial properties accounted for 30 percent ($21,682,500) and residential properties accounted for 70 percent ($51,817,500).

Opinions differ

"The first five minutes of every fire are worth the next five hours," said Alward, a district vice-president of the International Association of Firefighters. "This is when you suffer your greatest fire loses."

Alward also noted that Newton should not depend on the city of Boston's Fire Department, which was cut from 1,850 to 1,200 men, for mutual aid in the area of the Manet Road station.

In assessing the impact on public safety, Reilly also made note of the improved methods of fire prevention and the great improvements in fire apparatus since the construction of the Manet Road "village station."

Robert Merullo, president of the firefighters' union, however, differed with Reilly and told aldermen that the closing "would jeopardize public safety in the existing neighborhood" and "would weaken the department's future ability to cope with the changing characteristics of the section of the city."

Merullo, a nine-year veteran, said to "inactivate" Engine 9 would be a "serious backward step" for Newton. Merullo has been stationed at the Manet Road station for the past three years.

In his presentation, Merullo said "the continual westward encroachment of multiple and high rise residential buildings into the Chestnut Hill area should be a signal to our officials that thought should be given to the increase of facilities rather than a reduction."

He also noted the new developments on the Sidney Hill Country Club and the Spezzano Farm properties which will make fire fighting in the area now served by the Manet Road station more difficult.

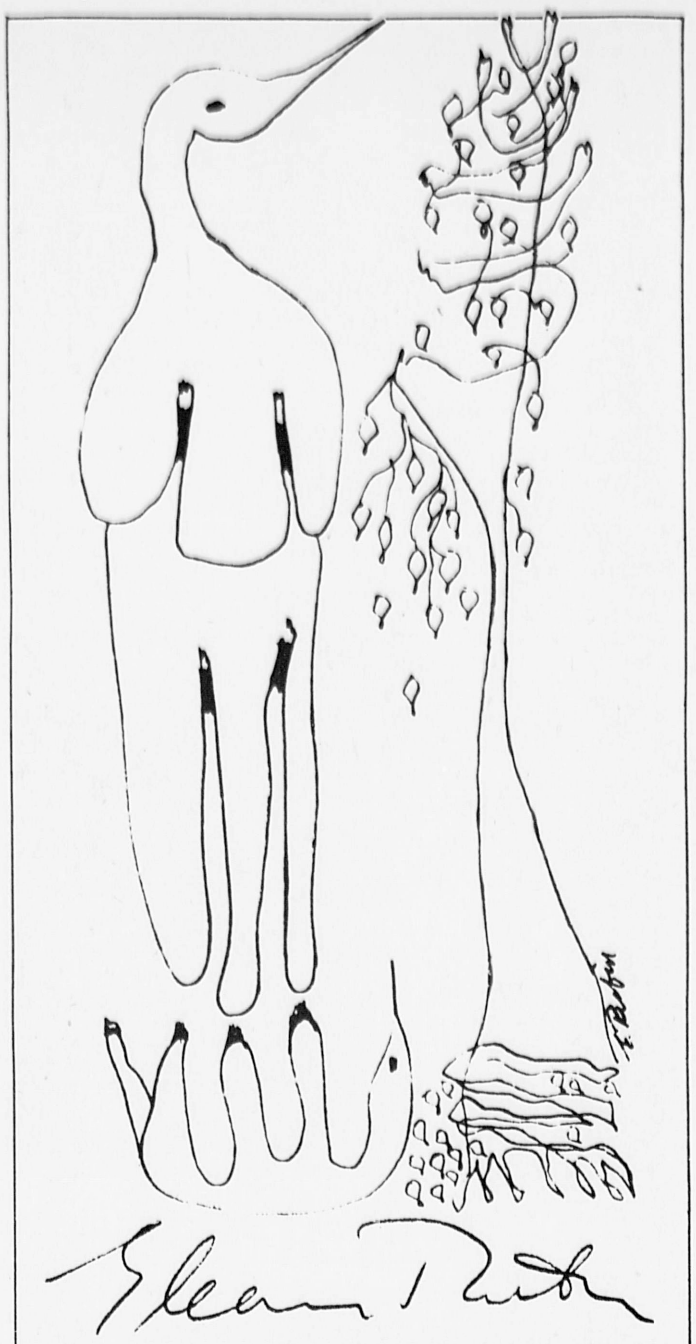
"Any cut in any public safety area will effect response time anywhere in the city," said Bruce Carter, one of eight residents that spoke in favor of keeping the station open. "The primary purpose of government is to protect the lives and property of its people. Let's keep our public safety compliment at least how they are."

Said Nancy Terrio: I think it would be a most devastating situation to close this station."

If the station closes, 12 firefighters' positions would be eliminated, and possibly as many as seven men. There are now five vacancies within the department and it is expected that three additional vacancies will open up by July 1 as a reult of attrition.

Reilly has also recommended the elimination of four of his own aides in the 1983 fiscal budget. Added to the loss of at least four men from the Manet Road station, the department will operate with eight fewer men in the next fiscal year. Budget restraints have forced Reilly to eliminate 32 positions since the passage of Proposition 2½.

Since 1971, of the 163 fires in the city that have caused in excess of $20,000 worth of damage, 12 were in the immediate area served by Manet Road.



ANTICIPATION - An exhibition of drawings, collages and prints, entitled "Season of Anticipation," by Eleanor Rubin opens March 8 at the Newton Free Library, Centre Street, Newton Corner. The show runs March 8-28 with a reception for the artist on Wednesday, March 17 from 5-8 p.m.

Gus Saunders loved our sweets. And our service.
The Boston Herald American gave Apley's its three-star rating and said these nice things about us:
"The newest kid on the block may well turn out to be the neighborhood champ . . . Service is completely professional, knowledgeable and attentive . . . Desserts worth noting are: the soufflés, particularly the chocolate, which was hissing hot, puffy and drizzled with Grand Marnier creme Anglais; and the dessert Apley, a superbly flaky puff pastry shell filled with apple slices poached in calvados (apple brandy), blended with thick creme fraiche, raisins and toasted almonds, and topped with an almost runny vanilla chantilly cream with a little calvados."

FinCom ponders selling price for Claflin

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A local hospice group and the aldermanic Finance Committee are at least $150,000 apart in the purchase price of the former Claflin Elementary School.

The Hospice of Good Shepard, a non-profit organization, is hoping to convert the Lowell Avenue property into a mixed residential development at a renovation cost of $3 million.

Linda Kilburn, executive director of the Hospice of Good Shepard, told the committee Monday evening that the most her group would pay for the site was $100,000. Finance Chairman Edward Richmond, however, said he could not see selling the school for less than $250,000.

The 24-member Board of Aldermen votes on the minimum selling price of the school as put forward by the Finance Committee. The final selling price is then negotiated between the outside buyer and Mayor Theodore Mann.

Aldermen who had trouble with the price offered by the Hospice Group pointed toward the past selling prices of similar surplus buildings. The Memorial School, Carr School and the Davis School each sold for between $250,000 and $350,000.

Kilburn, however, noted throughout her presentation that the Hospice would provide a service to the residents of Newton and that she had been led to believe that this would be a consideration when aldermen set a minimum purchase price for the property.

City assessors have appraised the Claflin School property at $600,000 to $650,000.

The project will incorporate the creation of a 15-bed hospice inpatient unit; the housing of a 12-person hospice home care team; the housing of a hospice community education and training program; and 13 one-bedroom, and four two-bedroom apartments.

The committee, which had previously requested the hospice group to check with its financial backers on the possibility of leasing the property, were told Monday this would not be possible.

Under state law, it is more advantageous for the city to lease surplus property than sell it outright. The money received from a lease agreement can be placed in the city's general revenue account whereas funds received from the sale of surplus property are funneled into an account earmarked for the purchase of capital assets.

Kilburn indicated to the committee that the consortium of banks and the national foundations that might back the project, will not financially participate in the hospice if the city demands that the group lease the facility.

According to Kilburn, $1.8 million of the needed $3 million will come from the consortium of banks. The remaining $1.2 million will be raised in a capital fundraising drive, $600,000 of which will come from grants over a two-year period.

In addition to the $100,000 purchase price, up $25,000 from what the Hospice of Good Shepard said was its previous ceiling, the group was willing to provide the city with a annual payment for the school in lieu of taxes beginning in year five.

Brotherhood plans dinner and auction

CHESTNUT HILL - On April 3 Congregation Mishkan Tefila Brotherhood will hold its dinner-auction. Proceeds of this auction are not only to help the Brotherhood's on-going charitable activities but also to support the nationally-acclaimed "Facing History & Ourselves" program.

It is for this Brookline-based curriculum, threatened by federal budget cuts, that the Brotherhood will set aside a major portion of the proceeds raised. The "Facing History & Ourselves" curriculum teaches junior high school students to come to terms, emotionally and intellectually, with attempts to exterminate people, including the Nazi Holocaust against the Jews during W.W. II and the Armenian genocide shortly before W.W. I.

The auction will feature thousands of dollars of fine gifts - a full lenghth fur coat, gold jewelry, a trip for two to the Grand Bahamas, Los Angeles Super Bowl XVII tickets, celebrity items an much much more.

Reserwillvations be limited. Tickets will cost $7.50 per person which includes dinner. Anyone who would like to contribute mercahandise to help this project, can call Congregation Mishkan Teflia Brotherhood Auction 332-7770.

Chiropractic for Health
by Dr. David G. Rutman, Chiropractor

CHIROPRACTIC TREATMENT

Some people still retain an irrational fear of visiting a chiropractor. They think that chiropractic treatment may be harmful to them in some way. Insurance companies, however, notorious for their extreme caution when insuring high risk occupations, do not seem very worried about insuring chiropractors against malpractice suits. Chiropractors happen to pay very low premiums for their malpractice insurance, especially when compared to premiums paid by medical doctors. In this day and age, when bringing a suit is a favorite activity for many, the fact that chiropractors are rarely being sued, I think, says a lot for the safety of the treatment.

Chiropractic can add years to your life and life to your years. With proper maintenance you can enjoy a greater feeling of vigor and a zest for living. Your doctor of chiropractic is the key to better health and a longer life. He can help you maintain your body in a normal, natural condition. When your nervous system functions without nerve interference it is capable of repairing damage. Let us help you maintain good health through chiropractic. DR. DAVID G. RUTMAN, CHIROPRACTOR, 4593 Washington Street, Roslindale, 323-5022. Hours by appointment and three evenings a week.

South batters Quincy in tourney warm-up

By Steve Tiberi
Sports Correspondent

The pre-season plans of Newton South head coach Joe Killilea seem to be right on target.

The Lion mentor scheduled two non-league away games just in case his team should be fortunate enough to make it to the EMass State Tournament. Killilea wanted the team to experience foreign gymnasiums, different officials and hostile crowds.

Newton South completed the plan in a highly successfull manner Thursday night by devastating Quincy, 88-66, at the MacLean Gym in Quincy. The game was over in the first minutes of the opening period when the Lions put on a clinic to leap out to a 14-0 lead in the first four minutes of the game.

South's domination of the first few minutes was so complete that Quincy only got two shots at the basket and both of those shots were long outside jumpers. Lion senior forward Steve Abrams dropped six of seven shots in the first period to lead the attack with 12 points. South led 20-8 after the first period.

Newton South defeated Catholic Memorial Monday night by 10 points at CM in the first of these non-league tests. The victory ended Newton South's non-league record at 6-0 on the season and the Dual County League record at 10-2.

"I wanted to get a couple of games in before the tournament on different courts," said Killilea. "This would give the players a chance to feel what it is like to play in a sort of tournament situation. They responded great.

"We still need some work on our defense," said Killilea. "We started out strong, but we let them back into it in the second quarter and I wasn't happy to see that. Offensively, we played a great game and our top six people played well."

The Lions will open the tournament, probably at home, on either Tuesday or Thursday and the opponents will be determined Sunday.

"We had some good performances tonight," said Killilea. "I think our people are set for what is ahead. Meatchie (Russell) displayed some of his talents, Dave (Hill) played his second strong game in a row and Scott (Anglin) also played well. We had some good support from our bench."

After the Lions devoured Quincy in the first quarter, Killilea removed his entire starting unit ahead by a 27-12 with three minutes to go in the second quarter. Quincy made a run against Newton South and managed to close to within six at 36-30. Jim DiPietro, a forward, tossed in eight points to lead the Presidents resurgence.

The game was suddenly a non-blowout on the scoreboard. The Lions returned in the third period to reassert themselves and get the job done. The leader of this was senior Hill. The 6-1 guard dropped in 16 of his team-high 22 points in the third period.

Hill hit the first basket of the second half after taking a tremendous feed under the hoop by Russell. Hill's sophomore backcourt mate dealt out three assists in the third period that were worth the price of admission.

Russell, who scored a quiet eight points, hit Hill with a couple of look-away passes for easy hoops, but his best was to center Mike Antonellis midway through the third period. Russell drove through the Quincy zone defense and drew four defenders. In mid air and with no place to go, he looked right and flipped a pass off to Antonellis to his left on the baseline for an easy layup.

The Lions rolled to a 62-46 lead after three quarters and just kept it up right through the fourth period. Quincy would never threaten despite a 22-point effort from DiPietro and a 16-point performance from forward Peter Papile.

Scott Anglin grabbed the spotlight in the fourth quarter. The junior foward had three blocks, including a leaping block of a jump shot, and Quincy was looking for him the entire game. Anglin finished with 15 points and a good effort on the offensive and defensive boards.

Antonellis was the fourth double-digit man for the Lions with 10 points. The senior played a strong defensive game and was a force on the offensive boards.

Tiger girls win to gain tourney berth

By Bob Duca
Staff Writer

Amazing. That's really the only way to describe it. If you had seen the Newton North Tigers just three weeks ago, when they were 4-5 and didn't seem capable of beating a good junior high team, a Las Vegas bookie couldn't have given you 1,000-1 odds on them making the EMass Tournament again. And then, if you'd gazed at their schedule in the last week, with the likes of Cambridge, Weymouth North and Peabody looming on the horizon, well, those mythical odds might have doubled.

But with the Tigers' 56-45 victory over 3rd-ranked Peabody (now 15-2) Tuesday night, coach Allyson Toney's club has not only qualified again for the tournament, but they seem as good a choice as any to win it.

Now 13-5 after their ninth consecutive win, Newton North opens defense of its state championship Tuesday night. The pairings to determine the site and opponent will be announced Sunday afternoon.

Tuesday's triumph capped a six-day period where the Tigers succeeded in beating all three of the superpowers mentioned above and in the process found ways to put the clamps on two of the best girls' basketball players in the state in Peabody's Kris Foley and Weymouth North's Joanie Powers. The plan for Foley was similiar to that enacted on Powers last Friday night. "Kris is an unbelievable player," said Toney moments after the win. "We knew she'd get her points, but we wanted to deny her the ball as best we could. We had three girls on her and she still must have shot 80 percent from the floor."

Indeed, Foley did get her points — 33 in fact. But she was the whole show. Only two other players scored for the Tanners (Beth Cronan and Maureen Devlin with six each), and the result was a final four minutes where every time Peabody came down the court, the only person with enough confidence to take a shot was Foley. That the Tanners were still able to stay semi-close to Newton was testimony to Foley's enormous talent. "She's one of the best in the state," marveled Toney. "She never misses with that jumpshot."

Toney put her best on Peabody's best, giving Debbie Quinn the assignment of guarding Foley in a man-to-man defense. Quinn, despite those 33 points, did a commendable job, but she picked up four fouls by the early portion of the fourth stanza and Toney was forced to switch to a zone. By that time, however, the Tigers were in complete command.

Peabody, conversely, came out in a zone designed to prevent Quinn from working the ball inside. Quinn still scored early and often — finishing with 26 to run her season's total to 407. The real killer, though, was Tiger guard Jenna Lammers. "Players like Quinn and Foley are blue-chippers," said Tanner mentor Jane Heil, "They'll always get their points. But Lammers is the one that really hurt us early. She kept hitting those jumpers over our zone and forced us to come out of it. That cleared up Quinn inside."

Lammers' (19) hot start was the reason the Tigers were able to break away to a 14-6 advantage after one period. That and the efforts of Beth Kelley, Kathy Maguire and Quinn on the offensive boards. "We got one shot every time down; they'd keep getting two. We couldn't win with that happening," said Heil.

The Tigers continued dominating and stretched their cushion to 29-18 at the half and 46-30 after three periods. "If we could have cut it back to seven or so in the third period, we might have had a chance," said Heil. "As it was we got it down to seven in the fourth, but by then it was too late."

The closest Peabody could get in the fourth was 52-45 after two jumpers and a free throw by Foley with 2:13 remaining. Quinn answered with a slithery drive right up the gut of the Tanner defense to make it nine again and the door was shut for good.

The difference between the Newton North of late January and the Newton North of today? "Confidence, mainly," said Toney with a smile as wide as the state of Texas. "There are some girls with a little more experience who aren't afraid to take the shots now. We're also playing better defense and we don't have the injuries we had before."

Heil made a minor effort to attribute Newton's victory to a question of need. "Let's face it," she said afterward. "They had to win this to qualify for the tournament. We didn't. I can't say exactly what kind of psychological advantage that gave them, but it had to make some difference. But they're a a fine team and Quinn is a great player."

So the Tigers have accomplished the improbable, capturing nine straight with nearly every one in the absolute must-win catagory. If they continue to mesh like this, their stay in the EMass tourney could last awhile.

The summary:

South wrestling ends on disputed call

The Newton South wrestling team dropped a tough 34-24 decision to Wellesley Tuesday night in a non-league meet at Wellesley. The loss ended the season for Newton South with a 10-5 record.

The Lions lost the meet with a disputed call at 107. Bob Bennett, a sophomore, had apparently pinned his opponent, but the referee failed to make the call and Bennett was eventually pinned in the third round.

The Lions only won four matches, but all four victories were by pin. Mark Colling pinned at 121 and co-capt. Dave MacDonald pinned at 147. Steve Steinberg pinned at 114 for the Lions and heavyweight Bob Baker also pinned.

The Lions achieved their goal of 10 wins by upending cross-town rival Newton North 33-16. Bennett at 107 and Steinberg at 114 both won their matches by pin.

Heavweight Baker also earned a personal victory by defeating Al Fortune, 9-5. Baker had lost and tied Fortune in two previous meetings. MacDonald, Rob White and Colling also won for the Lions. Mark Fabian, Leo Butera and Bill Morrissey were winners for the Tigers. The summaries:

Liz Natale takes mile in States

Newton North's sensational Elizabeth Natale added another jewel to her crown Saturday when she edged Waltham High's Julie LeClair by two seconds to capture the mile at the Girls' Division I State Track Meet at Harvard University.

Rated the No.1 high school miler in the country this month by Track and Field magazine, Natale was obviously the heavy favorite. Her winning time of 4:56.8 wasn't one of her fastest, but it was still enough to beat LeClair, who became the first Hawk girl to ever run under five minutes when she recorded a 4:58.9.

Third-place went to Newton North's Amy Fitzgibbons in a personal best of 5:12.3.

Natale and LeClair were the class of the field from the opening gun. Natale went out to a 15-yard lead early, but LeClair came back to her along the midway point. But Natale, who has run 4:52 miles in the past, turned it on down the stretch and held off the persistent LeClair.

The meet was won easily by North Quincy with 60 points. Second spot went to Beverly (32) with Brookline (30), Reading (24) and Andover (19) rounding out the top five. Newton North finished sixth with 18 points and Waltham was eighth with 12 points.

Waltham's Anne-Marie Feeley took fourth in the two-mile, clocking an 11:17.7. Peabody's Gina Braz nosed her out for third by two-tenths of a second.

Fifth in the 50-yard hurdles was Newton North's Amy Merritt while Waltham's Mary Mooney ran a school-record 1:31.07 in the 600 despite not placing.

Waltham's Dot Faulstich (1000) and Laura Linnehan (mile) also ran fine races but did not place.

Newton North's Emily Gaudet did a personal best of 2:49.0 in the 1000 for eighth place.

Five of the top eight schools came from the Suburban League, a fact Waltham coach Joe Tranchita was quick to point out. "That should prove that the Suburban League has the toughest track teams in the state," said Tranchita.

And it also, undoubtedly, has the finest miler — Elizabeth Natale.

Camp Academy summers at Babson

Camp Academy, a Newton-based day camp for children 3-13, will conduct its summer program at the Babson Recreation Center for the next three years.

The camp was started by John Cloninger, the present director, two years ago. Since then, more than 600 children have attended. Last summer, over 350 boys and girls participated in one or more of the three week camp sessions.

The camp is sports oriented, but stresses trying and not winning. While there are team competitions in some activities, emphasis is placed on Red Cross swimming instruction, gymnastics, dance, arts and crafts and other non-competitive efforts.

A separate cam designed for pre-school children will operate con-currently with the camp for older children. The pre-school program will feature swimming, games, nature studies and music.

Cloninger is currently planning an open house for Camp Academy at the Babson Recreation Center in April as an opportunity for interested parents to meet his staff.

Nick Valaes had 12 points to lead the Short Sets to an exciting 13-15, 18-16, 8-6 victory over BKQ in a Newton Men's Volleyball League contest at the Hawthorn Gym Monday night.

Tony Oreant had 11 points to lead the Tigers to a 15-12, 15-5 triumph over On The Road. Scott Bolio had six points for On The Road.

Phil Sifford had 11 points to lead Capello to a 15-9, 15-10 victory over the Spikers. Steve Dunn had eight points for the winners. Dave Brown had eight points for the Spikers.

Steve McNiece had 12 points to pace the Brews Brothers to a 15-11, 15-11 victory over the Nets.

Eagles greet Pat Ewing

NEWTON, Mass. (UPI) — It may have been Patrick Ewing's homecoming but John Bagley made certain the smiles were for family and friends only.

Bagley, Boston College's brilliant junior guard, scored 26 points to lead the Eagles to an 80-71 victory Wednesday night over Ewing and No. 12 Georgetown. It was a win ripe with irony, for Ewing did score a career-high 23 points in the gym where Boston College followers had hoped he'd be playing his college ball.

"Pat's a nice kid," said BC coach Tom Davis. "There's no ill feeling that he chose Georgetown. The recruiting was honest and a he's a fine kid."

Still, the Boston College fans greeted Ewing's introduction with a shower of newspapers, an old college gimmick intended to tell the player that no one cares. It couldn't have been more false.

The electricity in the air crackled with each Boston College basket and when a frustrated Ewing was hit with a techincal foul in the first half. The Eagles had some sparks of their own, shooting 77 percent in the first half and never looking back.

"This was something we felt we owed ourselves," said Bagley, who hit on 6-of-9 from the floor and 14-of-15 from the line. "We showed we're capable of competing with anyone. We wanted to show them we're still a good team."

Boston College improved to 14-8 and 5-6 in the Big East. It snapped Georgetown's six-game winning streak and knocked the Hoyas (20-6 and 8-4) out of first place in the conference. It also left Georgetown coach John Thompson a bit upset he had to contend with 4,400 BC crazies at cozy Roberts Center.

"We sacrificed home games at our gym to play in the Capital Centre, I can't see why this one wasn't played at Boston Garden," Thompson said. "You can't afford to get behind in this gym ... they've got to get out. We made a commitment to play in bigger arenas and we did it. It's a conference problem."

Thompson said Ewing's performance "was better than I expected, given that it was his first homecoming. The guy has had more firsts this year than anyone in America." Thompson requested Ewing not be interviewed.

Although Ewing played well, Georgetown did little to support its lofty ranking. The Hoyas rarely passed to Ewing in the the first half and trailed 43-31 at intermission. They never got back into the game in the second half, closing the gap to seven just once.

"We did everything well," said BC's Davis. "We played great defense and ran the break as well as we could. It was a total team performance."

Sherry Levin hits 1000 for Crusaders

Sherry Levin of Newton shattered the 1,000-point scoring barrier for the second time in her basketball career this past weekend.

The Holy Cross sophomore reached the magic figure Saturday at Worcester as the Crusader women's team chalked up a 63-54 victory over Southeastern Connecticut In the MAIAW Tournament. Sherry paced the winning attack with 34 points and brought her collegiate career total to 1,005.

The 5-9 forward-guard attained the 1,000 mark in the closing minutes of the game when she sank a free throw. Play was interrupted and she was presented the game ball on the spot.

Levin scored more than 1,000 career points at Newton North High School before graduating in 1980.

Last winter, as a Holy Cross freshman, Sherry tossed in 513 points. Thus far this season she has 493 and is averaging 24.7 per game. She is ranked among the top 10 players in all three divisions of women's basketball.

Levin is also leading the country in free throws and has converted 149 of 172 attempts for an 86 percent mark.

Holy Cross has a winning streak of seven games and has posted 18 wins in 20 games.

Arrows beaten at buzzer

St. Sebastian's was victimized by a buzzer-beater in a 48-46 loss to Governor Dummer Friday at the South Byfield School in an Independent School League contest.

Andre LaFleur's jumper with three seconds left hit the rim and bounced right back to him at the top of the key. LaFleur sank his next shot at the buzzer to give Governor Dummer the victory.

The loss left St. Sebastian's with a 9-3 record in the league and 16-3 overall. The Arrows will meet Milton Academy on Wednesday.

Rivers had a chance to gain a tie with St. Sebastian's for first, but the Redmen suffered a 52-50 defeat to Nobles and Greenough. John Sims led the attack with 26 points.

Sims pumped in 10 of those points in the third quarter to power Rivers to a 39-33 lead after three quarters. Nobles was led by forward Bob Casey in a fourth quarter rally. Casey hit 10 of his 19 points in the final frame.

Rivers is now 9-4 in the league. The Redmen will host Groton on Wednesday.

The summaries:

Tiger and Waltham runners place in Class A competition

Platt was just edged out by Leo Connors of Peabody as the duo finished with the same time of 4:26.6. Platt took the lead at 3:30 mark, but Connors just caught him at the tape.

Newton North had two runners place in the mile. Senior George Fulk was fourth in 4:28.0 and senior Tom Carleo was sixth in 4:31.4. Paul Passavant was fifth in the 1,000. Leo Hunter placed fourth in the high jump.

Newton PeeWees red-hot

The Newton Pee Wee A hockey team rolled to their sixth victory in their last seven starts by breezing past Woburn, 4-1, Sunday in a Middlesex Youth Hockey League contest at Winchester.

The win by Newton avenges an early season, 3-1 loss to Woburn. Newton started out the season with a 2-8-1 record, but it has stormed back to an 18-13-3 record with a 16-5-2 mark since the start of 1982.

The players refusing to quit, parent support, improved skating and coaching have been the major reasons for the big turnaround.

Jay Cappello led the way for Newton with a goal in the first and second period. Doug Proia and Chris Pike scored in the third period to cement the victory for Newton.

Evert-Lloyd to defend title in Boston

Chris Evert-Lloyd, the top-ranked women's tennis player in the world, will return to defend her title in the 1982 Avon Championships of Boston, March 15-21, it was announced recently by Tournament Director Edy McGoldrick of Six Love Promotions.

Evert-Lloyd will top a field of 32 players in the $150,000 tournament which will be played at Boston University's Walter Brown Arena. The Sunday Championship finals are scheduled for the Boston Garden.

Also announced at a press conference held to detail the Boston Tourney was the naming of Evert-Lloyd as world champion by the International Tennis Federation for the third time in four years. This year's award was tightly contested by Tracy Austin and Martina Navratilova. In achieving the distinction, Evert-Lloyd won 73 of 79 matches and eight tournaments, including the 1981 Avon Championships last March and Wimbledon last July.

"I hope that beginning the 1982 season back in Boston will be a good omen for the coming year as well," said Chris. "I'll have to work hard to be competitive with the other women who've been playing on the Avon tour for a month already and I'm looking forward to the challenge."

Chamber head concerned

Businesses stung by taxes

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Calling it a "sleeping giant," Louis Songer of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce Wednesday criticized city assessors for planning to tax commercial, industrial and personal property (C.I.P.) at the greatest amount allowed by law.

Under the classification amendment, passed in 1979 by state lawmakers, cities and towns can opt to tax business properties up to 150 percent of their full and fair market value.

> 'Newton is not alone as a prime area. Some of the people with leases will pick up and go when their leases are up.' Louis Songer

The tax impact notices being mailed out to taxpayers this week reflect the full implementation of classification. The estimated tax rate for C.I.P. is $36.77 per $1,000 of assessed property compared to $22.10 for residential property.

Under classification C.I.P. would make up 24.7 percent or $18.1 million of the $73.5 total tax levy. Without classification, C.I.P. contributes 16.5 percent to the total tax levy or $12.1 million with the difference picked up by the residential section.

According to assessors, without classification, a $9.5 million increase in the tax burden (compared to the FY 1981 percentage of levy) would be bourne by the residential class. This would have caused residential tax bills to climb by $415 on the average compared to $152.

"Most people (small businessmen) don't understand what it is," noted Songer of classification. He said he has requested city assessors on three separate occasions to have a public meeting to explain to area businessmen classification.

"They have been reluctant to give us a date," said Songer. "Obviously in a community where residents pay 85 percent of the tax bill, they're going to favor residents."

"Even the most naive person can look at the assessments and see where the assessors are concerned," said Songer. "You can't tell me they are not going to risk repercussions if everyone pays at 100 percent."

Classification must be approved by the 24-member Board of Aldermen and Mayor Theodore Mann before it can be implemented. City Assessors hope to complete commercial revaluation and classification by Feb. 22.

"It's an economic, political and muncipal judgment," said Songer. "They have an obligation to address it. I want to see something that's fair."

"There should be somewhere between 150 and 100 percent that we can come to an agreement on," added Songer. "It doesn't seem right to me just on the face of it."

Alderman Robert Tennant, a business advocate, said that it's "extremely unfair that the weight (the tax burden) is going to be shifted toward business, especially the small businessman."

According to Songer, of the 98 cities and towns in Massachusetts that have received preliminary certification from the Department of Revenue, 14 communities have implemented certification and just six have done it to the maximum amount allowed by law.

Joseph Alexander, president of the Newton Taxpayers Association, noted that "by shifting tax burden to business, especially disproportionally, we may be hiding out costs."

"It (increased taxes) then becomes a cost of business to be wrapped up in the product," said Alexander. "I feel that by charging business more you're not avoiding taxes."

Asked Songer: "Do you take classification to the limit and what do you expect as a result?"

"Newton is not alone as a prime area," said Songer. "Some of the people with leases will pick up and go when their leases are up."

NCSC elects board and hears report

WEST NEWTON - John T. Eller, president of the Newton Community Service Centers, Inc., in his statement to NCSC's 75th annual corporation meeting called NCSC "Newton's undiscovered gem."

Citing a report done for NCSC by Effective Communications of Norwood, Eller said, "Newton people generally know our programs such as RSVP, Job Bank, the teenage youth centers, day care and even the court restitution program. However, they clearly do not know about NCSC, the sponsoring parent organization."

"President Reagan's decimation of federal funding for social services and Proposition 2 ½ locally now force NCSC, like every other nonprofit, out in the street to raise more private funds that than ever before. We can no longer rely on government grants and United Way. We can no longer be satisfied with word of mouth ratification among clients, or occasional advertisements, articles and brochures" Eller added.

NCSC must become better know among all Newton residents and businesses if we are going to raise the funds necessary to keep the programs alive which people need, know and like. It is the parent organization, NCSC, that they must know because its NCSC that makes the programs possible. To make NCSC known we must advertise and get the word out skillfully and quickly," Eller stated.

Eller in thanking the corporation, the board, the staff and the clients for their work in helping him during his term cited Agency Executive Director Anthony Bibbo as one of the "most dedicated caring social service professionals" he has ever known.

Eller also called on the coporation to plan now what it wants NCSC to be five years from now. He recommended broadening its program advocacy stating "We work closely with Mayor (Theodore) Mann, Representative (Joseph) DeNucci, Senator (Jack) Backman and our other local state officials. They have been enormously helpful and supportive,"

The corporation elected new board members and the board elected new officers following the corporation meeting. The new officers and members include: Judge Monte Basbas, Fred R. Becker, Paul J. Burke, Maudyea Campbell, David B. Cooper, Phyllis Dangel, Joseph DeNucci, Helen Drinan, John Eller, Robert C. Jackson, Franklin Ollivierre, Alfred Smith, Virginia Taplin, Elizabeth Uehline, Alice Webber, Isabel Coleman, Audrey Cooper, Joan Harrington, Louise Hauser, Stephen P. Holme s, Lillian Jefferson and Howard A. Levine. Also Charles McMillian, James Waichioro Miller, Caryn Mofenson, Terry O'Halloran Stuart Solomon, Samuel A. Turner, Edward C. Newton votes ban on free cigarettes

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — The city has become the first community in the Commonwealth and third nationwide to ban the free distribution of tobacco products in public places.

With a surprising absence of pressure from the tobacco industry, the Board of Aldermen last week passed an ordinance that anti-smoking advocates hope will start a wave of restrictions on the free distribution of tobacco products for commercial purposes.

"Now that we have such a strong acceptance here in Newton, we hope that it will provide an inspiration to other communities in the Commonwealth ," noted Rita Addison, president of the Group Against Smoke Pollution (GASP).

Although some aldermen said they had yet to witness the distribution of cigarettes in Newton, Addison said free samples have been handed out at the Purity Supreme supermarket in Newtonville in the past.

The ordinance comes on the heels of a law aldermen passed last spring which requires public restaurants with 50 or more seats to set aside 15 percent of their seats for nonsmokers.

Newton was the first city in Massachusetts to pass a law protecting the rights of nonsmokers in public restaurants. An attempt to provide non-smoking areas in Cambridge restaurants failed by a 5 to 4 council vote in December 1981. The Cambridge law would have required restaurants to set aside 25 percent of their seats for nonsmokers and banned the free distribution of cigarette samples.

However, as Addison noted, the Cambridge City Council and the Boston City Council in December 1980 were heavily pressured by tobacco industry lobbyists not to pass such an ordinance.

"There was intensive tobacco lobbying in both councils," added Addison, "and neither showed up here." She said GASP intends to go back to both Cambridge and Boston to press for nonsmokers' legislation.

According to GASP, the tobacco industry spent more than $64 million on sampling in 1979, up 466 percent from the $11.8 million spent in 1970.

Alderman Edward Richmond, who has been at the forefront of the local movement to protect the rights of nonsmokers, said he will review the results of the city's 15-percent ordinance and will consider expanding it to 25 percent.

Richmond said he would want to "look at the results of the ordinance to see if it has been successful."

Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minnesota each passed laws in 1979 to ban the distribution of cigarette sampling. In the two and one-half years since the laws' passage, according to GASP attorney Edward Sweda, the tobacco industry has yet to challenge the constitutionality of the ordinance.

GASP has said it will provide Newton with free use of its attorneys to defend the just enacted distribution law if challenged by the tobacco industry.

Kids can't get enough of this camping

By Donna Lombardi
Staff Writer

NEWTON — On a scale of 1-10, local teenagers and their parents rate Bob Acetta's camping trips 1,000,000!

"It always exceeds their expectations," says Acetta, who combined his educational degrees and passion for the outdoors to create a special camping experience for young people.

"The best compliment I ever got," says Acetta about his program, North American Tours, "came from the father of a kid from Newton Centre, who said, "I sent you a boy, but you sent back a man."

Acetta, 29, has for the last five years lived and worked at Bentley College in Waltham, where he is Area Coordinator of Resident Life. But when the normal academic year ends, Acetta packs up his camping gear and goes west.

With two assistants and a pack of adventurous teenagers, Acetta heads for Denver, Colorado, to start off a colorful and educational 6-week vacation through several northwestern states and part of Canada, which includes stops at 12 national parks and nine major cities.

"The goal of the program is to see many different areas, to broaden their horizons," says Acetta.

The campers enjoy something of a luxurious camping experience, participating in everything from bicycling along some of the nation's highest waterfalls, eating homemade pie in a Canadian tea house, swimming, not sinking!, in the Great Salt Lake and wizzing down the Alpine Slide in Utah.

The program is especially designed for girls and boys 14-16 years of age, who, Acetta feels, are at an in between age when it comes to camping. They're too old for regular camps but too young to explore on their own. "Many have been to camp before but are tired of the routine," says Acetta. So he offers a trip where anxious teenagers who are bored with their surroundings, will see new places, and grow intellectually and socially. "There's a real educational focus."

Acetta says he wants everyone to enjoy the adventure. So he tells the campers, even before they plan to go along, that no one should ruin anyone else's fun.

"I tell them that certain behavior is expected. I demand that they show respect for one another."

With B.A. in psychology from Ithica College, Ithica, New York, a master's degree in education from the University of Maine at Orono, and years of camping and outdoor experience behind him, Acetta is well-equiped for 6-weeks with a bunch of adventure-seeking teens. He's worked at several camps in the last 15 years and always camped when he was a youngster. "I know what kids like," says Acetta, who recalls that, "I sort of fell in love with camping when I was 10-years-old."

As an extra plus for those who join Acetta is that he's already seen all the places that they're about to see.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

CREATIVE HOME FINANCING

If you're in the market for a home of your own, you're probably in the market for a home loan, too. A conventional mortgage is usually the first kind that comes to mind, but other alternatives do exist.

These include • privately insured loans • GI-insured loans • FHA/HUD-insured loans • Farmers Home Administration loans • urban "homestead" loans • "house-to-house" loans • variable interest rate loans • graduated payment mortgages and • HUD's subsidized homeownership program.

To learn about these possibilities, talk to a member of the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF REALTORS® before you start looking. REALTORS® are real estate professionals, and forms of financing are part of their expertise. They can tell you what's available in your community, and how you can qualify.

Restoring antique woodstoves

Her 100-acre home deep in the Maine woods is believed to be the largest antique woodstove restoring operation in the nation. What began as a sideline to her husband's steel fabrication shop is now the primary income source, with more than 800 stoves sold each year to buyers as far away as Panama.

Mrs. Bryant, a warm and energetic woman, walks about the premises in a frumpy plaid work shirt, talking to customers and workmen.

"I'd rather do this than secretarial work," she said.

In constant motion, she always has time to explain the history of a stove or tell an anecdote, such as the one about the Texan who came by and asked for "the two most expensive stoves you've got." After receiving the first two, the Texan quickly phoned and ordered three more.

Bea's domain includes an antique woodstove junkyard that she calls the world's largest, with some 1,000 rusted carcasses piled in a field. And she has a dazzling collection of fully restored stoves that would make a museum curator green with envy.

For her efforts in re-popularizing wood heat culture, Mrs. Bryant, 51, was named this year as outstanding person in the woodstove industry by the Wood Heat Alliance.

She, her family and 25 of her most prized antiques were flown to New Orleans for an international woodstove convention at the Superdome.

"Those new manufacturers had never seen stoves like I have. They didn't even know that these exist," she said.

Mrs. Bryant's business began 10 years ago when she sold her first stove to make some extra cash.

"I had eight kids, and when they started to go to college, I needed some money," she said.

But her interest in stoves began long before.

"I started collecting them 31 years ago, just because I liked the artwork," she said.

By the early 1970s, when people began burning wood to save on fuel costs, Mrs. Bryant already had a barnful of hardware. So began a Yankee business venture that is appealing to both the common sense and the imagination of people across the country.

She gets stoves from all across New England, where they are found stashed in barns and cellars often turn up at yard sales.

Once a stove is plucked from the boneyard, it takes between 15 and 25 hours work to be made ready for sale. The stoves are sandblasted, parts are replaced or repaired and the nickel-plating is refurbished.

The result is a fully operational antique that retails for less than nondescript, mass-produced modern stoves, which are most often made in Scandanavia. The antiques usually sell for between $400 and $500, but the price of one went as high as $2,000.

I could probably get more for them but I'd rather see a housewife have a stove at home and use it," she said.

During its heyday 100 years ago, the stove industry was a huge and fast-growing business, much like the computer industry is today. Since there was no way to hide a stove, every effort was made to beautify it. The result was unsurpassed iron artistry.

Carving models out of mahogany, the craftsmen of yore adorned the hulking iron boxes and cylinders with garlands of flowers, gothic latticework, nickel-plated skirts, embossed doors and elaborate finials, or decorative crowning ornaments.

The height of a visit to Bryant's fiefdom is a tour of her museum, a colonial clapboard house across the street from the shop. It is, quite possibly, the most valuable single collection of antique stoves anywhere.

Victory is sweet

DALLAS (UPI) — Arley Thomas Jr.'s victory was sweet and he owes it all to the letter of the law.

A typographical error in an indictment which meant to charge Thomas with possession of a derivative of "coca" actually charged him with possessing a derivative of "cocoa."

State District Judge Jack Hampton said Monday he had no choice but to acquit Thomas.

"I can't send a guy to the pen for possession of chocolate, can I?" Hampton said. "It (the indictment) had one 'o' that shouldn't have been there, but it changed the meaning of the whole thing."

Prosecutors wanted to convict Thomas on charges of possession of cocaine, a derivative of the coca leaf.

Judge Hampton quickly acquitted Thomas after a chemist testified the cocaine confiscated from Thomas' apartment was not derived from the substance alleged in the indictment — "cocoa."

Thomas still faces a second cocaine charge which resulted from another arrest.

Defense attorney James M. Murphy said he noticed the faulty wording while researching defense strategy.

"I had read it (the indictment) before, and I thought something was wrong with it, but it just didn't click," Murphy said. He said he was both surprised and relieved when he spotted the extra 'o' in coca.

"Our law places a burden on the state to dot all the 'i's and cross all the 't's, and if you don't do it, you can't deprive a person of his freedom," he said.

A new species of duck

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Move over Daffy, Donald, Huey, Louie and Dewey — a new species of duck has been discovered. It's stocky and can't fly, but it can "steam."

The discovery of the white-headed flightless steamer duck in Argentina was announced in the Nov. 25 issue of the University of Kansas Museum's Occasional Papers by natural history museum director Philip Humphrey and Max C. Thompson, a biology professor at Southwestern College in Winfield.

The last new species of the duck, goose and swan family was the Korean crested shelduck, identified from skins in 1917 after it had become extinct.

This new species — the 146th — is found among the rocks, kelp, seals and penguins at Puerto Melo on the coast of Argentina's Chibut province, its finders say.

The steamer, officially Tachyeres leucocephalus, is stocky bird endowed with a heavy head and thick neck, a body of battleship grey and bright yellow or yellow-orange legs.

Taking turns handling money

NEW YORK (UPI) — For family financial survival, a banking newsletter recommends a policy of "each one teach one."

Spouses should alternate in balancing the family checkbook and handling all other family money matters in anticipation of the day when illness or death leaves one with the responsibilities full time, says an article in Consumer Views, a monthly newsletter for consumers published by Citibank.

Husband and wife should work together to organize a vital papers file, with all the documents the survivor and executor will need to carry out instructions in wills and handle financial affairs, the newsletter says.

Vital papers include birth and marriage certificates, Social Security numbers, copies of wills, insurance policies, employer benefit papers, loan and credit card agreements and other bank records.

The 'iron man' can relax

By Steven Burke
Staff Writer

NEWTON — Paul Daley sat back and relaxed Sunday afternoon, beer in hand, and watched about 600 world class athletes, including himself, compete in a superhuman test of endurance on television.

Daley, a 37-year-old third term Newton alderman, was one of 550 athletes that finished the "Iron Man World Triathlon" that was held in Kona, Hawaii on Feb. 6 and televised nationally on ABC's Wide World of Sports Sunday. The athletes swam 2.4 miles in the ocean, bicycled 112 miles over lava fields and ran a 26 mile marathon in 110 degree heat.

Daley said he finished the extraordinary event 419th overall in approximately 17 hours. Daley, who has been running for five years, competes in about 12 marathons a year.

The grueling test of physical prowess began in the cold ocean water at 7:30 a.m. and ended in the Hawaiian moonlight. Jim McKay, host of Wide World, called the competition one of the "most grueling and agonizing" events in the world. Another ABC commentator called it an "event so extreme it almost defies description."

Daley watched the competition with a few friends and laughed as the first image of the staggering event came on the screen. "I'm right there," he joked. "Right there."

"Boy is that water cold," he added. Later as he watched the bicycling and marathon legs, Daley frequently repeated: "Oh is it hot out there!"

After months of training and waiting, Daley said it was a "relief" to start the Triathlon. "I was flying," he said, remembering the start of the race. "I was screaming. The adrenalin was so pumped up."

Daley finished the "rough" swimmming leg in about three hours battling three to six feet chopping waves.

How did Daley feel after taking a quick shower and changing into his biking gear? "I felt great," he recalled. "I had swam, but I never trained for swimming or bike portions. I felt really strong."

For Daley, the toughest part of the three leg event was the 112 mile bicycle race. Twenty miles of the race was uphill. It took Daley approximately 12 hours to finish the bike race and it was only after two flat tires that had to be fixed with a small repair kit.

The athletes, who had to compete with the strong winds and hills, was over lava fields created by volcanic eruptions.

"I spent as much time on the bike as some of these people spend in on the whole thing," he said.

He said that the marathon was a pleasure to run after the tough bicycle race. Indeed, Daley showed that the marathon was his forte finishing with a strong time of just over three hours.

The competition is an amateur event and competing athletes are not provided a salary for competing or hotel accomodations. "You better not go there looking for some bucks," Daley noted. "It's all personal."

Daley watched in silence the images of collapsed bodies faltering under the strain. One athlete was shown being carried on a stretcher and countless others aided by emergency personnel. "It ain't easy babe," said Daley. "It's a long day."

Court okays hearing on legal fees taxpayer suit

By Steven Burke

CAMBRIDGE — A ruling by a Middlesex Superior Court Judge Wednesday has paved the way for a court hearing on a taxpayer's suit aimed at preventing the city from paying a $10,000 bill for Mayor Theodore Mann's private attorney.

The $10,000 was approved last December for Mann's defense in a $1.1 million lawsuit filed by his former secretary - Diana Ossinger. The taxpayer's suit was initiated by a Newton businessman, Vincent Filippone, and 28 other residents.

Judge Charles Alberti Wednesday denied a motion by Mann's Boston attorney to dismiss the case and refused to act on a "summary judgement" motion by a city attorney seeking an immediate ruling against taxpayers.

Alberti also did not act on a motion by an attorney for the taxpayers seeking an immediate ruling against city payment of the $10,000 tab.

Ossinger, Mann's former secretary for eight years until she was fired in March 1980 after a police investigation, has charged that she was illegally terminated and is seeking damages. The West Newton woman was acquitted in October 1980 of stealing $24,000 from Mann over nearly a four year period by cashing his paychecks at the City Hall Treasurer's Office.

Arthur Goldsmith, an attorney representing Filippone and other plaintiffs, called the decision a "major victory" for taxpayers.

"We have prevailed at this stage of the proceedings," said Goldsmith. "We overcame their motions to dismiss the case." Goldsmith said the ruling by Alberti makes way for a court hearing on "the merits" of the case.

"There are some serious legal and factual questions that must be resolved," said Goldsmith. "He (Judge Alberti) ruled that there are factual determinations that must be made."

City Attorney Kathleen Torres said she was "disappointed" by Alberti's decision. "I don't think it is a strong statement by the judge," she noted. "We're ready and I still feel our position is strong."

Torres said the city may seek a "speedy trial" on the taxpayer's suit.

Edward Barshak, Mann's attorney, took over the case last summer after City Solicitor Daniel Funk refused to represent Mann because of "a conflict of interest." Funk cited the possibility that he could be called as a witness in the case. He also speculated that Mann could sue the city for the missing $24,000.

Torres has argued that city is clearly required to pay for Mann's private attorney under an ordinance insuring municipal officials for up to $1 million in civil rights suit brought against them in the "scope" of their employment.

Goldsmith, however, has argued that Mann was "grossly negligent, willful and malicious" in his firing of Ossinger and is therefore not entitled to payment of his legal bills.

Goldsmith and the city have stipulated that no payments will be made to Barshak until the dispute is settled in court. Goldsmith said he was uncertain how soon a hearing may be held on the taxpayer's suit.

Torres said it was unfortunate that the suit was not dismissed becaue it is costing taxpayer's money. "It is definitely costing the city money when I am not free to work on more pressing matters."

Hospital plans Feb. 28 open house

LOWER FALLS - An open house for the public will be held for Newton-Wellesley Hospital's new inpatient psychiatric unit, Three-Central, on Sunday, Feb. 28, from 2 to 4 p.m.

The hospital is inviting the community to tour the new facility, the opening of which represents a significant step for a community hospital. According to hospital officials, in opening the new 24-bed inpatient psychiatric unit, NWH becomes the first, private, nonprofit community hospital in Massachusetts to assume the responsibility for admitting all patients with acute psychiatric illness, regardless of their ability to pay, who reside in the hospital's catchment area (Newton, Wellesley, Weston and Needham).

Free parking is available for the Sunday Open House, and refreshments will be served. For further information call the NWH Public Relations Office at 964-2800, Ext. 2241.

Subcommittee turns down funding request

NEWTON — A proposal for a park on Beacon Street, including five playing fields, tennis courts and a basketball court, was denied by the aldermanic Public Facilities Committee by a 4 to 3 vote Wednesday night.

The committee denied an appropriation of $500,000 to complete the construction of the park. The aldermanic Finance Committee gave unanimous support to the project with a straw vote two weeks ago.

Opponents argued that fiscal squeeze imposed by Proposition 2½ and further cutbacks in municipal departments prevent the cost of maintaining the park.

Supporters, however, argued that the city was giving up a golden opportunity to turn the former leaf dump into much needed recreational facilities.

Furthermore, supporters stressed that the city would receive $250,000 from a federal matching program to defer the cost of the park. The city has received word that unless the project is completed within the 1982 construction season the matching grant could be lost.

The city could also be forced to reimburse the federal government a $53,000 share in acquisition cost for the 11 acres slated for a park since 1970. The city received the federal funds contingent on the development of the area as park facilities.

The proposed recreation area would include a little league field, four soccer fields, two tennis courts and a basketball court.

Recreation Commissioner Russell Halloran told aldermen that it will cost his department an additional $3,770 per year to maintain the new park. Halloran would be forced to maintain the park with no additional maintenance personnel. The Recreation Commissioner is facing a possible personnel cut in this year's budget.

"It is going to be very difficult," said Halloran. "I'm not trying to kid anybody. We are going to do our best." Halloran said the park would provide much needed recreational facilties that would be used for a large number of youth and adult league programs.

The funds for the project would come from an account for the sale of city real estate which can be used to acquire other property and for energy retrofit and several other programs.

Newton South plans a very special production

By Sarah Clayton
Staff Writer

NEWTON — For the first time at the secondary school level, special-needs and non-handicapped students will perform side by side in a musical. What better production for this happy collaboration than "Annie."

Teachers connected with the show say that everyone develops a "spirit of adventure" since this kind of production has something other than theatrical perfection as its goal. But, imperfection never looked so good.

The show, which will be performed Feb. 26 at Newton South High, is called an "integrated" production — a formal way of saying this version of the upbeat musical will be improvised for a cast of special-needs and non-handicapped students.

Out of the total cast of 30, half of the performers are special-needs students and the other half are non-handicapped students who are members of South High's Concert Choir.

The "outstanding" choice to play the optimistic curly-topped orphan is Tina Dirkson, a 17-year-old Down's Syndrome student who attends the Newton South High Life Skills Class.

At a recent rehearsal, Tina not only sang some of the hits from the musical, but also waltzed with "Daddy Warbucks," the wealthy industrialist whose hard heart is softened by the orphan he eventually adopts. Paul Sherman, a member of the Concert Choir, plays the part of Warbucks.

While many of the roles are treated as partnerships where non-handicapped students reinforce performances by special-needs students, Tina performs solo.

Despite all of the hard work, Tina's performance seems effortless and she gives the character sparkle and personality. She may have even caught the theater bug.

"I love it!" she says enthusiastically of her role in the production.

Even with the use of partnerships, one of the directors of the show, Claire Kanter, says the problems of putting on a show with special-needs children are great.

"No matter how much we practice or rehearse, opening night is going to be an entirely new experience," Life Skills teacher Gerald Beloin says.

"There is no way you can get perfection," Kanter says with a smile.

"And, I'm going to tell you, the people will love it," Beloin says emphatically.

Kanter, a music specialist and consultant for special-needs children, says that in 1972 she worked with other special-needs teachers to present for the first time in Newton a show using only special-needs children.

The impact of the show on the Newton community, was "unreal," Kanter says.

"We put on five standing-room only performances," she recalls. "It was unreal. Newton woke up to the fact that these kids were here."

This production of "Oliver" with children from the Peabody School using the Spaulding Elementary School auditorium eventually made Kanter revamp her music program. She found that "Oliver" had been a terrific tool for teaching learning concepts to special-needs children.

But, real reason for doing the musical "was that it bothered me that these kids were always just being taken to passively see something," Kanter says.

Kanter and Beloin feel the benefits of an integrated production are also significant for the non-handicapped students who participate and their peers.

Kanter said that when the members of the Concert Choir were approached about performing in the show, many were reluctant and uncomfortable about the idea.

She agrees that the experience is not an easy one and that for most of the non-handicapped students who signed up, there was "an adjustment period."

Katy Motiey, a South High student who plays the part of Grace Farrell, Warbuck's personal secretary, says, "At first it was hard because we didn't know each other. I would be scared of them (the special-needs students) and it wasn't a good feeling."

"But, they're just like us. They're just people," she now says.

Another non-handicapped student, Jamie Korelitz, who plays one of the orphans, says, "If you feel like you're helping it makes you feel really good that you're in the show."

> 'No matter how much we practice or rehearse, opening night is going to be an entirely new experience.'
> Teacher Gerald Beloin

Kanter, a 19-year veteran of working with special-needs children, is as excited as many of the performers about the upcoming show and cannot say enough about it. For instance, she says Toren Hall the special-needs student who will play the piano Friday night, is legally blind, partially deaf and has autistic type behaviors.

"He is a child who came into the Newton system about six years ago from Fernald. He had this remarkable talent of playing anything on the piano that he heard," Kanter says in amazement.

Toren, who has performed with an accompanist in John Hancock Hall before 900 people, will be playing Friday night and "just using his ear" with a talented pianist from Newton, Marjorie Brodsky, who volunteered for the show.

Brodsky's infant son, Joshua, also gets credits in the theatre bill since he will be along in a baby carrier while she performs.

The show features special-needs students from both the South High Life Skills Class and the Brown Junior High Learning Center. Assisting Kanter with directing the production is Nancy Beardall, a movement and dance therapist. Beloin is assisted by fellow Life Skills teachers, Tony Principe and Katherine St. Clair.

The show will start at 8 p.m. Friday in the Newton South High auditorium and tickets are $2.

School board eyes paper use

reports on curriculum, enrollment and other areas has increased "geometrically" each year.

Lillian Radlo, assistant to Superintendent Fink, said the 7-percent increases were based on anticipated inflation in the the cost of materials and reproduction.

"My question is why is this account increased this year?" Mann stressed. "I really think that paper usage should be analyzed a bit for next year. I don't think we're getting any more reports."

In 1980 the School Committee's expenditure for photocopying materials was $4,491. For next year, the account is set at $6,920, a $452 increase over 1982.

The thickness of minutes of School Committee meetings shrank noticeably this year since over $7,000 was saved by laying off the stenographer who used to write lengthy reports of the minutes for all meetings. Yet, a 7-percent increase (which totals $174) is requested for the School Committee account containing paper, supplies and subscriptions to educational publications.

Reflecting a 36-percent overall cut in secretarial staff in the schools during the last five years, the number of secretaries working at the Education Center for the central administration staff has been cut from 44 in 1977 to 27.1 this year. Superintendent Fink has recommended no further cuts in central administration secretarial help.

The number of central staff administrators has also dropped from 9.6 in 1977 to seven people for this year, and holding.

Despite these cutbacks and the overall shrinking enrollment, the amount set aside for stationary, paper for reports and general office supplies for the central administration of the School Department has increased from $11,308 in 1977 to a recommended $27,564, a figure which represents a $1,803 increase over the current year.

The cost of photocopying done by the central administration staff has increased from $4,030 in 1980 to around $7,800 for next year.

The School Committee will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at Bigelow Junior High and Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. at the Education Center, 100 Walnut St., to continue budget discussions.

First stop smoking class graduates

WEST NEWTON - On Thursday, Jan. 28, the Newton Health Department graduated its first stop smoking class. All nine students who originally registered, completed the eight hour program, cosponsored with the American Cancer Society. Four class members successfully reached their goal and quit smoking and the remaining five have cut back significantly the number of cigarettes smoked.

Equally as important, all students gained insights into their smoking behavior and learned techniques for stopping. A follow-up study will be conducted in a year to check up on the participants continued success.

This smokers' liberation program has been developed by the American Cancer Society and is led by a trained facilitator. The goals, in addition to quitting, is to offer group support and self-awareness of smoking habits. A variety of quitting techniques are taught and members can adopt the best one for their needs and life style.

This class was one of the health department's "New Years Resolution" programs. Another program will be held in the spring, tentatively scheduled for May, so that Newton residents can start off the summer on a healthy note. Call the Newton Health Department at 552-7058. Cold Springs park plan eyed

By Jonathan Greenspan
Staff Writer

NEWTON — A proposed recreation area on Beacon Street which will cost $500,000, half federally funded, has received an initial go ahead from the aldermanic Finance Committee.

The facility, which would be located across from the Newton Highlands' cemetery, includes a Little League field, three multi-purpose fields, two tennis courts and a basketball court. The architectural plans also call for lanscape buffers from abutting homes and 50 parking spaces.

The committee voted 7 to 1 Monday to approve a $250,000 appropriation for the Cold Springs Park project. If approved by the 24-member board of aldermen, the appropriation will be taken from the sale of surplus building account, funds specifically earmarked for the acquisition of capital assets.

The Mann administration has been pushing for the city funding because of the possibility of losing the $250,000 in matching funds previously promised by the federal government. The city had received word from state officials that unless the project is completed within the 1982 construction season the matching grant could be lost.

Furthermore, Newton could be forced to reimburse the federal government its $53,000 share in acquistion costs. The city acquired portions of the park in 1970 with the federal funds contingent on development of the area as a recreation facility.

According to Recreation Commissioner Russell J. Halloran, the annual operating costs to the city for the maintenance of the facility would be about $3,770.

Alderman Paul Coletti, the lone dissenting vote, noted that the city recently took $610,000 from surplus cash to fix the roofs of several muncipal buildings. The surplus money claims Coletti could have been used in another area while the surplus building account funds could have been used for the roof repairs.

"There are alternatives," said Coletti of the juggling of funds. "I just wanted to make the committee aware."

Aldermen against: Paul Coletti.

BOARD OF ASSESSORS
Harold J. Brady R.E.S. Chairman
Robert A. Palmer
Mary E. Champagne

Dear Property Owner:

Chapter 797 of the Acts of 1979, as well as numerous decisions of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, require that all Massachusetts cities and towns value taxable real estate and personal property at full and fair cash value (100% market value).

Based upon a directive from the Massachusetts Department of Revenue, the City of Newton initiated a city-wide property revaluation program in the summer of 1980. This program was subsequently accelerated in the spring of 1981 in order for the City to move into full compliance with Proposition 2 1/2 in FY1982 (July 1, 1981 - June 30, 1982).

The preliminary results of the city-wide revaluation were turned over to the Massachusetts Department of Revenue for review and evaluation. The staff of the Department of Revenue's Bureau of Local Assessment conducted a field audit of the data, appraisal methodologies, and tentative values which have been generated as a result of revaluation. On the basis of their audit findings, the Commissioner of Revenue granted the City preliminary value certification for all residential property.

The purpose of this communication is to inform you of the tentative new assessment which has been calculated for your property. To assist you in evaluating what revaluation actually means to you in tax terms, a comparison of actual 1981, and estimated 1982 taxes has been included on the enclosed "Notice of Tentative Change in Property Assessment." Estimated 1982 taxes for your property have been calculated on the basis of a total FY1982 tax levy of $73.5 million, which is unchanged from FY1981. An estimated classified tax rate has been applied to your new assessment.

If, after reviewing your proposed assessment and estimated taxes, you desire an explanation of how the value on your property was determined, pleased call Robert J. Finnegan and Associates, Inc., the City's Revaluation Contractor, at 552-7331 Monday thru Friday, 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., to arrange an appointment. At that meeting you will have an opportunity to review all data used in valuing your property, and any additional clarifying information which you may be able to offer will be taken into consideration before a final value is placed upon your property. Due to the large number and wide variety of property types in Newton, effective valuation explanations can only be offered in personal meetings where all appropriate data is available for review by the property owner. Therefore, we will not be able to either discuss your new assessment or provide information about it over the telephone.

At the conclusion of the public review phase of revaluation, the Board of Assessors must submit any revised valuations to the State Department of Revenue for final approval. Once this approval is received, actual 1982 tax bills, reflecting the new values and classified tax rates will be generated. It is anticipated that tax bills will be mailed in April, 1982. This bill will include a calculation of total taxes due, less your fall 1981 estimated tax payment, and any appropriate exemptions which you may qualify for.

If you are not satisfied with the final valuation as indicated on your actual tax bill, you may file an abatement application with the Board of Assessors within 30 days. If you believe that you qualify for a statutory exemption and have not filed for it, you have 90 days from the issuance of the tax bill to file an exemption form. Finally, we wish to remind you that as a taypayer you are entitled to full appeal rights under Massachusetts law.

All Savers concept began right here

The nationwide All Savers Account that began Oct. 1, and was part of President Reagan's overall tax package has received more initial coast to coast bank marketing and media publicity than any other banking product in recent history.

A little known fact is that the idea was created in January of 1980 as part of a Home Town Bank planning session in Newton. It was agreed by the senior officer team present at that meeting that a more competitive savings instrument was vital to the future of the Thrift Industry. W. Patrick Lentell, vice president of the bank and Richard E. Bolton, president and chairman of the board, worked [illegible] ether close-ly in trying to devise a [illegible] would be beneficial to both [illegible] the bank in their a [illegible] new tax-free [illegible] t of the [illegible] Bill in- [illegible] Presi- [illegible] Bank [illegible] f an [illegible] He [illegible] er [illegible] nd. Bolton was now president of the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League and had also been appointed to the Legislative Committee, the Taxation Sub-Committee and Political Liason Committee of the United States League for Savings Associations. At that time, there was serious question if such an account would go beyond the "real tax loss" parameters that would come before Congress as part of the overall Economic Tax Recovery Act. In addition, questions as to the positive benefits for the consumer and the depository institutions were being privately debated.

Bolton was successful in convincing the Directors of the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League to underwrite the cost of developing an Econometric Model. THE RECIPE FOR A GREAT BRUNCH.

Bring the whole family this Sunday for the best brunch value in Greater Boston from 9:30 am to 2 pm.

RICHARD W. SEWALL
LOUIS P. DeANGELIS

We want to take heart defects out of the nursery.

It almost breaks your heart to see it. She's two days old and there's a question about a hole in her heart. She's fortunate. Something can be done about it. Each year 25,000 infants are born with heart defects which can disable them for life.

The American Heart Association is fighting to reduce this form of early death and disability with research, professional and public education, and community service programs.

But more needs to be done. You can help us save young lives by sending your dollars today to your local Heart Association, listed in your telephone directory.
